WILSON PLANS TO TELL CRISIS IN CONGRESS

Arming or Convoy of U. S. Craft Likely to Be the Solution.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—President Wilson contemplates going before congress next week to ask specific authority to employ the armed forces of the nation for the protection of Americans and American ships from German submarines.

The plans for such protection which the president has under advisement include the arming of American passenger liners and freighters to repel submarine attacks and the convoying of American ships through the submarine war zones with naval craft.

The president, however, is represented by his advisers today as being loath to direct the invocation of such protective measures without the express approval of congress.

CAUSES FOR RELUCTANCE.

Germany, through what are regarded as officially inspired press dispatches, has intimated that German submarines will be compelled to sink armed American ships without warning.

Germany, in instructions to the captains of German merchantmen in American ports to disable their ships and in the proposed protocol covering the contingencies of war, gives evidence of the conviction that her course will precipitate hostilities.

The president not only desires to avoid any step that may anger Germany but prefers that any employment of force to protect American rights shall be authorized by congress, the sole war making power.

EXACT COURSE IN DOUBT.

Administration officials are uncertain tonight whether the president, when he goes before congress, will propose a specific course, such as the arming or convoying of American ships, or will merely lay the situation before the two houses for such action as they see fit to take.

The house has given evidence of widespread opinion among its members that the president ought to refer the question to congress in precisely this manner.

On the other hand, the president is being strongly urged by some advisers to exercise his own authority to give protection to American ships. It is contended that if congress directs the arming of American ships, either with or without the president's recommendation of that course, the action emanating from the war making power might be interpreted by Germany as a warlike move.

EXPLAINS TO SENATORS.

President Wilson journeyed to the capitol shortly after 5 o'clock and conferred with Senators Tillman and Swanson of the naval affairs committee, Simmons of the finance committee, Pomerene of the interstate commerce committee, Overman of the fiduciary committee, and Hitchcock of the foreign relations committee.

The president told these senators frankly he was perplexed as to what course he should follow. He intimated that in the event war does not come before the adjournment of congress on March 4 congress should either empower him to act for the preservation of American rights or else leave the matter in abeyance.

In the latter case, he said, he would not act under any conditions without summoning the new congress into session for advice and direction. This latter course he wishes to avoid, he said, because of the uncertainty as to the organization of the next house.

OPPOSED TO BEING ALLY.

The senators told the president they thought it would be an easy matter to get a resolution through the senate empowering him to use the armed forces of the United States to defend American rights on the seas. They also said congress unquestionably would vote him sufficient money to carry out any defensive program he might adopt.

On the other hand, they said there is a strong sentiment in congress against participation by the United States in the European war as an ally of the allies.

Although Germany, in the opinion of the president, has not committed an "overt act," the question of protecting American ships is becoming a pressing

DR. SCHUETTLER, SON OF CHIEF, BEATEN, ROBBED

Bandits with a blasé disregard for places or persons robbed Dr. Arthur Frederick Schuettler, son of the chief of police, at Sheridan road and Sunnyside avenue last evening.

Not only was Dr. Schuettler relieved of a valuable case of surgical instruments, money, and jewelry but the robbers concluded their mission by beating him with the butts of the revolvers. Dr. Schuettler, who only two days ago was discharged from the Ravenswood hospital, where he was operated on for appendicitis, was compelled to take to his bed again from the effects of his beating.

Police Comb North Side.

Immediately following upon the robbery the district, and, in fact, the whole territory north of the river, was filled with detectives, motorcycle policemen, and "minute men" armed with rifles.

This second contemptuous attack of robbers roused the entire police department to action. There had been no relaxation in the hunt for the thieves who pillaged the apartment of E. J. Brach in the building which also houses Mayor Thompson. Thus the safety of members of the families of the mayor and the chief have been jeopardized within two days.

Dr. Schuettler was proceeding to his home at 821 Sunnyside avenue, about 6:30 o'clock. He was walking slowly, owing to the recent operation. A man sprang from the entrance of an apartment building and stopped him.

Puts Revolver at Side.

"Just as the first man leaped out," said Dr. Schuettler, "two more men jumped out of an automobile and ran up. One of them placed a revolver to my side, and I believe this was the most painful part of the performance. I had just been discharged from the hospital and the force of the revolver jammed into my side caused me great pain, just where the wound of the operation is situated.

"They also took a gold watch that had been given me by my father for Christmas. I disliked more than anything to lose the watch. Also they took $10. I am glad I had only a small amount of money.

"Just as they were about to leave one of the men struck me in the face with the butt of his revolver. They beat me and then ran to an automobile and escaped."

Dr. Schuettler was only able to reach his home and notify the police.

Chief Orders Out Reserves.

When Chief Schuettler learned of the holdup he immediately ordered out detective reserves over the city. He considered the attack a bold thrust at the police department itself and a more vigorous campaign than ever was launched against robbers.

HOUSE ENGAGES IN HOT DEBATE ON WAR PERIL

Discuss the Part America Must Take if Hostilities Are Forced.

(By a Staff Correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—The house of representatives today practically served notice on President Wilson it will not grant him full powers to conduct operations against Germany as he sees fit in case his severance of diplomatic relations leads to war.

Member after member voiced a protest against general participation by the United States in the European war.

Man after man as he spoke asserted that the president was not to be criticized for breaking off relations with Germany, but should be criticized if, in his future conduct of the relations between the United States and Germany, he allows himself to be drawn into the general European war.

The house clearly demonstrated it is opposed to having the president take any action without first consulting congress.

KEYNOTE HIT BY LENROOT.

Representative Lenroot of Wisconsin struck the keynote of the day's debate when he said:

"If we are too cowardly to fight for our rights on the sea we are too cowardly to fight for our rights on the land.

"But, Mr. Speaker, that is not the spirit of the American people, and when the time comes that will not be the spirit of this congress. Representing the great American people here, we will vote to maintain by force, if need be, our liberties upon the sea, but that does not mean that we will vote a general declaration of war against Germany. It does not mean that we will intervene in the European war.

WILL NOT ENTER TRENCHES.

"It does not mean that we will send over men to the trenches of Europe. It does not mean that we are to sit in and determine the terms of settlement of European questions. It means only that we are going to settle our difficulty with Germany by compelling it to respect our rights upon the sea.

"If war must come, it will be a war upon the sea, destroying every German submarine that we can and protecting our own ships until such time as Germany shall cease to be an outlaw upon the sea. When Germany shall again respect our rights, our quarrel with it will be over and we will be ready to make peace with it, regardless of European nations or European quarrels.

"I believe the American people and this congress will stand for this policy, and that those who would drag us into this world war for reasons other than maintaining our rights and those who are for peace at any price together constitute a very small minority."

ARMY BILL HELD UP.

Mr. Lenroot closed a debate which was participated in by Representatives Gardner of Massachusetts, Moore of Pennsylvania, Reaves of Nebraska, London of New York, Bailey of Pennsylvania, Garrett of Tennessee, and a host of other congressmen.

This debate completely sidetracked consideration of the army appropriation bill during most of the day. It fairly indicated the temper of the house in the present crisis.

London and Bailey, extreme pacifists, pleaded that the United States should not go into war on any condition.

Bailey precipitated a bitter row when he asserted that Congressman Gardner placed loyalty to Great Britain above loyalty to the United States.

STRIKE OUT BAILEY CHARGE.

Representative King of Illinois jumped to the floor and moved that the house expunge the reflection from the record. A viva voce vote was taken, and the Democratic supporters of Bailey made more noise than the Republicans. King demanded a division and won. Hardy of Texas, supporting Bailey, demanded a roll call. By a large majority the house ordered the reference to Gardner stricken from the record.

Then Bailey in turn demanded that remarks made by Gardner on Thursday, declaring that the followers of Bryan, the pacifists, and the pro-Germans were all a peril to the country, should be expunged. The house refused to grand his demand.

As the debate proceeded it was appar-

MIDNIGHT 'RAID' STIRS CITY HALL; WILD RUMORS FLY

First It's a War Plot, Then 'Morals' Case, Then a Secret.

Mysterious preparations for raids by government agents and the city police started various rumors in the city hall at 2 o'clock this morning.

A half dozen secret service agents and about twenty city detectives gathered for a conference and instructions in the office of First Deputy Westbrook. Second Deputy Funkhouser and Walter L. Furbershaw, first assistant to Hinton G. Clabaugh, were members of the party.

Clabaugh on the Job.

For half an hour, while the two police officials and government agents conferred, Mr. Clabaugh was in his office at the federal building and was in constant communication with his chief assistant.

After the conference with the second deputy and Mr. Furbershaw, First Deputy Westbrook left his office to meet one of his six "flying" squads supposedly to give it orders.

Before leaving he ordered two squads of four men each to be called into the office.

War Plot Is Hinted.

The general assumption, based upon the scale of the preparations, was that a war plot had been discovered and extensive arrests would be made. However, the presence of Deputy Funkhouser, who has control of the city morals squad, indicated that the case in hand has to do with vice and morals, extending to blackmail or Mann act violations.

All parties to the conference were secretive.

"It's a government case—that's all I can say," Deputy Funkhouser sidestepped.

"It's a city case—I connot talk about it—I'm merely, on the sidelines," Mr. Clabaugh sidestepped.

Denies It's War Case.

Later positive assertions were made that the case has nothing to do with war affairs.

"Why all the extensive preparations if it is merely an ordinary case?" Mr. Clabaugh was asked.

"That I am not at liberty to answer," was the reply.

"Then if it isn't a war case, what is it—blackmail, or Mann act?"

"I'm sorry, but the city authorities will have to give out all information."

Nary a War Plot!

"What big war plot have you discovered?" reporters fired at him.

"Not a single war plot," came the answer.

"Then why all the fuss?"

"If things go through the case may develop into a Mann act prosecution," was the guarded reply.

Where the raiders were going or whom they expected to arrest, none of the officials would indicate.

EX-POLICEMAN SLAIN FIGHTING KIDNAPER OF BOY

While attempting to kidnap his 5 year old son, Boone Richardson, 2258 Indiana avenue, shot and instantly killed Edward Hutchinson, 3915 Calumet avenue, a retired policeman, in front of 3906 Calumet avenue last night.

Richardson had been separated from his wife and was served with divorce papers yesterday. He wished custody of their only child and his wife refused to give up the boy.

Richardson went to his wife's home at 3906 Calumet avenue early in the evening. He told his wife he had come to take the boy. His wife said he would take the child only over her dead body.

"All right," shouted Richardson, "then I'll kill you."

The woman ran from the building. Her screams drew Hutchinson into the street. He met Richardson coming out the door with his son in his arms and a revolver clutched in his hand.

"Get out of my way," said Richardson. Hutchinson grappled with him. Richardson fired and Hutchinson fell dead.

Detective Sergts. J. M. J. Mulvey and William Sheehan were hurried to Richardson's home. Richardson appeared still with his son in his arms. Richardson was arrested.

MEXICANS KILL 2 MORE U. S. MEN?

Report Tells of New Raid; Villa Said to Be on Way to Japan.

(By the United Press.)

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 17.—Mexican raiders attacked the Gibson ranch near Columbus last night and slew two American cowboys, according to unconfirmed reports reaching here tonight. The invaders are said to have been part of Jose Salazar's command.

VILLA ON WAY TO JAPAN?
[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

El Paso, Tex., Feb. 17.—Francisco Villa, whose movements have been a mystery to his enemies as well as to the mass of his followers, has made his way to the west coast and embarked for Japan, according to W. L. Crawford, a well known cattle man of Dallas, Tex., and former Texas ranger, who says his source of information is one of Villa's most trusted agents and a man personally known to him to be reliable.

Villa is said to have traveled to the coast in disguise and got safely aboard a ship in Mazatlan, and now is three weeks at sea.

Various versions of a story that Villa informed his leaders of his intention to absent himself for three months and to return with news "that would make his followers throw their hats into the air with joy," have been reaching the border for several days.

No direct word of Villa's whereabouts has been obtainable here in weeks. Reports given out by his local junta have placed him in various parts of Chihuahua. Carranza officers and officials have admitted they did not know where he was.

Negro Attacks Sixth Woman in Evanston

Evanston's assailant of women committed his sixth assault at 11 o'clock last night when he attacked Miss Minnie Johnson, a maid in the employ of Parker Davis of 1117 Sheridan road. Timely arrival of Capt. Michael Eppers, head of a private watch service, caused him to flee to the accompaniment of a stream of bullets from the watchman's pistol.

Two automobile loads of policemen were hurried to the scene, and all interurban trains and other means of leaving the city were watched. That the assailant is a Negro was definitely established by Capt. Eppers, who says he obtained a good view of the man.

WARNS CONVOYS WILL BE SUNK

German Naval Leader Says They Will Get Short Shrift.

BY CYRIL BROWN.

[Copyright: 1917: By Press Publishing Company (New York World).]

BERLIN, Feb. 17.—That any and all kinds of convoys caught in the barred zone will meet as short shrift as merchantmen, enemy and neutral, armed and unarmed, was announced by a high officer of the admiralty staff.

This official pointed out that four different kinds of convoys are possible—enemy merchant ships by enemy warships, neutral merchantmen by enemy warships, enemy merchant ships by neutral warships, and, finally, neutral merchantmen by neutral warships.

The admiralty is convinced that convoys in general and of the first category in particular, will be easy plucking for the unlimited warfaring of the German submarines owing to an inherent weakness in convoys.

Convoys a Hard Problem.

"If our enemies resort to convoys, there are certain other drawbacks, nautical, military, and economic, which will be of advantage to us," this officer said. "A convoy can sail only as slowly as its slowest ship, and there are difficulties of navigation. It requires skill and long training in manuevering, steering, and otherwise handling ships to keep even a battle fleet in formation or line, and in this training merchant captains have no experience.

"Another drawback is that a convoy is easier spotted and easier attacked with success, since there are more targets within a comparatively small compass. On the other hand, there is the nautical disadvantage that the chances of a collision are increased if the ships keep as close together as they must if the convoy has any hopes of being effective.

No Exceptions Made.

To a Swedish correspondent who asked the admiralty officer whether the Swedish merchantmen bound to and from America might be convoyed by a weak naval force through the barrier zone, the admiralty officer pointed out that the German proclamation explicitly said that all ships encountered within the barred zones would be sunk, and intimating as strongly as possible that no exception could be made and no favors shown to neutral convoys.

WIN ADVANCE ON WIDE FRONT NEAR BAPAUME

Conquer German Trenches on Both Sides of the River Ancre.

BY ARTHUR S. DRAPER.
(By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.)

LONDON, Feb. 17.—The British troops replied today to the German attack in the Champagne with a smashing assault that resulted in the capture of enemy positions along a front of more than two miles on both sides of the Ancre river.

South of the stream Gen. Haig's soldiers crashed through the German lines for more than 1,000 yards on a mile and a half front, extending within a few hundred yards of Petit Miraumont and as far north as Miraumont itself.

North of the Ancre what the war office announcement describes "as an important position on the upper slopes of a spur north of Baillescourt farm" was stormed on a front of 1,000 yards and consolidated in the face of violent counter attacks.

BIGGEST DRIVE IN MONTHS.

Not only was the territory seized by Haig's troops much greater than that taken by the Germans in the Champagne on Thursday, but it was by far the most extensive sweep made on the western front since the close of the Ancre offensive last November. In its far reaching importance it excels any infantry operation conducted by either side this year.

Miraumont is the bastion of the German ring of defenses to the west of Baupaume. It stands in much the same relation to that stronghold as Vaux and Douaumont do in respect to Verdun. And Petit Miraumont in turn defends Miraumont on the south.

Both these powerful and highly important positions have been flanked on the east by the latest British advance, and neither stands much chance of being able to hold out longer against Haig's enveloping movement.

TOWNS NEARLY SURROUNDED.

Petit Miraumont lies on the southern bank of the Ancre and is all but in British hands at the present moment, the British statement declaring that only a few hundred yards separate the troops from that position.

Miraumont is situated on the northern side of the stream. British guns now command the entire position from the opposite bank, exposing the German lines to an enfilading fire from the west, as well as a frontal fire from the south and east.

The British stroke north of the Ancre increases the peril of Miraumont. The dominating height north of Baillescourt stormed by Haig's forces lies almost due east of Miraumont, affording an excellent artillery vantage point.

GERMANS MAY RETIRE.

The marked superiority of the British artillery and the speed and power of the infantry attack are indicated not only in the extent of territory captured but also by the apparent ease with which the rush was carried through the succeeding trench lines.

The small number of prisoners bagged suggests that the Germans evacuated their positions without their usual resistance. It is barely possible Gen. von Hindenburg has decided to fall back on the prepared line of defense behind the Ancre and Somme—a movement foreshadowed by many incidents in the last few months.

In raids along the rest of the front the British penetrated the enemy's line at many places, inflicted heavy damage, and returned with many prisoners.

GREAT ADVANCE IN ASIA.

Another encouraging report was issued by the war office tonight. It described the British success before Kut-El-Amara, where many lines of Turkish trenches were captured on a wide front, together with nearly 2,000 prisoners.

EDISON WORKS ON A MIDGET DIVER

New York, Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Thomas A. Edison is believed to be working on a sixteen foot submarine model. It is said a man "with a pill on a pole" could attack a battleship.

Mr. Edison is also spending much time in a special laboratory that he has established for governmental work at Eagle Rock. A guard patrols the grounds night and day and the nature of his experiments is kept a profound secret.

According to the inventor's secretary, Mr. Edison is devoting twenty hours a day to the government's service as a member of the naval consulting board.

U-BOATS DEFIED AS SEA TRAFFIC OPENS UP AGAIN

New York, Feb. 17.—[Special.]—While government boats were at work this morning in the outer harbor lowering a great steel net for protection against submarines, fourteen vessels, totaling nearly 50,000 tons, cruised easily past the Statue of Liberty and came to anchor. All had come from the war zone and had passed safely through the submarine field.

At the same time two big Cunard liners, the Laconia and Ascania, were loading with munitions, general cargo, and passengers for immediate departure for Liverpool. The Holland-America Noordam, the Swedish-American Carlsholm, and the Scandinavian-American Hellig Olav, all carrying cargoes other than munitions, were putting aboard the last of their cargoes. The Roma, flying the French flag and carrying munitions, is to leave tomorrow.

City of Puebla Sails.

Another American vessel, the City of Puebla, a cargo vessel, carrying no passengers, passed quarantine late tonight on its way to Havre with a capacity load of cotton and copper. The owners of the Orleans and the Rochester, which sailed a week ago under the American flag, expect their safe arrival and the same confidence is exhibited at the offices of the Harby line, owners of the Puebla.

Other vessels sailing today were the British steamer Roman Prince, the Dutch steamer Texel, the Spanish steamers Mar Negro and Mouro, and the Swedish steamer Helsingborg.

The Algonquin of the American Star Steamship company, recently transferred to American registry, is ready to sail and probably will leave tomorrow. It is commanded by Capt. Norberg, a naturalized American. Two-thirds of the crew are Americans.

U-Boat Campaign Fails.

In other words, the failure of the German campaign to produce greater havoc to shipping has convinced ship owners that the submarine zone can be traversed without much more peril than a month ago.

The fall of insurance premiums from 10 per cent to 8 per cent is evidence that the insurance companies as well as the owners feel cheerful.

This means a great deal to the internal traffic situation. The more export goods are carried away to Europe the more room there will be in the seaboard terminals. The more room there is here the more quickly can cars be unloaded and returned to the west. The more cars going west—granted good weather—the more quickly will the traffic troubles west of Buffalo and Pittsburgh be soothed, and industrial as well as traffic conditions come back to normal.

U. S. to Hide Sailing News.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—The practice of making public the destinations and manifests of merchant ships leaving American ports is to be discontinued during the crisis with Germany as a step in the protection of American interests from the German submarine campaign.

No word as to the port for which any vessel sails, or the cargo it carries, will be made public by the government officials who grant clearance, and the great merchant fleet carrying American commerce abroad will come and go with all the secrecy of war vessels in time of war.

This decision of the treasury department will be made effective at once, it is said tonight, as a measure of precaution. It already is virtually in effect at New York, and will be applied within forty-eight hours to every other American port on the Atlantic, gulf, Pacific, and the island possessions.

Canada Treats Bernstorff Well.

Halifax, Novia Scotia, Feb. 17.—Count von Bernstorff, former German ambassador to the United States, and members of his party homeward bound on the Scandinavian-American steamer Frederik VIII. had a comparatively quiet time aboard ship in British waters here today.

It was learned that the examination of the Frederik VIII.'s cargo was well under way tonight.

GREAT RECORD FOR SUBMARINES

BERLIN, via Wireless to Sayville, Feb. 17.—A German submarine which reported on Feb. 9 the destruction of 16,000 tons of shipping had sunk before that date vessels totaling 35,000 tons, the official press agency announced today. Another U-boat reports that during a period of twenty-four hours it sank ships aggregating 50,000 tons.

TREATY

Text of German Communication Seeking to Amplify Pact of 1799 Between Prussia and the United States.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 17.—The German communication under date of Feb. 10 amplifying the treaty of 1799, as sent through the Swiss government, follows:

"The German legation at Berne has communicated the following to the Swiss political department (foreign office):

"'The American treaty of friendship commerce of the 11th of July, 1799, provides by article 23 for the treatment of the subjects or citizens of the two states and their property in the event of war between the two states.

"'This article, which is without question in full force as regards the relation between the German empire and the United States, requires certain explanations and additions on account of the development of international law.

Changes Asked by Germany.

"'The German government, therefore, proposes that a special arrangement be now signed, of which the English text is as follows:

"'The agreement between Germany and the United States of America concerning the treatment of each others citizens and their private property after the severance of diplomatic relations.

"'Article 1—After the severance of diplomatic relations between Germany and the United States of America and in the event of outbreak of war between the two powers, the citizens of each party and their private property in the territory of the other party shall be treated according to article 23 of the treaty.

"'Amity and commerce between Prussia and the United States, of the 11th of July, 1799, with the following explanatory and supplemental clauses.

All Held on a Par.

"'Article II. German merchants in the United States and American merchants in Germany shall, so far as the treatment of their persons and their property is concerned, be held in every respect on a par with the other persons mentioned in article 23. They shall, accordingly, even after the period provided for in article 23 has elapsed, be entitled to remain and continue their profession in the country of their residence. Merchants, as well as the other persons mentioned in article 23, may be excluded from fortified places or other places of military importance.

"'Article III. Germans in the United States and Americans in Germany shall be free to leave the country of their residence within the time and by the rights that shall be assured to them by the proper authorities. The persons departing shall be entitled to take along personal property, including money, valuables, and bank accounts, excepting such property exportation of which is prohibited according to general provision.

"'Article IV.—Protection of Germans in the United States and the Americans in Germany, and of their property, shall be guaranteed in accordance with the laws existing in the countries of either party. They shall be under no other restrictions concerning the enjoyment of their private rights and the judicial enforcement of their rights than neutral residents. They may, accordingly, not be transferred to concentration camps, nor shall their private property be subject to sequestration, or liquidation, or other compulsory alienation, except in case that under the existing laws apply also to neutrals. As a general rule, German property in the United States and American property in Germany shall not be subject to sequestration, or liquidation, or other compulsory alienation under other conditions than neutral property.

Patent Rights Protection.

"'Article V.—Patent rights or other protected rights held by Germans in the United States or Americans in Germany shall not be declared void nor shall the exercise of such rights be impoded, nor shall such rights be transferred to others without the consent of the person entitled thereto, provided that regulation made exclusively in the interest of the state shall apply.

"'Article VI.—Contracts made between Germans and Americans, either before or after the severance of diplomatic relations, also obligations of all kinds between Germans and Americans, shall not be declared canceled, void, or in suspension, except under provisions obligable to neutrals. Likewise citizens of either party shall not be impeded in fulfilling their liabilities, arising from such obligations, either by injunction or by other provisions, unless they apply to neutrals.

Safe Conduct to Shhips.

"'Article VII.—The provisions of the sixth Hague convention relative to the treatment of enemy merchant ships at the outbreak of hostilities shall apply to the merchant vessels of either party and their cargo. The aforesaid ships may not be forced to leave port unless at the same time they be given a pass, recognized as binding by all the enemy sea powers, to a home port or a port of an allied country or to another port of the country in which the ship happens to be.

"'Article IX.—This agreement shall apply also to the colonies and other foreign possessions of either party.'"

WILSON TO ASK CONGRESS' AID

one. The submarine campaign has had the effect of blockading American ports, for shipowners are afraid to send their vessels to the European war zones.

The president has refused to furnish protection up to date on the ground that it is better for American commerce to suffer temporarily than for the nation to be plunged into war as a result possibly of an encounter between a submarine and an armed American ship. Whether congress shares this view will be disclosed if the president presents the question for a decision by the war making power.

The administration has received reassuring news concerning Americans in Germany and allied countries. American consuls are being allowed to leave Germany, special trains for their accommodation having been provided. Americans are leaving Austria, but the state department denies receipt of any advices indicating that Ambassador Penfield has terminated negotiations for withdrawal of Vienna's indorsement of the German submarine campaign. The Turkish government has promised to facilitate the departure of the American refugees in Syria and such other Americans as wish to leave the empire.

Fear Turkey's Hostility.

Fear of untoward acts over which the Turkish government might have no control is preventing the departure from Alexandria, Egypt, of the United States cruiser Des Moines and collier Caesar for Syrian ports. The movements of the two ships are in the discretion of the United States naval commander, who has authorization from Washington to proceed when he deems it advisable.

For ten days there has been no obstacle to the departure of the two American vessels and to their passage through the French blockade to Turkish waters except the apprehension that fanatical Moslems, acting independently, and without authority from Constantinople, might attempt to destroy them.

It is known here that some of the Turkish army officials heretofore have defied the Turkish foreign office, having in at least one instance gone so far as to nullify the promises of the Constantinople government to the United States. Djonal Pasha, Turkish military commander in Syria, overruled the Turkish foreign office concerning arrangements for the departure from Turkey of about 1,000 Americans, native and naturalized. He compelled the Turkish government to withdraw its promise to this country, and dictated the conditions under which the Americans might leave.

The terms he imposed were harsh, requiring undue hardships to the Americans and useless expenditures of considerable sums of money, but they had to be observed.

The Des Moines and the Caesar both have on board supplies for starving Syrians and Armenians, and after discharging them at Jaffa would proceed to Beirut to take on the American refugees assembled there. The American naval commander was notified by the French naval commander in the Mediterranean that he might proceed at any time, but was informed at the same time that the French authorities could not be held responsible for any mishaps that might befall the American ships in Turkish waters.

It is thought here that some of the Turkish military and naval authorities are out of sympathy with the Turkish government's apparent wish to maintain friendly relations with the United States.

U. S. Minister to Balkans Sailing Home Next Week

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—American Minister Vopicka, accredited to Roumania, Serbia, and Bulgaria, and recently ordered home, reported today that he had reached Copenhagen, and would sail on the Danish steamer United States next week.

TREATY CHANGES ASKED BY BERLIN BREAK OLD PACT

Put Up to America After Refusal by Gerard to Give His O. K.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—The United States government considers Germany's "treaty changes" as suggested to American Ambassador Gerard and later sent here as a complete new treaty.

The German contention that the suggestions Germany made to Mr. Gerard and which Mr. Gerard said he would not accede to if he had to stay in Berlin "until kingdom come," are merely reaffirmations and amplifications of the treaty of 1799, is diametrically opposed to this government's view.

Must Go to Senate.

These facts were made plain today when shortly after the text of the German communication was made public the state department said the document would have to "go before the senate" to be made binding. Mere signature by government heads would not suffice, it was stated.

In other words, the paper would have to take the usual course prescribed by the constitution of all new treaties if considered at all.

It was understood that Germany, having failed to induce Mr. Gerard to approve the "amplifications" of the old treaty of 1799, has forwarded it here with the hope of having it signed. State department officials refused to discuss the document.

Text Contains "Joker."

The text contains the "joker" regarding the safe conduct demanded for German ships in American harbors as outlined in a dispatch from Paris on Thursday. The dispatch pointed out that this clause in the treaty Germany wanted Gerard to sign had been deleted from press dispatches sent out of Berlin and was therefore not carried in the Paris press.

It was declared at the state department that to make the paper binding it would have to be ratified by the senate. Officials refused to say whether the senate might be asked to take such action, but did say that no such step is now contemplated.

FLETCHER NEARS MEXICAN POST

Queretaro, Mex., Feb. 17.—The American Ambassador, Henry P. Fletcher, arrived here today. He was met by Col. Juan Barragan, chief of Carranza's staff, and Garza Perez, assistant secretary of foreign relations. The ambassador will continue his journey to Mexico City probably tomorrow, and will immediately present his credentials.

Bury Kidnaped Americans.

Campbell's Ranch, N. M., via automobile courier to Hachita, N. M., Feb. 17.—The bodies of A. P. Peterson, Burton Jensen, and Hugh Acord were committed to the earth here late today. The closing scene of the triple tragedy was staged within sight of the Corner ranch, where the three Mormon cowboys were captured Wednesday by Mexican raiders, dragged across the border, and killed after their bodies were mutilated.

U-BOAT NOTE OF GERMAN ORIGIN

LONDON, Feb. 17.—"There is reason for stating with authority," telegraphs Reuter's Berne correspondent, "that the note presented by the Swiss minister to the American government suggesting fresh negotiations regarding the submarine warfare owed its origin to no initiative on the part of the Swiss minister or the Swiss government.

"The latter would take no such initiative at this juncture, being quite content to limit its activities to serving as a medium of intercommunication between the belligerents.

THREE BRITISH STEAMERS SUNK BY SUBMARINES

Add 6,500 Tonnage and 3 Lives to Toll—Mine Sinks Ship.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—Three more ships—all British—with a tonnage of nearly 6,500, were sunk by U-boats during the last twenty-four hours, Lloyds shipping agency announces.

Three persons are known to have lost their lives.

Two men were killed and nineteen are missing as a result of the destruction by a mine of the British steamer Lady Ann.

U-Boat Toll for Day.

Following is the reported list of the day's German submarine victims:

MARIE LEONHARDT (British), 1,468 tons. Fate of crew not indicated.

MARION DAWSON (British), 2,300 tons. Fate of crew not indicated.

QUEENSWOOD (British), 2,701 tons. Three of crew killed; remainder landed.

Law's Crew to Sail Soon.

ROME, Feb. 17.—The crew of the American steamer Lyman M. Law, sunk by a submarine in the Mediterranean, arrived in Civita Vecchia today en route to Rome. They will sail for America shortly.

Hungarian Foes of U-Boat.

BERNE, Feb. 17.—Three Budapest newspapers condemn submarine warfare. The Pesti Naplo attacks Count von Reventlow as the principal exponent of submarine warfare and demands that he be placed in restraint. The Socialist organ, Nepsvava, attacks Admiral von Tirpitz and demands a cessation of what it calls "murder at sea."

The Pesti-Hirlap publishes expressions from three members of the chamber of deputies who discussed submarine warfare. One of them is quoted as saying: "We made the whole world turn against us," and another, "all American countries are joining our enemies. This is sheer madness."

Count Karolyi, leader of the Hungarian independent party, the newspaper adds, said: "I regret deeply the phase of the war into which we entered with the declaration of submarine warfare."

COMPLETE U-BOAT SWATTERS.

New York, Feb. 17.—[Special.]—The last of the 550 "submarine swatters," as the new power boat cruisers are known, built by the Submarine Boat company on the St. Lawrence river, have been delivered to the British government, it was learned today. According to reports reaching shipbuilding interests these "swatters" have not failed in their patrol duty and have been an effective unit in combating the German submarine campaign.

Armed with three inch rapid fire guns, with a speed of twenty-two miles an hour and a cruising radius of 700 miles, these "swatters" have proved an effective weapon against the submarine.

The "swatters" are eighty feet in length, twelve feet in beam, and draw only four feet six inches of water.

U. S. CONSULS QUIT GERMANY NEXT TUESDAY

BERNE, Feb. 17.—The American legation received notice today that the American consuls who were left in Germany when Ambassador Gerard departed will arrive in Switzerland via Schaffhausen Tuesday afternoon. It is expected that a large number of American residents in Germany will arrive with them.

The American consuls were left behind, either because the ambassador was unable to communicate with them or because they needed more time in which to settle up their affairs.

The other Americans were unable to have their passports vised in time to leave with the ambassador.

FRICTION WITH AUSTRIAN ALLY STIRS GERMANY

Public Opinion Is Upset by Evidence of a Jealous Spirit.

BERNE, Feb. 17.—Americans who have arrived in Switzerland from Germany say that the public in Berlin is considerably disturbed by the relations between Germany and Austria-Hungary.

Though Germany has heralded persistently the cordiality and indissolubility of these relations, it has been an open secret for a long time, these Americans say, that Austria, in particular, is bitterly jealous of Germany on the one hand, and that Germany has had to exert strong influence at times to keep the dual monarchy in line.

Austrians had never felt the great need that Germany has experienced almost from the beginning and has never acquiesced gracefully in measures prescribed by Germany as absolutely essential.

German People a Unit.

These Americans say, however, that as far as Germany is concerned public opinion presents a solid front in regard to the war.

Any danger of serious internal disturbances such as has been hinted at in publications outside of Germany is regarded as being as remote as it was many months ago. Nevertheless the state of public opinion has become a pressing problem, especially during the last few weeks.

The attitude of the German people became more of a problem when the break with America occurred, not because any large majority was opposed to the break, but because it followed so closely on the heels of the wide spread peace talk, coming at a time when the yearning for cessation of hostilities had received such enormous impetus.

Doubt Over Peace Offer.

There exists in Germany a cynical though not disloyal minority which frankly believes the peace offer was not made in the expectation that peace could be brought about, but for the purpose of heartening a large but only potentially dangerous stratum of the population which is tired of war. This section has been antagonized by the unsilenceable and uncontrollable pan-German element, which has clamored for the annexation of everything thus far conquered, or at least for very material increases in territory.

Although naturally unorganized, this stratum is extensive. It has taken the attitude that the war and the causes thereof are none of its affair and that annexations would be of doubtful value. A majority of this element is indifferent whether Belgium is retained or returned. It longs with increasing anxiety for peace.

View Held by Cynics.

The growing opinion that Germany cannot hope to obtain all that is desired by the extremists, and the desire to have it all over with on any reasonable basis and to get the members of the families back home, has brought into being in the last few months a more or less powerful peace party.

The cynics argue that the government decided on a moderate peace offer, which, if accepted, would please the peace advocates, even though not entirely placating the pan-Germans; while, if rejected, the result would be unification of the people.

LINER CECILIE CRIPPLED ON GERMAN ORDER

Captain Admits in Libel Suit That He Followed Instructions.

Boston, Mass., Feb. 17.—The North German Lloyd passenger liner Kronprinzessin Cecilie, while in custody of a United States marshal under a libel order from the federal court, was deliberately disabled at the direction of its German commander.

Capt. Charles A. Polack so testified in the United States District court today and added that he in turn had taken his orders from the German government.

The damage to the vessel was done on the night of Jan. 31, three days before diplomatic relations between the United States and Germany were broken off.

Under examination by counsel for the libellants, Capt. Polack said that on that day he had received orders to make his vessel unseaworthy from an unnamed official of the German embassy at Washington.

Faces Charge of Treason.

It was a tense moment when the witness was asked the name of this official. He hesitated and then, turning to the court, made this plea:

"Your honor, I am an officer of the German navy, and if I should have to disclose the name of the gentleman in this hearing I might be tried for treason when I went home to Germany. I wish you would not oblige me to answer that question."

Judge James M. Morton Jr. said he would not insist upon an answer, as no good purpose would be served thereby and particularly as the reply might be of momentous importance to the witness.

History of the Case.

The Kronprinzessin Cecilie was bound from New York for Plymouth and Cherbourg when its commander was warned that war had been declared. He turned back and found refuge at Bar Harbor, Me. On board the steamer was gold shipped by the Guaranty Trust company and the National City Bank of New York to bankers in London and Paris, and these banks libeled the vessel, claiming damages of $2,300,000 because of the failure to deliver the consignment. In November, 1914, the steamer was brought to Boston, where it has since been tied up.

When Count von Bernstorff was given his passports the libellants sought protection of the vessel from damage by the crew. United States Marshal John J. Mitchel took physical possession of the ship. It was then found the machinery had been tampered with, making it impossible to navigate the vessel until many and expensive repairs have been made.

The plaintiffs today alleged the vessel had been wantonly damaged and asked that it be sold forthwith. Counsel for the owners asked for a delay until the Supreme court had passed on the owners' petition for a review of the case, which was expected on March 5.

This request came after the testimony of Capt. Polack, and the court replied that the owners appeared in contempt and so had no standing in court. The court ordered that the vessel be sold by the marshal on April 11 unless on or before Feb. 21 the owners had furnished a bond of $200,000 to repair promptly the machinery damaged and protect the steamer from further injury.

Tells of Damage Done.

The court did not indicate whether any action for contempt would be taken against Capt. Polack or Chief Engineer Ermund Bierans, who was intrusted with the work of making the machinery of the Kronprinzessin Cecilie inoperative.

Questioned by Attorney Edward E. Blodgett, counsel for the libellants, Capt. Polack said that last spring, soon after the steamer Sussex was sunk, he was summoned to New York by his company's office and introduced to a gentleman who said he represented the German government. This man told him that trouble had arisen between the United States and Germany and it was about time for him to destroy the ship's papers. He was warned that his ship should not fall into hostile hands.

Got Orders from Germany.

Describing his actions, Capt. Polack said:

"I knew the gentleman. He told me that since difficulties had arisen here, he thought it was about time that I should destroy the secret code, charts, and plans in order that they should not fall into hostile hands.

"When I returned from New York I told my chief engineer I would leave it entirely to him to do what he thought necessary to do to disable the engines. I told my chief officer that when I was not on board and he received a telegram from me that the time had come when the order was to be executed."

Asked if he had told the representative of the German government that the vessel had been libeled and was now in possession of the United States court, the witness replied that this had not occurred to him.

Midwest Rookie Camps Get $205,000 U. S. Aid

The central military department of the United States, of which Chicago is the executive base, will receive $205,000 of $862,000 appropriated recently for military training camps this summer. Maj. Gen. Thomas H. Barry, commanding the central department of the army, received this notification yesterday.

Of this sum Fort Sheridan will receive $100,000 and the remainder will be expended at Fort Riley, Kas., and Fort Snelling, Minn., he announced.

The principal expenditures will consist of providing uniforms, equipment, and food for "rookies."

Solo dances and a pageant representing the Gothic art renaissance in England; a Harlequinade by Miss Helen Spengler, Miss Dorothy Sutton, and Victor Poeltz, and refreshment booths and various novelties also are scheduled. Miss Constance Early is at the head of the program committee. Among others taking part are Havrena Protheroe, Victoria Schekelton, Corteau Rolff, and Hermina Selz.

PRUSSIANS LIED TO AND STARVED, CHARGE IN DIET

Socialists and Other Foes of War Show Road to Peace.

AMSTERDAM, via London, Feb. 17.—A dispatch to the Koelnische Volks Zeitung from Berlin says that yesterday's session of the Prussian diet was featured by attacks on the government by Adolf Hoffman, a Socialist; Herr Lippmann, a Progressive, and Herr Korfanty, a Polish member.

Herr Hoffman, the newspaper says, after attacking the manner in which he alleged the police were repressing the people, said:

"The opposition press is defenseless and the people, consequently, cannot learn the truth. What crime has Liebknecht committed that such a brutal and infamous judgment should be pronounced against him? (Hoffman was here called to order by the presiding officer.) The working class believes that Liebknecht remains a man of honor.

"The people are starving and freezing. Would you deprive them of the last of their rights? Peace is possible if the government will only publish its war aims, which, of course, must humiliate no nation."

Do Not Trust Government.

Referring to the government's promise of franchise reforms, Herr Hoffman is quoted as saying: "We do not trust the government's promises. The object in making them is merely to keep the people in hand. For us the old fight must continue against the enemies in our midst."

Herr Lippmann also complained of the treatment of the common people by the police. He declared the existing food regulations were a failure.

Poles Victims of Deceit.

Herr Korfanty touched on the government's promises to the Poles, saying, the newspaper adds:

"The Poles have been deceived many times and now are very cautious. I and the other Polish members are pressed by our constituents to express their disapproval of the government."

Gerard's Aid Off to Vienna to Assist Envoy Penfield

Physician to King George Dies Suddenly in London

LONDON, Feb. 17.—Sir Gen. Benjamin Franklin died suddenly today at the age of 73. He was honorary physician to the king and late director general of the Indian medical service. He had been honorary physician to Queen Victoria and King Edward.

BRITISH LEADER WARNS COUNTRY CRISIS HAS COME

LONDON, Feb. 17.—The Earl of Derby, secretary of state for war, speaking at Bolton today, expressed the opinion that the critical period of the war would occur in the next few months.

"I would be a false friend," he said, "if I did not warn the country that the war is going to be long continued and the struggle even more bitter than in the past. It can only be won by every one doing his utmost. The three things most vital are money, men, and munitions. Money and munitions are being supplied in large quantities. Men we want and must have. The nation will have to make greater sacrifices in the way of giving its manhood to fight its battles. You will not win the war by saying you have won it.

"I believe we are going to see the critical period of the war in the next few months. We must face it with courage. I confidently predict it will be a successful six months for us, but at the same time I do not think it will be a walkover.

"At whatever cost, at whatever sacrifice, stick it out to the bitter end, and the bitter end will mean for you, perhaps, privation, but for those who come after you freedom from the horrors which we have experienced during the last two and a half years."

SOCIETY WOMEN ENROLL FOR WAR

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Fifty-five Washington society women have been mobilized by the national Red Cross as ambulance drivers in case of war with Germany.

Women prominent in every walk of life at the capital who are car owners or capable drivers will be mustered in and signed for service.

The work is under the direction of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, chairman of the Red Cross committee. Mrs. Augustus P. Gardner, wife of Representative Gardner of Massachusetts, "original preparedness advocate," is vice chairman.

Others aiding in the work are Miss Margaret Perrin, Mrs. Joseph Leiter, and the Countess Gizycka.

AMERICAN HELD; HAS "NO HOME"?

PARIS, Feb. 17.—Americans arriving from Berlin today by way of Berne and Pontarlier, on the Franco-Swiss frontier, say that Hartwig Devisen and wife, who were residents of Laporte, Ind., some years ago, are being detained at Pontarlier until their identity as American citizens can be established.

Ambassador Gerard said today that he had told the French authorities that Devisen personally was unobjectionable, and expected that this would facilitate their proceeding.

The case is a peculiar one, as the Devisens left Berlin because they were considered Americans, and yet they were not allowed to proceed through France because they are considered Germans.

LONDON EDITOR AGAIN DIRECTS PREMIER'S STEP

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, Feb. 17.—Premier Lloyd George was to have announced next Monday further drastic restrictions on imports in order to provide ship tonnage for military and other necessaries. The announcement has been postponed.

The London Daily Mail today publishes an editorial under the caption, "French Trade Must Be Spared," the "must" being in italics. Politicians discern a direct connection between the postponement and the editorial.

Lord Northcliffe has interposed his veto, it is suggested, on the proposals the premier had in view, which would have restricted the import of French silks and wines. Such appeal would have been a blow to France, and Lord Northcliffe is generally sympathized with in preventing such a measure.

No wonder parliamentary circles are asking whether the premier, unless his course is made easier, may decide for the dissolution of parliament, which he believes would give him a personal big majority.

READY TO HANDLE $15,000,000 BIDS ON ARMY NEEDS

New York, Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Officers in the quartermaster's department in the army building were busy today preparing to handle bids which will be opened there March 5 for the equipment of 500,000 men in the event of service.

These bids call for 3,463,000 yards of duck, 2,000,000 yards of cotton olive drab, 1,350,000 yards of melton, 750,000 yards of flannel, 700,000 yards of drilling, 642,000 yards of denims, 400,000 yards of serge, and 73,894 yards of black Italian cloth. The bids will cover equipping, clothing, and tentage. Estimates of the cost range from $15,000,000 upward.

Bids for textile materials to provide uniforms for more than 500,000 men recently were asked by the Philadelphia depot. The total expenditure for this material is estimated at $15,000,000.

Cunard Line Lets Contracts.

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 17.—Announcement was made today that the Cunard line had let to the Seattle Construction and Dry Dock company the contract for six steel freight steamships at a figure in excess of $6,000,000.

CUBA WAR CLOUD, MORE MENACING, WORRIES WILSON

Santiago Business Stops—U. S. May Be Forced to Intervene.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Apprehension over the Cuban situation was increased today by receipt of dispatches from Santiago stating that the situation in that section of Cuba is critical and threatening. Business throughout that region has been paralyzed; there are no mails and trains are not operating.

The insurrectionists in control of Santiago have seized two Cuban merchant vessels, the Frank Penny and the Julia, which have been heavily armed and stationed at the mouth of the harbor.

Fighting at Palma Soriano.

Advices received today report spirited fighting at Palma Soriano. The government troops were said to have the superior forces and to be dominating the situation from Camaguey to Baracoa, but those optimistic accounts of government success are confessedly from Cuban government sources.

It is believed in some official quarters that the revolutionary leaders in Cuba are determined to force intervention by the United States. This belief is based on the seeming unwillingness of the leaders of the Cuban Liberal party to abide by any results of the election unfavorable to their cause. They claim fraud has been practiced and that other illegal uses have been made of the power of the Menocal, or Conservative, government.

Wholly Internal Affair.

Further, it appears to be established firmly today that the troubles in Cuba are wholly native, that there have been no foreign machinations of any kind whatsoever, and that the revolutionary movement is purely racial and political.

The Liberals, now effectively organized and with strong military support, backed also by adequate funds, are thought to believe that only through revolution or intervention by the United States can they obtain the full measure of enjoyment of their political rights under the constitution.

It is claimed by some of them that intervention by the United States would not be sympathetic toward either faction or race, for the sake of faction or race, but would establish such rule and new guarantees as would make possible the execution of the wishes of the majority of Cuban voters.

TAKE PRESIDENT'S BROTHERS.

SANTIAGO DE CUBA, Feb. 17.—When Liberal forces took possession of the sugar mill at Palma Soriano, owned by President Menocal, today, they captured two brothers of the president. The Menocal brothers will be brought here for safe keeping.

Havana Still Optimistic.

HAVANA, Feb. 17.—Optimism over the revolutionary outbreak in the eastern provinces continues in government circles. The military forces of the government will attempt to crush Gen. José Miguel Gomez, the leader, in the province of Camaguey by attacking him from all sides. Later it is expected the government troops will move on Santiago, where everything is reported quiet.

An official statement issued at 10 o'clock tonight at the palace says:

"The situation in Pinar del Rio, Havana, Matanzas, and Santa Clara is normal. In the last named province there are still at large several groups of insurgents, who continue to be closely pursued.

"Camaguey will be in the same condition within two or three days, and then that portion of Oriente at present isolated from the rest of the island because of the lack of communications will be cleared. Reports from this province indicate that the disturbance is confined to a very limited section in the southwestern and extreme eastern parts.

"No mills have yet been reported as having stopped grinding."

ALL GUARDSMEN NOW ON BORDER ORDERED HOME

Plan Fast Movement to Test Facilities in Time of War.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—The entire force of national guardsmen, estimated at about 53,000 men, has been ordered by the war department to be returned from the border.

This movement is to take place in double quick time, it was announced, the expectation being that every one of the men can be transported to the demobilization points in their home states by March 7. If this feat is accomplished it will be the fastest movement of troops of any considerable proportions in the history of the United States.

The railroads will coöperate in every way to make the movement a success from the standpoint of speed. The movement will be in the nature of a test of the transportation resources of the United States, on which much would depend in time of war.

Railway Equipment Adequate.

The various railroads already have a large force of Pullmans at the border, so that no long delays will be occasioned by the absence of this equipment. In addition, the war department has determined to use day coaches for the transportation of men going to a destination not more than thirty-six hours' ride from their present stations.

Illinois—Fourth infantry, now at Fort Sam Houston, Tex.

Indiana—First infantry, Battery D, field hospital No. 2, Llano Grande, Tex.

Iowa—Second infantry, Brownsville, Tex.

Michigan — Thirty-second infantry, Troops A and B, Batteries A and B, Company A of the signal corps, ambulance companies Nos. 1 and 2, and field hospital No. 1, El Paso, Tex.

Wisconsin—Troop B, Fort Sam Houston, Tex.

Regulars Will Guard Border.

With the return of the national guardsmen the guarding of the border will be left entirely to the regular troops, numbering about 50,000 men. Since all of the national guard from the border states has been ordered home, it is anticipated at the war department that bandit raids may be expected more often for a while. However, the department feels that the regulars now on the border will be amply able to cope with any situation that might arise.

ALIENS RUSH TO BECOME CITIZENS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—During the two weeks since the diplomatic break with Germany foreigners living in the United States, notably Germans and Austrians, have flocked to the courts to become American citizens in such numbers that labor department officials said today the total could not even be estimated.

U. S. HAS ENOUGH DIVER NETS TO GUARD HARBORS

Part Are Already Placed—Test New Devices to Combat U-Boats.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—The United States navy already possesses a number of submarine nets and constant experiments are being carried on in placing them in their proper positions, testing their effectiveness, etc., according to a statement made today by Secretary of the Navy Daniels.

It is understood the department has enough submarine nets to protect all of the important harbors in the United States. While Secretary Daniels would not say how many nets are possessed by the navy department, he admitted they already had been used at one or two places.

Ample Supply of Nets.

From other sources it was learned that the department possesses an ample supply of these nets. Although details of the construction are not available, it is known that they are constructed of steel cables. The number of cables that comprises the nets varies with the depth of the water in which they are to be used. Anchors are attached to the lower parts of the nets to hold them in place, while buoys are used to keep the upper part close to the surface of the water.

These nets can be placed and let down within an hour's time, it is understood. A number of tugboats in the naval service have been completely equipped for handling the nets and they, working in pairs and fours, have so developed their system that it is now a comparatively simple matter to protect any harbor in the country against submarines.

Try New Inventions.

From various sources has come other information in regard to some wonderful new inventions completed or being experimented on by the navy department. In addition to the Hammond system of radio control of torpedoes, the general plan of which has long been known to the public, the navy department is also experimenting with the propulsion of torpedoes from aircraft.

Experiments are also being conducted on a so-called submarine ear, which is an attachment by which ships may detect the approach of a submarine even though the submarine may be submerged and not visible.

RED CROSS FLAG IS MISUSED?

BERLIN, via Sayville Wireless, Feb. 17.—Charges that British forces are persistently misusing the Red Cross to cloak transfer of ammunition were made in the following statement from the official German government press bureau tonight.

ARMIES READY FOR SPRING DRIVE, WEEK'S REVIEW SHOWS

LIVELY operations of a testing character along important sectors of all the European war fronts last week foreshadow the opening of the spring campaigns.

Preparations have gone forward throughout the winter for tremendous drives and attacks. All has been arranged with a view to terrific action by Feb. 20, the date marking last year's spring opening. Moderation in the weather during the last ten days has made it possible in certain localities for various raids, the object of which no doubt has to do partly with obtaining information.

Both the allies and central powers seem to stake the fate of the war upon the next few months' fighting. The artillery is expected to be the deciding factor.

Great Britain specially is known to have speeded up heavy munitions manufacturing and to have sent enormous quantities to France. Moreover, a large fresh army apparently has been transported from England to the French front. This is indicated by London admissions that the British have taken over an increased section of the northern line.

The allies, while making their feverish spring arrangements, have exhibited a fear that during the winter lull the Germans have pushed preparations on a grand scale. Little details have escaped from the kaiser's land, but returning American correspondents have cabled from Copenhagen some significant facts. All train service has been suspended for an indefinite period preceding Feb. 20. Troop and supply movements have choked the railroads.

Large forces of reserves are being dispatched to all fronts, Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg recently admitted, the landsturm formerly on duty along the Dutch border has been called to the trenches, and one or more new divisions created, it is believed.

The Teutons, like the allies, seem all set for great activities. The air fleets have been unusually alert on all fronts, dropping bombs behind the lines and on supply stations, and in scouting for information. The British made two special attacks on the German naval base at Zeebrugge [2].

But the most spectacular event of the week was the launching of a German offensive in the Champagne region midway between Verdun and Reims and south of Ripont. (4) Here the crown prince's army advanced some 800 yards along a 2,700 yard front, capturing 837 men near Maisons de Champagne farm and Hill 185. The attack was heralded as the initial German thrust aimed at flanking the French at Verdun.

In the Serre-Grandecourt territory (3) along the Ancre river on the Somme front, the British held their gains of the previous week and added some successes, capped yesterday with the capture of German trenches along a mile and a half front north of Grandcourt, the town taken last week. By this move the British are near Petit Miraumont, just below Miraumont on the main road to the fortress of Bapaume.

Gen. Maurice in London recapitulated the result of the operations in this sector since Jan. 1, showing a gain of 800 yards along a 12,000 yard frontage.

Down on the Austro-Italian border have occurred pre-spring forays. The chief renewal was in the Goritz area (6) at the southeast end of the line. The Austria claimed a good ground gain east of the St. Caterina slopes. In the Trentino sag (5) airplanes have figured prominently in reconnoitering.

Significant action also has been reported from Macedonia. The Teutons announced an offensive stretching from Albania to the sea. Vienna told of the capture of positions near Paralovo on the Cerna river and Doiran on the Vardar (8). The fighting also extended east to the Struma, while in Albania the Italians reported the capture of Ersen (7), although great bands of Austrians have assembled northward of the town.

The lower Roumanian front (9) alone appears to be tardy in opening up. The Sereth river is still frozen over and minor jumps across have been made by the Germans, but in the Galatz district and along the southern branch of the Danube there has been no foretelling development. A spring effort to cross the Sereth and dash on to Odessa is the German ambition.

Further on north in the golden Bistritza region, the Russians are making a steady stand, but Berlin announced the capture of two miles of the Jacobeny-Kimpolung road (10). Some 1,200 prisoners were taken.

All along the Russo-German line between Kovel and Stanislau (11) the activity has intensified. Near Galitch the Germans crossed the frozen Dniester, but were forced back. At Kiselin, below Kovel, the Germans captured forty-two men during a raid.

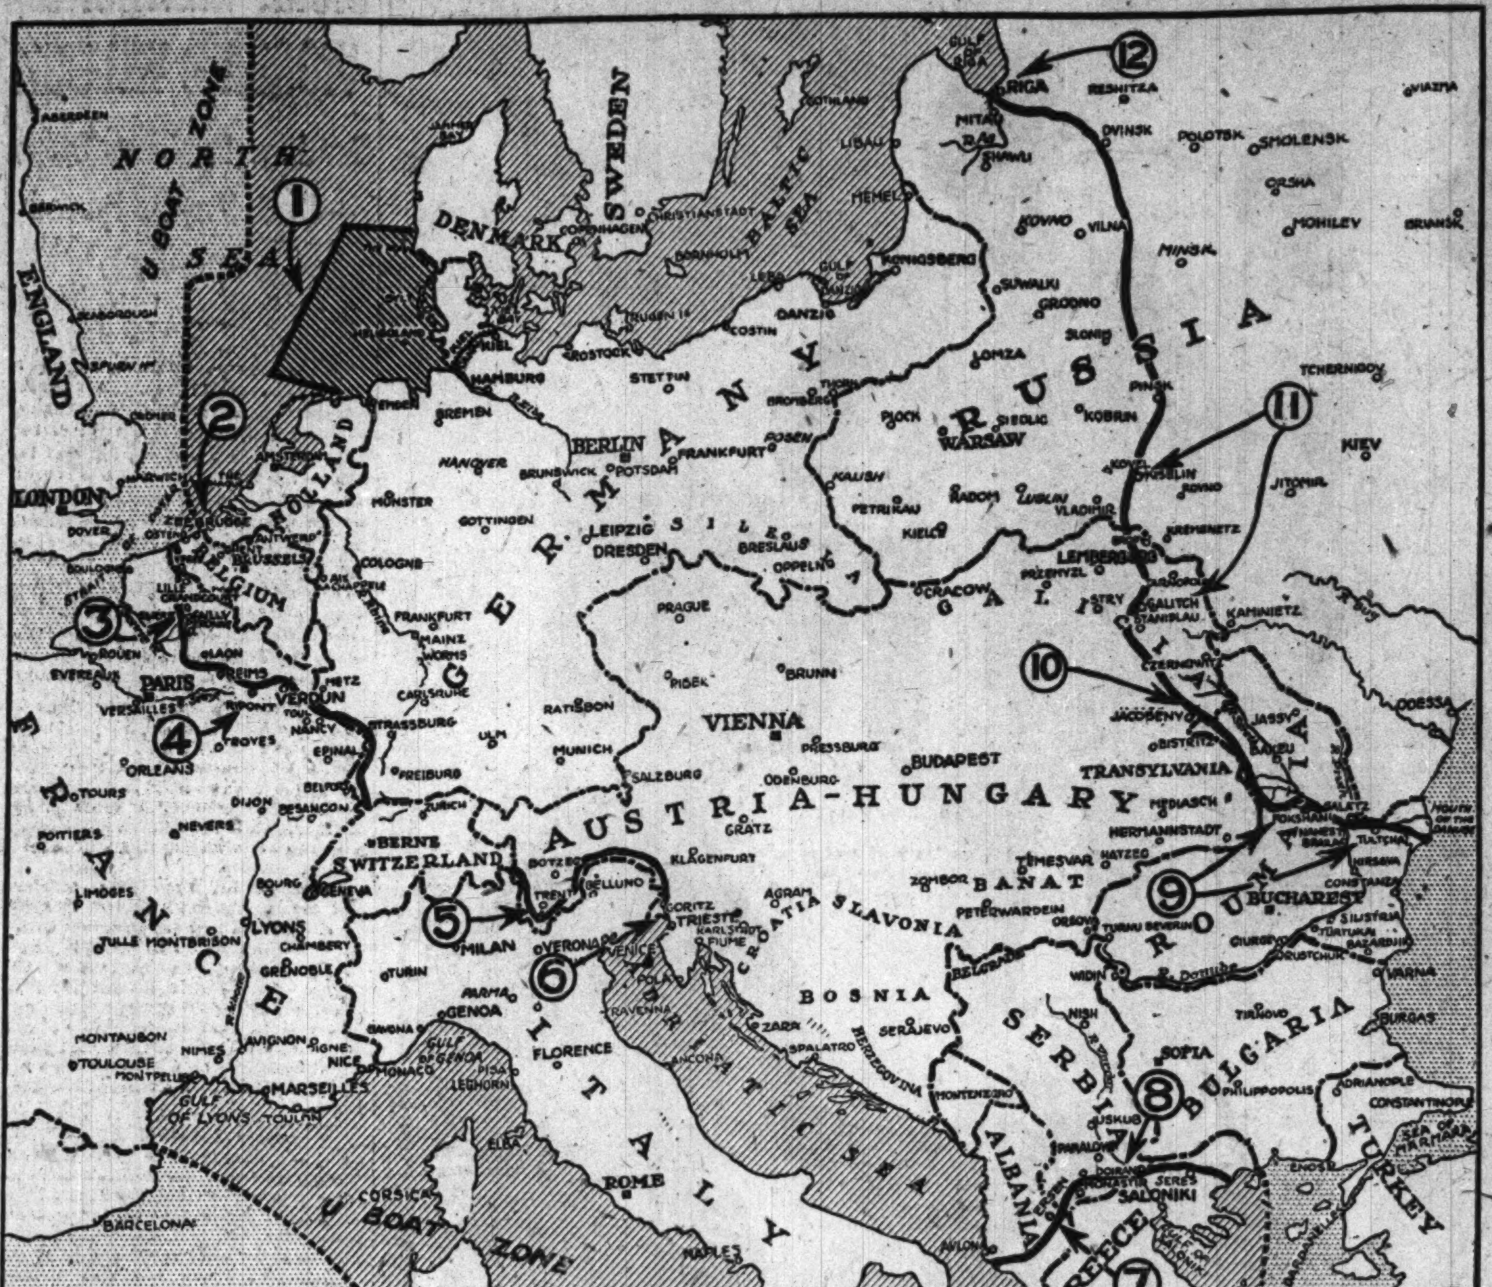
At the northern end of the Russian line in the Riga territory (12), stubborn battling occurred without result. The kaiser's men are known to have made great preparations for an attempted advance, but thus far have met a virtual stop west of Riga.

While all of these land operations have sprung to the forefront, international relations and the commercial battle at sea also engaged the attention of the war fans. England has retaliated at Germany's U-boat blockade by mapping off a new mine field and danger zone (1) aimed at restricting U-boat operations from the Helgoland base.

London, incidentally, is considering the kaiser's ruthless U-boat campaign a failure. The admitted German objective was to destroy 33,000 tonnage a day to effect the starvation of England. For the seven days ending yesterday the U-boats had sunk only thirty ships, with the limited tonnage of 44,758 for the entire week. The aggregate tonnage destroyed since Feb. 1 is placed at 236,615, or about one-half of the total expected for sixteen days.

The state department at Washington is anxiously watching the U-boat operations, still waiting for that "overt act." An American ship, the Lyman M. Law, was sunk in the Mediterranean, but without loss of life. The U-boat threat, however, has held nearly all American ships to their harbors, choking all Atlantic seaports. This situation has reached a critical stage and brought a new "crisis," which President Wilson will put before congress early this week.

The necessity to arm American ships has been brought to the fore and the cabinet has urged Wilson to act. The president has withheld announcement of his attitude, but German censors have passed the unofficial announcement that for America to arm her merchant ships would be tantamount to a declaration of war.



DETAIL ACTIONS UPON ALL FRONTS IN BIG STRUGGLE

Official Reports Tell of Besult of the Fighting Over Old World.

FRENCH FRONT

BRITISH

LONDON, Feb. 17.—Successful operations on both banks of the Ancre were undertaken by our troops this morning. Considerable further progress was made south of the river. The enemy's positions opposite the villages of Miraumont and Petit Miraumont were attacked and captured on a front of about one and one-half miles. We have penetrated more than 1,000 yards into the enemy's defenses and advanced our line to within a few hundred yards of Petit Miraumont.

North of the Ancre an important enemy position on the upper slopes of a spur north of Baillescourt farm was carried on a front of about 1,000 yards. Hostile counter attacks were successfully driven off. In addition to heavy losses inflicted on the enemy, 268 prisoners, including five officers, have passed through the collecting stations.

We carried out two raids this morning south of Neuve Chapelle and northeast of Ploegsteert, where our troops reached the enemy's second line. Large numbers of Germans were killed and many dugouts and machine guns were destroyed. We captured a few prisoners in each case.

Hostile raiding parties west of Lens and east of Givenchy were repulsed with loss. We blew up two mines last night with good results west of La Bassee.

FRENCH

PARIS, Feb. 17.—There was active artillery fire in the sector of Maisons de Champagne. In the region of Eparges a German surprise attack was broken up by our fire.

After a spirited bombardment late yesterday one of our detachments penetrated the German salient at Ammerzweiler [Alsace] and completely destroyed it. It was ascertained that the enemy suffered appreciable losses. We took prisoners. The night was calm elsewhere.

NIGHT STATEMENT.

There was intermittent cannonading on the greater part of the front. The fighting was more pronounced in the direction of Ribencourt. An enemy surprise attack on one of our small posts northwest of Bezonvaux failed.

BELGIAN

PARIS, Feb. 15.—The German batteries were only slightly active.

GERMAN

BERLIN, Feb. 17.—Army group of the German crown prince—On the Aisne and west of Berry-Au-Bac and in the Champagne, south of Ripont, French advances failed.

On the Somme several ammunition depots of our adversaries were blown up. The explosion and earth shaking were noted as far away as St. Quentin.

Western front—Army group of Crown Prince Rupprecht—On the Artois front and in the Somme sector, especially on both sides of the Ancre, the artillery duel reached considerable violence. At several places attacks by British reconnoitering parties were repulsed, and south of Miramount a stronger attack, launched after drum fire, was repulsed.

NIGHT STATEMENT.

During a strong artillery fire new infantry engagements developed on the Ancre before noon today.

TIGRIS FRONT

BRITISH

LONDON, Feb. 17.—Mesopotamia—The offensive against the Turks on the right bank of the Tigris was resumed Thursday. An important tactical point in front of the enemy's right was first seized. An attack on his right center followed, resulting in the securing of our objective on a front of 700 yards. This was afterward extended by bombing to a depth of 500 yards on a frontage of 1,000 yards. The half hearted Turkish counter attacks were easily repulsed. Some hours later an assault was launched against the enemy's left center, securing our objective on a front of 850 yards.

During the night the enemy was cleared out of small areas they held on the river bank. By dawn Friday all the ground in the Dahra bend was in our hands.

The prisoners taken numbered eighty-nine officers, including two regimental and three battalion commanders, and 1,906 other ranks. We captured five machine guns, 2,500 rifles, and a large quantity of ammunition, equipment, and stores.

A further advance of 1,200 yards was made Friday south of the Shumran loop. Our advanced troops now hold the southwest corner of this bend.

TURKISH

CONSTANTINOPLE, via London, Feb. 17.—After an enemy attack on the German right wing had been repulsed, our positions were evacuated, according to orders, to prevent needless losses.

We executed a slight, backward movement to avoid unnecessary casualties.

ROUMANIAN FRONT

GERMAN

BERLIN, Feb. 17.—Front of Archduke Joseph: On the heights north of the Ojtuz valley (northern Roumanian front) engagements were begun at dawn this morning.

Front of Field Marshal von Mackensen and Macedonian front: The situation is unchanged. There was little military activity.

RUSSIAN

PETROGRAD, Feb. 17.—On the Roumanian front military activity was limited to infantry firing and engagements among advanced detachments.

ITALIAN FRONT

ITALIAN

ROME, Feb. 17.—Our batteries caused fires to break out on the enemy's Zugna line. Minor encounters favorable to us are reported from various places. On the Julian front there were the usual artillery actions. The railway station at St. Lucia di Tolmino was hit by our fire.

RUSSIAN FRONT

GERMAN

BERLIN, Feb. 17.—Front of Prince Leopold: Near Illukst, southwest of Lutsk, near Zborow, south of Brzezany and southwest of Stanislau, Russian enterprises failed.

RUSSIAN

CAUCASUS FRONT

RUSSIAN

BLACK SEA

RUSSIAN

PETROGRAD, Feb. 17.—On the Black sea our vessels destroyed sixteen sailing schooners off the coast of Anatolia.

AVIATION

GERMAN

BERLIN, Feb. 17.—German naval airplanes on Feb. 14 copiously bombarded airplane stations in the vicinity of Dunkirk and Coxyde. Good hits were obtained. A hydroairplane successfully bombed trading ships anchored in the Downs.

Our air squadrons bombarded important establishments behind the French front today.

FRENCH

PARIS, Feb. 17.—Information now at hand establishes the fact that on Jan. 23 Capt. Doumer brought down his fifth German airplane. Yesterday one of our pilots destroyed a captive German balloon in the region of Marvaux, south of Vouzieres.

BRITISH

LONDON, Feb. 17.—Naval airplanes dropped heavy bombs with good results on the Ghistelles airdrome on Friday. At the same time Bruges harbor and shipping were again attacked. Bombs were observed exploding on objectives.

In the course of the air fighting yesterday one German airplane was brought down in our lines and two others were driven down damaged; one of ours is missing.

CHICAGO ARTIST CITED AS A HERO ON FRENCH FRONT

PARIS, Feb. 17.—Herman Webster of Chicago, a well known artist, who commands section 2 of the American ambulance field service, has been cited in an order of division for "the greatest disregard of danger and for coolness in all circumstances."

This disregard of danger, says the order, was shown "notably on the night of Dec. 28, when he proceeded in an automobile of the sanitary service under an intense bombardment to an advanced first aid post, which he did not leave until the removal of the last wounded."

War Delays Shamrocks for Carnival

The United Celtic American Societies of Chicago have ordered five crates of Irish Shamrocks from Dublin for their entertainment and carnival ball St. Patrick's night, March 17, at the First Regiment armory. The crates have been held up in the war zone.

MANIAC AMUCK IN AN ATLANTA HOME; 3 KILLED

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—The Rev. Gaston R. Buford, pastor of the Moore Memorial Presbyterian church and a leader in Atlanta religious circles, sacrificed his life tonight in an effort to save the lives of two women who were being attacked by Claude Anderson, who was recently released from the insane asylum.

Anderson himself was killed by W. J. Zahn after he shot down the minister, but not before he had seriously injured Mrs. Edna Zahn and killed her mother-in-law, Mrs. M. Zahn. The tragedy occurred at the Zahn home.

Mr. Buford had rushed into the house when he heard the shots and screams of the wounded women. Mrs. Anderson, who is a daughter of Mrs. Zahn, told the police that Anderson hid in a room and that when Mrs. Zahn entered he opened fire. She fell dangerously wounded. Her daughter-in-law ran to the room and was shot. Mr. Buford, passing with his family, ran into the house and Anderson killed him instantly.

W. J. Zahn, who conducts a business near the residence, heard the shots and hurried home. He wrested from Anderson one of two pistols he was using and shot the man down. Zahn was arrested and is being held for an examination.

Helen Morton Must Pay $1,000 Damages to Boy

Helen Morton, daughter of Joy Morton, whose marital experience with a Virginia horseman caused a sensation in society, must pay Fred. Rose $1,000.

Rose sued Miss Morton several years ago for damages after he had been thrown by Miss Morton's blooded mare, Rosadora, at the Onwentsia club in Lake Forest. The boy, who was 16 years old, set up that Miss Morton knew the animal was vicious when she permitted him to mount the animal. Rose's leg was broken from the fall. He obtained a verdict for $2,000. Miss Morton paid him $1,000 on the judgment. Later she carried the case to the Appellate court on the ground that the damages were excessive. The higher court yesterday affirmed the original verdict.

NEUTRAL ENVOYS IN TURKEY FLOUT U.S. AMBASSADOR?

SOFIA, Feb. 16, via Berlin to London, Feb. 17.—The Balanska Bosta publishes a Constantinople dispatch to the effect that American Ambassador Elkus had invited the diplomatic representatives of neutral states to a dinner at the embassy for the purpose of interchanging political opinions. Not one of the neutral envoys, it adds, accepted the invitation, all sending their regrets.

TURKEY TO FREE AMERICANS.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—Permission for the departure of the American refugees from Turkey has been given by the Ottoman government. Ambassador Elkus at Constantinople advised the state department today that a Turkish authority had expressed the hope that the Americans would be given passage soon and their departure would in no way be interfered with.

TALE OF DARING TOLD BY SEAMEN FREED BY RAIDER

Yankees Forced to Serve German Cruiser Relate Thrills of Voyage.

New York, Feb. 17.—Out of the South Atlantic—from the waters made famous by the exploits of pirates of years ago—came a story tonight replete with thrills and romance. It is a story of daring; of American sailors being forced before the mast of a German raider's auxiliary, and of the sinking and capture of merchantmen by the raider.

From Dec. 12 to Jan. 13 nine Americans were in the hands of the Germans manning the sea raider, which raked the Atlantic and piled up its toll of sunken and captured vessels for a period of two months.

For sixteen days of this time the Americans were actually in the service of the kaiser's navy. During this time they served on their own ship, the British steamer St. Theodore, but the vessel had been captured by the raider, pressed into service as a supply ship, and the neutral members of its crew signed up as German sailors.

Sailors Reach New York.

Eleven men who sailed from Norfolk on Dec. 4 on the St. Theodore were captured by the sea rover and ultimately landed at Pernambuco reached here late today on the steamer Francis. They brought with them the detailed story of what went on aboard ships during the raids. They identified the raider as the German cruiser Vineta. They witnessed the sinking of two French sailing ships and five British steamers.

Among them was Frank McGee of Philadelphia, who kept a log of some of the incidents of the unusual voyage.

The St. Theodore carried a cargo of 4,000 tons of coal when it sailed from Norfolk for Sabona, Spain, on Dec. 4.

Relates Capture by Raider.

The story of her voyage, as taken from McGee and others of the crew, was from that date as follows:

"In extremely rough weather on Dec. 8 the St. Theodore sighted a strange vessel and when it began to bear down on her suspiciously Capt. Hallam ordered lifeboats swung out. The raider approached, broke out the German flag, and ordered the St. Theodore to stop. Only one funnel showed on the raider. Four torpedo tubes were plainly visible and two five inch guns were mounted forward.

"Later we learned that it also carried four eight inch guns and two other five inchers, as well as several rapid firers mounted on swivels. The raider was painted a dead black and there was an extra funnel that could be raised or lowered.

"The raider circled about us, inquiring as to our cargo. About a half hour after stopping us a boarding party came on deck, took the entire crew off, and placed us aboard the raider.

Find Many Other Prisoners.

"We found there were 450 other prisoners aboard. Then we saw the steamer Yarrowdale, which had been captured. The 450 were transferred from the raider to the Yarrowdale. Those transferred included the crews of the steamers Georgic and Voltaire.

"The raider was commanded by a young officer. As the members of its crew came near us we noticed that they wore a leather band about their wrists with an identification tag attached. The tag bore the name 'Venita.'

"Soon after being taken aboard our crew of thirty-seven men was lined up on deck. Those who were Americans or citizens of other neutral countries were told to step aside. The British were then made prisoner.

"The captain told us we would be safer aboard the raider than on our own ship, and asked us if we did not want to sign up with the German navy and work on the St. Theodore, which was to be used as a collier for the raider. We were told we would be given good treatment.

Forced to Join Navy.

"We thought a long time. No one spoke. Then we were told we might as well sign, as we would have to work on the St. Theodore anyhow. We asked how long we would have to sign for, and were told it would be for an unlimited time. The Germans were all armed and looked threatening, and, as we figured we would have to work under any condition, we signed.

"We were then transferred back to the St. Theodore and followed the raider. On the night of Dec. 13 the raider left us, after putting a German ensign on board in command. We cruised along in the general direction taken by the Venita. The weather was terrific.

"On the night of Dec. 19 our German commander began to look for the raider. We showed three powerful lights at the topmast in the shape of a triangle every half hour. On Dec. 21 the raider was sighted again. We raised our flag and the Venita came up.

"On Dec. 22 men from the raider came aboard and began rigging up a wireless outfit on the St. Theodore. Great quantities of stores were also transferred to our ship. They had been taken off ships that had been sunk.

See Raider Sink Vessels.

"The raider left us Christmas day, but the next morning it had overhauled a ship and called us up to see it sunk. On the same day—the 20th—they started building places for guns on the St. Theodore, and two days later we were transferred back to the Venita.

"On Dec. 31 the raider left the St. Theodore and we steamed away, prisoners, with the crews of three other ships also aboard. The total number of men from sunken or captured ships was 120.

"A French bark was sunk Jan. 2. On Jan. 7 the royal mail steamer Radnorshire was destroyed. Then the Japanese steamer Hudson Maru was captured. The Venita told it to follow us. On Jan. 9 the Minch was sunk and the next day an Ellerman liner was sent down.

"Two days later we left the Venita for good. We were transferred to the Hudson Maru and told to head for Pernambuco. On Jan. 1½ we reached Pernambuco."

MORAL: KEEP OFF THE ICE

Two Boys Who Were Rescued by Police Motor Boat More Than a Mile Off Shore, and the Girl Who Saw Their Distress Signals and Sent Aid.

John Simpson
First Mate Johnson
Edgar Simpson

Eliza, the original Ice-Floe Kid, had nothing on Johnnie and Eddie Simpson, aged respectively 13 and 14 years, who floated out into the lake on a couple of ice cakes yesterday until rescued by Capt. John Dempsey and his crew of police boat No. 2.

The boys had been playing on the ice. The younger jumped on a floe while it started to go out. He yelled to his brother who jumped on a larger cake which was floating in the same direction.

When a half mile off shore the two floes came together and the little fellow jumped on the large uce with his brother.

They waved their arms frantically and called for help.

Doris Zeisler, the 11 year old daughter of Dr. Joseph Zeisler, from a window of her home at 3236 Lake Park avenue saw the distress signals and immediately notified the police.

Capt. John Dempsey and his crew reached the boys when they were a mile and a half out in the lake.

The boys were nearly frozen. In the police boathouse at the Lake street bridge they were given warm clothing and a good dinner.

The boys were then taken to their home at 2834 Vernon avenue. They have decided to keep away from the lake, especially when there is ice on it.

Capt. Charles Carland of the coast guard has issued a warning against going on the lake ice.

"Owing to the great amount of ice that has formed in the lake this winter," he said, "it is extremely dangerous to venture on it. When accidents have occurred it has been almost impossible for the rescue boats to get near the victims. I have requested people to refrain from going out on the ice, but they have not heeded my warning, and now I have instructed the police and coast guard to arrest any people that are found there."

NEW FOOD CURB FOR HOLLAND

AMSTERDAM, via London, Feb. 17.—Additional food rationing will begin in Holland on Monday, the Handelsblad announces today. Every ticketholder in Amsterdam for the week of Feb. 18-24 is entitled to 1,000 grams (a little more than two pounds) of potatoes, 800 grams of rice, fifty of fat, and 100 of soap.

CUTS OFF HEAT AND HOT WATER

PARIS, Feb. 17.—The Havas correspondent at Geneva reports that the Berlin local government has decreed that on account of the lack of freight cars and the impossibility of obtaining sufficient supplies of coal, houses which are served from central heating plants must not have a temperature of more than 59 degrees Fahrenheit. All central heating plants must cease operations on March 31. Hot water supplied by the city to apartments is to be cut off immediately.

FRANCE TRAINS MEN FROM RANKS TO BE OFFICERS

Large Supply of Reserves Provided Each Year by Schools.

BY CAPT. HENRY J. REILLY.
[SPECIAL CABLE TO CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

PARIS, Feb. 17.—After six months' service in the ranks of the French army, the soldiers are privileged to take an examination for entrance into the national infantry, cavalry, artillery, or engineering colleges or the army administration schools.

The successful candidates enter the schools after the completion of one year's service in the ranks. The school course extends one year and then the graduates become candidates for officers, serving as such for six months.

Enter Reserve Service.

They then do six months' duties as second lieutenant and are commissioned as reserve officers and return to civil life with periodical terms of service during a number of years.

Announced by the secretary of war at the time of the first examination each year, a certain number of these reserve officers are commissioned in the regular army as second lieutenants. These cannot become first lieutenants until they are graduated from the school of their own branch of the service.

The reserve officers who have finished the prescribed number of years as such may leave the service or continue in it. If they continue they must attend the maneuvers periodically.

Provides Men When Needed.

This system insured France having at the outbreak of the war a large number of reserve officers in civil life whose military training for three years, plus the periodical maneuvers for a number of years, gave them the knowledge of military affairs, and, above all, the discipline which made them confident in themselves, and, therefore, made the soldiers under them confident in them.

The war has shown their value and also that careful training of the reserve officers is essential. Military training as a side issue in the large American colleges cannot produce good privates, much less reserve officers.

Under Rigid Discipline.

Men in the ranks wishing to take the reserve officers' course during their first year's service are marked periodically by their commanding officers on discipline and military aptitude. Only those are included who are willing to agree to taking the three supplementary periods of instruction in case they are commissioned as reserve officers.

The examination for entrance into the reserve officer school consists of reading, writing, arithmetic, history, geography, an essay on some military subject, drill and field service, and firing regulations, with a practical examination in the drill of the arm of service to which the candidate belongs.

The successful candidates have the rank and pay of sergeants during the year of their school course.

GIVE ROOSEVELT 42 GUNS SALUTE

New York, Feb. 17.—[Special.]—A double salute of twenty-one guns, forty-two in all, was accorded Col. Roosevelt by the batteries of Governor's island when he landed there at noon today accompanied by Mrs. Roosevelt, to attend a luncheon given by Gen. and Mrs. Wood. The presidential salute is twenty-one guns, and the double salute never was fired before, it is believed, so that the colonel was the first in the history of the nation to receive the honor.

RUSSIAN CRY FOR BREAD CIRCLES HALF THE WORLD

Lieut. Pechkoff Here to Enlist Aid for New War Relief.

Here is a fact, brought out by Lieut. Zinovi Pechkoff, Russian soldier in the French foreign legion and adopted son of Maxim Gorky, which, he says, seems to have been overlooked by most people:

"Russian people starve as well as other people; and bread relieves their suffering, as it does the suffering of others who starve."

German-Americans have sent millions to alleviate the suffering of their people in the war. There are French relief funds, and Italian Red Crosses, and Belgium reliefs, and English aids, and Roumanian reliefs galore, eternally working in the United States.

Lost an Arm in Service.

"But Russia has been forgotten," says the lieutenant, who lost an arm in service of the French legion. He was in Italy when the war broke out. The czar issued a ukase permitting Russians to enlist with Russia's allies if they could not get back to Russia.

When Lieut. Pechkoff was discharged from the American ambulance in Paris he came to this country to serve the allies with propaganda. Last month he collected $30,000 for the American ambulance.

As spokesman for the Russian people, Lieut. Pechkoff told yesterday of the organization of the Society of Friends of the Russian Prisoners, with headquarters in Paris. This movement to feed Germany's starving Russian prisoners, hundreds of thousands of them, has received the support of Anatole France, of Aaronson, the Russian Jew, whose sculpture carried Paris by storm, of Mme. Menard Dorian, of Michael Mikhailoff. In Chicago the work has been taken up by Mrs. Robert R. McCormick.

Bread Is Vital Need.

The great problem of the Russian war prisoners is best expressed in a single word:

Bread.

"They must have it," said Pechkoff. "The French and English prisoners receive presents and food from their friends through the central committee in Switzerland. But it takes three weeks to get mail from Russia. And besides the majority of the Russian prisoners are peasants whose relatives couldn't send anything even if communication were possible.

"It is not particularly a question of German atrocities. No doubt the Germans would feed their prisoners if they could. But Germany is herself suffering from a food shortage

Contributions are solicited for the work. Money for this purpose may be sent to Mrs. Robert R. McCormick through THE TRIBUNE. Branches are established from New York to San Francisco.

JAP SITUATION HALTS U. S. IN WAR, RUSS BELIEF

Must Preserve Diplomatic Rear Before Entering Strife, Argument.

PETROGRAD, via London, Feb. 17.—The fact that the United States is not at war with Germany after the lapse of a fortnight since the breaking off of diplomatic relations is the subject of lengthy comment in the Bourse Gazette.

Citing the sinking of the American schooner Lyman M. Law and the British steamer California, the paper says:

"The only new factor that might bring war would be an armed collision on the sea, but since such collision is precluded by the failure of the American government to authorize the arming of merchant ships, it is impossible to imagine what further provocation for war can arise.

"It is too early to reproach the United States for this, however, because there are yet no official details of the sinking of the Law. It is further realized that before passing to a state of actual hostilities it is necessary for America to secure her diplomatic rear, without which there would be a great risk in entering the war. She must first guarantee her interests in the Pacific."

Gets Jap Guarantees?

The writer mentions alleged diplomatic exchanges betwen the United States and Japan and continues:

"America could not be on guard in the far east if engaged in a war with Germany, and therefore requires proofs of Japan's good intentions. Such proofs are understood to have been given by Tokio.

"If it is true that friendship has been assured between these two nations the fact will have an enormous influence on world policy and the greatest profit from such development would accrue to the near east allies of Japan—namely: Great Britain and Russia.

Last German Hope Gone.

"It would mean that Germany had lost all hope of sea domination and was expelled forever from the far east.

"Japan, in giving such guarantees, acts in full solidarity with the allies. The friendship between America and Japan cannot relegate to the second place of importance the relations between Russia and Japan. On the contrary, it would give those relations more stability."

British Navy Needs 400,000.

LONDON, Feb. 17.—A force of 400,000 men is required for the British navy, according to the naval estimates for the coming financial year, which provide for that number.

TIME, WORK, AND WEATHER JOIN TO END EMBARGO

Railway Officials Declare Congestion Is Rapidly Being Relieved.

Good weather, time, and the Washington order directing that a certain number of food cars go east and a corresponding number of "empties" come west daily, will slowly but surely solve the freight congestion, in the belief of traffic officials here.

It is estimated that the combination of these elements will raise the traffic blockade within a month. The Pennsylvania system and other eastern roads are marshaling "empties" for the west in an array which, in the words of an Illinois Central official, "will be a Godsend if it materializes."

"Two of the biggest things we've needed, we've got," said Henry C. Barlow, traffic manager of the Association of Commerce. "The order of the interstate commerce commission compelling coöperation among the eastern railroads, is one thing, and good weather is the other. These two elements, plus time, will solve the trouble."

Pennsylvania Official Hopeful.

"Traffic movements are good, and, with good weather, the blockade will be limited in a short time," asserted A. M. Schoyer, resident vice president of the Pennsylvania lines.

"The situation is getting better every day," said Frank T. Bentley, traffic manager of the Illinois Steel company. "The weather is the big element now. With weather below zero, a locomotive loses from 30 to 40 per cent of its efficiency. With the rush of business and the recent cold, the roads needed about twice their regular motive power. Therefore they fell behind.

"No one can tell how bad the blockade is. The railroads can judge by their car orders, but that doesn't tell the whole story, for many shippers, knowing that they can't get cars, are holding out their orders.

Open Cars Moving Rapidly.

"Freight that can be shipped in open cars is moving rapidly. The railroads in the east have provided much ground storage space and it is now the package freight, grain, flour, foodstuffs, and perishables, for which no storage space is available owing to the export stoppage, that is tied up. With good weather, however, I look for a great improvement."

There is a prospect of a "hitch" in the rush to catch up on the part of the railroads, however, as the weather man foresaw a ten above temperature for today and snow flurries for tomorrow.

Autos Run Own "Trains."

Deliveries of automobiles in Chicago, delayed because of the tieup of railway transportation, are being made by overland "auto trains." This was explained yesterday by automobile men, who said their deliveries were far behind orders. Two "trains" of 105 cars each arrived in Chicago yesterday.

Army Enlists Some 350 Men Here in Two Weeks

The "censorship" on figures concerning the number of army enlistments in Chicago relaxed yesterday when Capt. Franklin R. Kenney announced that approximately three companies of enlisted men, or about one-third of a regiment, had been recruited during the first two weeks of the "join up" campaign.

The estimated total of recruits passing through Chicago army recruiting headquarters up to last night approached 850. The exact number up to Friday night, the captain said, was 319, but this was augmented yesterday by a heavy Saturday enrollment. The recruiting office was open until 1 o'clock this morning.

At Least 1,200 Applied.

Figuring that one-fourth of the applicants were accepted, there were not less than 1,200 men who applied in Chicago during the first two weeks. There were others besides this number, however, who are not included in the records, it is said.

"I am satisfied with the start," Capt. Kenney asserted. "It shows what Chicago can do. We are not going to slow up the campaign any but are going ahead with more vim than ever. I look for this number of recruits to be surpassed during the next two weeks.

"One of the greatest assurances that the climax of this recruiting campaign is yet to be reached is in the manner in which members of the Grand Army of the Republic are responding to requests to aid us get enlisted men. The veterans are responding all over our territory and will do much to swell the total number of recruits in the next few weeks."

7,000 Recruits Over U. S.

Capt. Kenney said that Chicago furnishes about one-twentieth of the total of the army's recruits. On this basis it is estimated about 7,000 men were recruited throughout the country during the last two weeks.

One of the branches of the G. A. R. which the recruiting headquarters expects to utilize for publicity purposes is the fife and drum corps of Grant post. C. O. Holmes, leader, has offered the services of the organization.

Boy Scouts also may form a part of the recruiting system. Seth J. Halper, captain of the Twenty-fifth regiment of Boy Scouts, offered the services of two companies of scouts.

The scouts may be used at various posts when the G. A. R. gets plans in full swing for aiding the army in its recruiting campaign.

Several out of town posts of the G. A. R., whose officers saw Capt. Kenney's appeal for aid in THE TRIBUNE, have already promised assistance.

Both the army and navy recruiting stations will be open today.

The total recruits accepted by the navy up to yesterday since two weeks ago was about 100.

Will Visit Great Lakes.

Three thousand teachers from Illinois, Wisconsin, and Michigan will visit the naval training station at Great Lakes Feb. 22. Recruits now are being received at the Great Lakes station at the rate of sixty daily, according to Capt. Moffett, commandant.

Honor graduates from accredited military schools will be accepted, after passing qualification tests, to fill existing vacancies in the rank of second lieutenant in the marine corps, according to Capt. William Brackett, chief marine corps recruiting officer in Chicago. This is occasioned by the increase in personnel provided under the new defense act and because sufficient naval academy graduates are not available.

HOT WAR DEBATE IN CONGRESS

ent that the views of the members differed widely on what course the United States should follow in case Germany committed an overt act bringing about war.

Representative Reavis of Nebraska spoke strongly against general participation in the European war. Representative London was against war on any condition.

When he asserted there was danger in the old slogan of standing by the president when "the president stands on his head," he produced cheering from the pacifists; likewise when he declared the only issue involved in the present crisis is whether or not "munition makers shall be allowed to sell munitions" the pacifists applauded him.

Pleads Against Division.

After asserting what kind of a war he believed the United States should wage on Germany if Germany brings about a war, Mr. Lenroot said:

"If we are called upon to act in this matter it will be the most solemn responsibility ever laid or to be laid upon any of us. If any member in that hour is influenced in the least by party politics, by prejudice, by sympathy for either side in the European war, he will be untrue to the oath of office he has taken here. If ever in our lives we should be American citizens only, it will be then.

"I am not so greatly alarmed about possible trouble with Germany as I am about a divided country here. Divisions now may not only prevent peaceful settlement of our quarrel with Germany but may result in disorder within our own borders, with consequences much more serious than war with any foreign power.

Referendum Grave Peril.

"The propaganda now going on throughout the country to avoid war at any cost is a greater peril to the republic than war with Germany would be. The proposition for a war referendum is likewise a great peril. Suppose at this time a referendum was held. Suppose 10,000,000 votes were cast, 5,100,000 for war and 4,900,000 against it. If war is declared on this vote, does it require a prophet to foresee possible civil war among ourselves. Or suppose 4,900,000 vote for war and 5,100,000 against, and we refuse then to exercise force to maintain our rights, how long would it be then before we would have no place upon the seas anywhere, England with impunity cutting us out when to her advantage and Germany doing likewise when to her profit.

"We each have duties and responsibilities here which we can delegate to no one, chief among which is to do that which will best preserve those liberties which the fathers of the republic gained for us and preserve this union which we have each sworn to support."

$25 LEFT IN BANK VAULT AS AGED OWNER VANISHES

Landis Acts in Pitte Case —One Couple Loses $34,000.

It doesn't look like a bank. As a matter of fact, it isn't a bank. It is the ramshackle, dingy, shabby ghost of a bank—a private bank. The funds are gone. The banker has disappeared. Only the depositors are left. And most of them are left penniless, the hoardings of lifetimes of denial swept away.

The neighborhood depositors of the defunct private bank of Robert L. Pitte & Co., situated in the Bohemian-Polish-Lithuanian neighborhood at Twentieth and Peoria streets do not believe that the 72 year old head of the institution, Robert L. Pitte, is dead. They believe, in spite of the statement of his attorneys, that he is in hiding in Chicago waiting for the row to blow over.

$3,000 Forgery Charged.

The private bank was placed in the hands of a receiver on Jan. 29. On Feb. 13 Pitte was arrested, charged with forging a trust deed on property valued at $3,000. The warrant was sworn out by Otto V. Klenha, a real estate broker. When the bankruptcy petition was filed liabilities were scheduled at $180,072 and assets at $245,324.

After listening to the testimony of Mrs. James Janota, wife of a milk dealer, 1906 Fisk street, that she and her husband lost $34,000, their life's savings, in the Pitte bank, Judge Landis delivered an indignant commentary on private banking conditions. Janota told the court he and his wife had been doing business at the bank for thirty years. His wife said Pitte gave them nothing but receipts for their money, there being no passbooks at the bank.

$25 Cash in Vault.

F. F. Hummell, attorney for the Central Trust company, receivers, said that $25 was found in the vault of the bank when it was searched for assets. It was stated there is $30,000 in real estate assets and $4,000 in notes, part of which have no value. Less than $300 was found on deposit in other banks.

Hugh L. Pitte, son of the aged banker, formerly was a member of the city council and now is secretary of the county civil service commission. He said he was not aware of his father's financial condition, but supposed him to be a wealthy man.

"My father made me a member of the firm," he admitted, "but I had nothing to do with its affairs. I was a silent partner."

Judge Landis issued a subpœna for Michael Rosenberg, 1500 South Sawyer avenue, who signed Pitte's bond, and one for Frank P. Danisch, clerk of the Municipal court.

Family Connections Lose.

Father and son formerly lived in the rickety building in which the bank was located. Before the smash there lived with the Pittes, according to neighbors, Robert Pitte's three nieces, Olga and Rose Vrana, and Julia Necker. Mrs. Necker is still living in the house. The rest have moved. Mrs. Necker's mother was a depositor and lost $3,000 when the bank failed.

Another neighbor, Mrs. Louis Chihak, a widow, who has a wee candy store at 2012 South Peoria street, lost $3,700, leaving her without a cent. Neither Mrs. Necker nor Mrs. Chihak believe Robert Pitte is dead. They think Carl Kalbfleish, 4100 West Madison street, knows his whereabouts.

Kalbfleish and Olga Vrana are engaged to be married. Rose Vrana, shortly after she left her uncle's house, married a man named Frank Ine. At the present time Olga lives at the home of her brother, John Vrana, in Oak Park. It was there Pitte was taken after the arrest. When he was released on bail he stayed for the night at the home of Frank Ine, at Euclid and Fillmore streets.

Others Figure in Case.

"Olga told me that the night after Pitte was arrested Ine took him to the Oak Park elevated station in an automobile," said Mrs. Chihack. "This was last Tuesday. Rosie was in the automobile."

She said that yesterday a truck came to the Pitte building and men, directed by Kalbfleish, removed a phonograph and a piano from the house and drove way.

"I don't know where the old man is now," said Mrs. Necker, "but I'm sure he lived at Kalbfleish's house for a while. I am positive he is not dead."

There is no record of Hugh Pitte's address in the telephone directory. It is said he is living at the home of Robert Vrana, at Homan and Nineteenth streets. The Pittes, Mrs. Necker and Mrs. Chihak say, own several houses in that neighborhood, including the house occupied by Vrana.

Experts Will Speak Before Salesmanship Club Meeting

The Salesmanship Club of Chicago will meet in the gold room of the Congress hotel tomorrow evening. Roy F. Soule, editor of Hardware Age, New York, will speak on "Practical Salesmanship." Mr. Soule has lectured in every state in the union. He was for fifteen years an active salesman. Grant H. Nablo, general sales manager of the Gray Motor company, Detroit, will speak on "Character Analysis."

Why the Experienced Motorist Chooses the Franklin Town Car For All-Year Use

THERE are two important facts concerning Franklin owners, worthy of every motorist's attention.

One is that the majority of Franklin owners have had experience with other fine motor cars.

The other is: It was Franklin owners themselves who demonstrated the practicability of Franklin Enclosed Cars for all-year and all-road use.

What they have found out by actual use warrants our making this statement:

No owner of a Franklin Town Car is willing to forego its comforts, even for a day.

The car is light, is easy on tires and gasoline, goes over the road restfully. Dirt and dust, sun glare and sunburn, rain and wind, and enveloping motor toggery are annoyances no longer.

Picture all you would have in a motor carriage? Then from the masterly Packard line you may realize your ideal

It takes time—and accumulated knowledge and skill—to bring the products of art or industry to their finest and most individual expression.

Back of every great picture—and every great design in automobiles—stands a man or an organization with the faith and force to work out original ideas in new ways.

America's largest staff of automobile engineers, out of a rich, time-tested experience, has created an unmatched line of motor carriages—for your Spring selection.

A car for every taste—now!

But already certain types are nearing exhaustion—in spite of Packard's forehanded preparation for the greatest automobile year.

A powerful, quick, luxurious Twin-six? Surely, in it you may realize your ideal.

WEALTHY WOMEN IN SKIDMORE'S GRIP, HOYNE SAYS

Thinks Saloonkeeper Will Call on Them for Help.

Touching off some more dynamite in the police vice scandals, State's Attorney Hoyne entered a sector of the investigation last night that threatens to disturb some Chicago women whose limousines and purples and fine linens have gained them an air of respectability.

These revelations, made in the confessions of women from the west side vice belt, have come in the inquiry preparatory to the prosecution of William A. Skidmore. Skidmore's name played a prominent part in the day's doings, both in the state's attorney's office, where it was learned that Skidmore was preparing to call upon certain women of wealth to come to his aid, and in Springfield, where a battle for his freedom was begun by his attorney, Charles E. Erbstein.

Skidmore will be taken to Springfield tomorrow and will appear before the Supreme court.

Women Compromised.

Mr. Hoyne's investigation yesterday resulted in the questioning of four women. All of them are said to have made statements that drag into the vice exposé the names of women who are prominent in affairs of a social sort and whose homes are reputable beyond question.

It was said some of these women have been compromised in one way or another by Skidmore and that some of them have been enabled to play the rôles of rich women through their commercial association with illicit traffic.

The four women were questioned by Assistant State's Attorneys McKay, Buehler, and Walker. A number of others will be booked shortly in downtown police stations. It is the inference that these women have not yet confessed, but are to be held under charges directly accusing them.

The name of one woman, Libby Martin, was brought out. She was mentioned in the hearing before Judge Olson, when Mr. Hoyne sought a warrant for the arrest of Chief Healey. Samuel P. Thrasher, superintendent of the Committee of Fifteen, said she was operating a resort without interference.

Hoyne's Statement.

Following the investigations yesterday the following statement was given out by Mr. Hoyne:

"Of the people indicted in the graft investigations Skidmore is easily the most vicious in the scope and breadth of his operations. For instance, in the case of women who went to the saloon he operated to pay police protection Skidmore was not satisfied with receiving this money but the women generally had to remain in the saloon and spend most of their cash. Some of them, to escape this extra tax, sent their payment by messenger.

"Four of the women who have made statements are listed in the green book which was found in the clothes of Lieut. A. M. White when Tom Costello's pay-off joint at 109 North Dearborn street was raided. This book shows that women paid for protection in sums ranging from $25 to $150 a month or higher. They were listed under the head 'cannot be raided.'

"The largest amounts for protection were paid by shady hotels. In the case of disorderly flats the amount of protection, or 'the honest tax,' was graded by the number of girls working in the apartment.

"Skidmore's field of political and financial activity was confined in the main to preying upon women. He is relying even now in seeking to arrange for his defense in getting money from women, some of whom have considerable wealth."

MUFFLED DRUMS

Boy Scout Whose Death by Pistol Is Grieved by Family and Troop Mates.

Earl Albert

The fact that the coroner's jury decided that the death of 14 year old Earl Albert was due to an accidental discharge of a pistol did not relieve the suffering of the mother, father, brother, and two sisters in their home at 2011 West Madison street yesterday. Even the little canary tucked its head under its wing and did not cheep all day long.

Dorothy said her mother seldom reproved Earl and that that was what made them grieve that the accident should have happened when Earl had been sent to his room for disobedience and not allowed to go to a meeting of the boy scouts on Friday night.

The funeral will be held this afternoon from the Metropolitan Church of Christ to Oakridge cemetery, and members of the Signal Corps, troop 334, boy scouts, will act as pallbearers.

William Thomson, captain of the corps, said that a memorial service of the boy scouts would be held the following Sunday and that their flag would be draped and their drums muffled.

BERIBBONED DOG CLEW TO LOST $10,000 JEWELS

Finder Offered $1,000 Cash as Reward or Ordeal Before Courts.

If the present possessor of a collection of diamonds valued variously between $10,000 and $20,000, lost last Friday afternoon at State and Washington streets, will surrender them, he or she will be paid $1,000 spot cash—"no questions asked."

If the petite blonde who picked them up, the attractive young woman who accompanied her, or the stout, nattily attired man who joined them do not surrender the gems they will be taken before Julius Marquart, a chauffeur, when caught. Marquart witnessed the theft and if he identifies them prosecution will follow.

The probability of capture of the three is made wellnigh a certainty through the fact that one of the women was leading a white fox terrier dog with brown spots. The animal wore a leather shoulder harness, in which was tied a wide green ribbon bow.

Lost at Hairdresser's.

The task of recovering the gems has been placed in the hands of the Mooney & Boland detective agency, together with $1,000 in cash for a reward. The jewels, in a beaded bag, were dropped in front of the Burnham hairdressing and bath parlors by Miss H. DeWardner, whose home is understood to be in New York. The loser, fearing publicity, declined to give the police her Chicago address. Those who have investigated, however, assert she is the sister of Mrs. Ida P. Stehle of 908 East Forty-second place.

Mrs. Stehle is reticent as to the identity of the loser of the gems, though admitting she was present when the loss was discovered. Mrs. John Dadie of 1419 West Congress street, who was in the parlors at the time, is certain, however, that Mrs. Stehle and Miss De Wardner were together and Mrs. Dadie's chauffeur, Julius Marquart, is equally positive he can identify the young women who found the gems.

Investigation in the Burnham establishment developed that the young woman, after picking up the bag, entered the place, looked inside the receptable, and when approached by an attendant declined to be waited upon and departed.

William J. Sutherland of the Mooney & Boland agency said the young woman was brought to the agency by "some most responsible persons" and that he had agreed to keep her identity a secret.

Mr. Sutherland also announced that the agency would pay liberally for information that would lead to the return of the gems.

Roentgen Society Adjourns.

The second annual meeting of the Western Roentgen society closed in the Hotel Sherman yesterday afternoon. Dr. M. B. Titterington of St. Louis, Mo., was elected president, Dr. B. H. Orndorf of Chicago first vice president, Dr. H. Lowry of Chicago treasurer. The next meeting will be held in Kansas City, Mo.

BOY SCOUTS AND Y. M. C. A. PLAN TO JOIN RED CROSS

Leaders Move to Form Hospital Units—Bank to Organize Men

The importance of men in the Red Cross service in case of war was emphasized yesterday at a luncheon at the Hotel La Salle of representatives of the Red Cross, the Y. M. C. A., and the Boy Scouts.

First among the large business houses to start recruiting a sanitary training detachment was the First National bank. There will be a meeting of the employés of the bank Tuesday noon to consider the work.

John W. Champion, secretary of the local chapter of the Red Cross, told the men at the luncheon that he expected to hear early next week from many other firms who have been asked, through the Chicago Association of Commerce, to organize hospital units.

Officials of the Boy Scout movement said there would be at least one detachment of sixty-one men made up of scout masters in the city. Dr. H. W. Gentles, chairman of the first aid committee of the Red Cross, announced that the executives of the Y. M. C. A. will hold a meeting on Tuesday and discuss the question of recruiting the young men in their membership.

The men are used, in case of war, in the zone of the advance. They care for the wounded on the firing line and assist in getting wounded soldiers to the field hospitals, and then to the base hospitals. There are no women nurses forward of the base hospitals.

Several hundred women will start training in Red Cross work tomorrow in the Tower building.

WOMEN IN RED CROSS UNIT.

One of the best organized and most active of the Red Cross units that recently has been formed is the base hospital unit No. 14, which is composed of St. Luke's and Michael Reese hospitals.

Mrs. Heaton Owsley is chairman of the St. Luke's section; Mrs. John W. Crerar, vice chairman; Mrs. Chauncey Borland, treasurer; Mrs. Livingston T. Dickson, recording secretary; Mrs. A. J. Pflaum, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Claude C. Hopkins, chaiman of the publicity committee. The captains are:

Mrs. J. H. Defrees,
Mrs. S. P. Child,
Mrs. A. Ryerson,
Mrs. L. L. McArthur,
Mrs. Robert Harvey,
Miss Louise Herrick,
Mrs. John Rouse,
Mrs. John W. Crerar,
Mrs. J. Ogden Armour
Mrs. Norman Williams,
Mrs. G. J. Farnsworth
Mrs. William Merrill,

Mrs. Lester E. Frankenthal is chairman of the Michael Reese section; Mrs. A. G. Becker, vice chairman; Mrs. Edwin G. Foreman, treasurer; Mrs. A. J. Pflaum, recording secretary, and Mrs. Max Epstein, chairman of the publicity committee. The captains for this hospital are:

LULL IN FIGHT FOR CUSTODY OF DELBRIDGE GIRL

Marjorie Delbridge became only a passive subject for argument yesterday when for the first time in weeks her custody remained undisputed for the moment. But it was only a temporary lull in the battle for the possession of the 14 year old white girl between the Juvenile court officers and the Negro contingent represented in "Mammy" Cammila Jackson.

Assistant State's Attorney Robert E. Hogan would not say where the girl is being kept. He said she is in safe hands and will remain there for the present.

"There will be nothing done until I have a conference with Mr. Hoyne," said Hogan. "I am going to lay the whole matter before him and then will be decided the future course."

Mr. Hogan was notified that Charles S. McNett, attorney for the Chicago Law Enforcement league, has been employed to aid Mrs. Jackson in her fight for possession of the girl.

The Book That Couldn't Be Written Today

THE war would make it editorially impossible to produce the new Encyclopaedia Britannica today.

The war has made it mechanically impossible to publish this famous work today, even if it could be writen.

One of the reasons why the Britannica stands out as the greatest work of its kind is that the 1,500 contributors were chosen regardless of what country they lived in, on the basis that each man was the best man in the world to handle the particular subjects. This editorial feature makes the new Britannica the most universal book of reference in existence.

These facts are some of the reasons why the new Britannica could not be duplicated today.

Today it would be impossible to organize this great international board of contributors and obtain from them what they gave to the Britannica when it was compiled. Some of them, indeed, are in the trenches. Most of the others have a direct interest in the war and could not write free from a strong unconscious, if not bitter, prejudice. They could not present national or historical subjects in a neutral way. Even the Americans, writing upon European subjects, would find it difficult to restrain their feeling one way or the other.

If the Britannica were not already in existence it could not be prepared today. The present edition was writen before men's passions were aflame and their judgments warped.

Even if it were written and had only to be put into book form, this, too, would be impossible.

The reason why the Britannica stands as an unexampled triumph of bookmaking as it does of knowledge-collecting lies in the use of India paper. India paper—so extraordinarily thin, so exceptionally strong, so opaque—makes a volume of 1,000 pages only one inch thick and as easy to handle as a magazine.

The Britannica could not be printed today on India paper any more than its contents could be duplicated. War has cut off all importation of the flax necessary to the manufacture of this marvelous paper.

The fact that the war has made the new Britannica impossible of duplication either in content or form makes the possession of a set something beyond the mere owning of a great reference work. But if you are to own a set printed on genuine India paper, you must get it now. For the only ones available are those in stock at the present time. Their number is limited. Decide today to own a set and select your issue and binding.

Of the total number of sets of the Cambridge Issue printed on India paper, less than 5 per cent remain unsold.

This is the large-page, large-type, wide-margin issue. 29 volumes, each one inch thick, 30,000 pages, 41,000 articles, 1,500 contributors, 15,000 illustrations, full-page plates and maps. (For prices of the popular "Handy Volume" Issue see below.)

Sets of the Cambridge issue are offered on the following terms: Cloth Binding—$166.75 cash, or $5 with order and 36 monthly payments of $5 each.

Three-quarter Red Morocco—$203.25 cash, or $5 with order; 44 monthly payments of $5 each.

Limp Suede, Full Leather—$255.25 cash, or $5 with order; 54 monthly payments of $5 each (a very original bookcase is included).

Genuine Full Morocco—$267.50 cash, or $5 with order; 57 monthly payments of $5 each.

The popular-size, popular-price "Handy Volume" Issue is identical with the Cambridge Issue in text and illustrations, with a smaller page and smaller type, and sells for about 60% less. Sets are offered on these terms:

Cloth Binding—$74.70 cash, or $1 down; 27 monthly payments of $3 each.

Full Brown Sheep Morocco Grained—$90.75 cash, or $1 down; 28 monthly payments of $3.50 each.

Three-quarter Crushed Green Levant, Morocco Grained—$104.40 cash, or $1 down; 28 monthly payments of $4 each.

Full Crushed Green Levant, Morocco Grained—$117.55 cash, or $1 down; 28 monthly payments of $4.50 each.

Which do you prefer—the large or the small book? To help you decide we will gladly send, on request, for your inspection, a volume of both the Cambridge and the "Handy Volume" Issues in any binding desired. But act at once. The number of sets in some of the bindings is very low.

BOND DENIES AUTO THEFTS; SEES FRAMEUP

Decries Hoyne's Supposed Immunity Methods in Defending Self.

Era Bond, recently extradited from Minneapolis and termed by State's Attorney Hoyne "the king of the automobile trust," yesterday recited his side of the circumstances which have placed him in the Cook county jail, facing a string of five indictments. Bond is a man about 45 years, prosperous looking, and self-sufficient.

"Since Nov. 20, 1915, the authorities of both Cook county and Hennepin county have been doing their utmost to get the 'goods' on me," he said. "It is true they have me locked up at present, but he who laughs last laughs best, and, believe me, I will laugh last.

"Although I have kept silent all these months, I feel, in justice to myself and others, I should make a statement. This trumped up charge against me dates back to November, 1915, when Chief of Police Oscar Martinson of Minneapolis traced an automobile to a Minneapolis garage. I bought that car and do not deny it. As it happened, the car had been stolen, so I am told, from Schuyler C. Schwartz of Chicago.

Bought Car in Good Faith.

"I bought that car in good faith and had the bill of sale in my possession from a man named Wallace. I paid Wallace $300 for it and also transferred two lots in Montana to him. It was just about this time that Earl Harris and Edward Arnheim were arrested in Minneapolis for 'prowling a hotel.' Chief Martinson recognized both Harris and Arnheim as being wanted in Chicago for stealing automobiles.

"They were asked if they knew Era Bond, and both denied they knew me. Within a few days they were sent back to Chicago. I want to say at this time that I do not know Harris and never did know him. Harris at present is at liberty on a $500 bond, although he faces ten indictments.

"In August, 1916, I was in Davenport, Ia., on a real estate deal when the Chicago police wired the Davenport authorities to hold me. My lawyer, A. M. Cary, sued out a writ of habeas corpus and I was released. I immediately came to Chicago with Mr. Cary and stayed at the Hotel Sherman. When Mr. Hoyne learned I was in this city he caused my arrest, but I was released the next morning, as the state's attorney said he had no charge on which he could hold me. I then returned to Minneapolis and thought that my troubles on these trumped up charges were over.

That Harris Affidavit.

"On Oct. 6, 1916, which, by the way, was just a few days previous to his release, Harris swore to an affidavit that I had hired him to steal automobiles for me. He swore that he had seen me pay Nutter, who died recently in Cook county jail, $500 in the Fort Dearborn hotel to get these machines for me.

"Then I knew I was being 'framed,' and that they had held Harris in jail for over five months in an effort to make him 'squeal.' I fought requisition in Minneapolis for months, feeling that during that time Hoyne's office would prosecute Harris on at least one of the ten indictments here. I felt that Harris must have been offered immunity after he was released on a paltry $500 bond, which, by the way, was signed by his own wife.

"Since this Mr. Hoyne has obtained indictments against me on different charges, conspiracy and receiving stolen property, and the only witnesses who involve me are these two men, Arnheim and Harris. They are protecting their companions and themselves in furnishing Mr. Hoyne with the opportunity of trying to railroad a 'millionaire,' as he terms me, to the penitentiary.

"There is as much truth to my being a millionaire as there is to the charges against me.

Tells of Leniency Offer.

"One of Mr. Hoyne's assistants made this proposition to me since my return to Chicago.

"'Now, look here, Mr. Bond,' he said, 'you have spent many thousands of dollars on this trouble of yours. We admire you for your good fight, and we are not after you as an individual, but we want to get at the root of this evil, so we make you this offer. We are willing to 'trade' and we are willing to treat you accordingly if you will tell us what you know.'

"I had nothing to tell them. I am still in jail, under $37,500 bonds.

"It was an easy matter for Wallace to sell me that car, because he gave me a legitimate bill of sale for it, but the joke of it all was that I never at any time had possession of this car, because the police got it before I did.

"Mr. Hoyne's reputation as a prosecuting attorney is wide, and I have many times read of his successes, but it has struck me forcibly that his greatest successes have been obtained by criminals who have claimed to deliver the 'higher-up,' and it seems to me that all the habitual crook needs in his business is to use a prominent man's name and make him the 'goat.'

"I feel like issuing a warning to those who are liable to get into the clutches of the law through the 'man lower down.'"

Utilities Board Hears North Shore Gas Case

Hearing on the complaint of the city of Winnetka against the North Shore Gas company was held yesterday by the state public utilities commission.

The officials of the gas company said that the faulty service during the cold spell was due to the freezing of the mains in Waukegan, due to the condensation of the gas.

A. S. B. Little, engineer for the commission, said he believed that the cold weather, with too large a quantity of naphthaline in the gas, caused the pipes to become plugged. Commissioner Shaw

CANADA TO KEEP UP PAPER PRICES, BANKERS HEAR

J. G. Rosebush, Warns of Plans of "Trust"—Gold an Item.

Soaring print paper prices may remain at their present altitude after the war as the result of the formation of a Canadian paper trust, in the opinion of Judson G. Rosebush, president of the Patten Paper company, Ltd., of Appleton, Wis., who addressed the Bankers' club of Chicago at the one hundred and thirty-ninth meeting and banquet of the club, held last night in the gold room of the Congress hotel.

"The ruling price for print paper after the war may be largely influenced by the strength of the recently formed Canadian association of export print paper manufacturers," Mr. Rosebush asserted. "Since the frontier mills have heretofore controlled the price of print paper, it is easy to see that a strong Canadian association which would be essentially removed from the operation of the Sherman anti-trust act may result in prices that contain an element of monopoly value."

Sees Cheapening of Gold.

Increased cost of manufacture and an increased demand have been assigned as the cause of the present price of print paper. Mr. Rosebush found another cause. He asserted that the high price of paper is fundamentally caused by cheapening of the value of the gold dollar itself. Gold bullion, measured by silver bullion, he said, has depreciated 30 per cent in the last thirty months because the central European powers have not been able to bid for gold.

"In this great increase of the gold stock, I think, is to be found the outstanding reason for a great part of the advance in the price of paper and other commodities," he said.

Favors Protective Measure.

Congressman Warren Gard of Ohio, another speaker, declared that the bill now in the United States senate, exempting American enterprises from the operations of the antitrust law when doing business outside the United States ought to be passed, in order to give American business men a chance to meet combinations formed abroad.

The congressman advocated preparedness for war, child labor legislation, and such laws as the workman's compensation act. He asserted that "the education of the alien" will protect the United States from internal attack if war comes.

Driver Held for Manslaughter.

Henry Lartigue of 5516 West Monroe street, a chauffeur, was held to the grand jury on a charge of manslaughter yesterday by a coroner's jury which investigated the death of Laddie Budilowski, 16 years old, 1847 Throop street, who was struck by an automobile truck driven by Lartigue.

BUSINESS MEN AIM $1,000,000 BANK AT SHARKS

Fifty Leaders of Industry and Finance Back the Plan.

Chicago is to have a Morris plan bank before the end of spring. It will be capitalized at $1,000,000. More than fifty captains of industry and finance have allied themselves with the movement as an organization committee. As soon as a location can be secured and the management and organization completed the bank will open its doors.

Announcement of the decision was made yesterday by J. Allen Haines, secretary of the original committee appointed to "consider and endeavor to promote" the project. The first meeting of the executive committee of the large organization committee will take place Tuesday afternoon to take up the organization work of the bank.

Aimed at Loan Sharks.

The Morris plan banks are aimed at the loan shark. Character is the security on which the loans are made. Thrift is said to be the result of the Morris plan of industrial loans and investments.

For more than a month, following the introduction of the proposal to Chicago at a dinner at the Blackstone hotel Jan. 10, the original committee has been meeting several times a week. A legal opinion was secured from Attorney John S. Miller to the effect that the banking laws of Illinois do not prevent the Morris plan banks from operating.

Organization Commttee.

One of the recommendations was the formation of an organization committee, on which the following have consented to serve:

Joseph E. Otis,

Cheap Power for Your Factory

Water, Steam or Electric

The supply of coal and gas is diminishing and their cost is increasing. But with electricity produced by water power, the manufacturer is not concerned with coal strikes or delays in the delivery of coal.

Fulton is located on the Great Falls of the Oswego River, 25 miles north of Syracuse and 10 miles south of Oswego.

It is served by three important steam railroads and one electric railroad; also by the Barge Canal, with water transportation to and from all points on the Great Lakes; the River and Gulf of the St. Lawrence, the Hudson River and Tidewater.

Overnight from New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Montreal and Boston.

Close to your own material market, in the heart of the Eastern selling area, and supplied with cheap power—Fulton is the practical city for your factory.

6,000 electric h. p. converted and ready for your factory. If you need more power, it can be provided by installing wheels and generators to utilize water now running over the dams.

Are you considering an Eastern factory? Let us send you details of our power facilities and our rates.

Do You Need Power and Equipment for Special Work?

We will sell or lease one hydro-steam 1,800 h. p. electric plant located on the Barge Canal; also have available a new steam turbine plant, 2,300 h. p. capacity, located on private trestle switch from New York Central and N. Y. O. & W. Railroads. Both of these plants fully developed electrically—good factory sites. Further information on request.

18TH WARD VOTE FRAUD SYSTEM TOLD TO HOYNE

Acting on complaint of Shelby M. Singleton, secretary of the Citizens' association, that there appear to have been 1,000 registration frauds in the Eighteenth ward in connection with the coming primary, State's Attorney Hoyne had subpœnas served on the election board yesterday.

Assistant State's Attorney John Byrne and several detectives served the subpœnas and received the polling lists and registration books of the ward. These were taken to the prosecutor's office and given to assistant state's attorneys to review.

Providing evidence of alleged frauds is corroborated, Mr. Hoyne last night announced he would lay the matter before the grand jury early this week. The prosecutor said he would not be astonished if sufficient evidence was unearthed on which to start prosecutions.

Candidate Complains.

In the Eighteenth ward John T. Touhy, Assistant State's Attorney Michael F. Sullivan's candidate for alderman, is battling with Barney Grogan for the Democratic nomination. Touhy has complained to Mr. Hoyne that registration frauds have been practiced to defeat him.

Statements from investigators for the Citizens' association and from west siders were taken in the state's attorney's office. Following this the reform association's secretary, Mr. Singleton, issued a signed statement in which he declared that the organization's inquiry into conditions in the Eighteenth ward indicates wholesale attempts at fraud and negligence on the part of election officials.

"This convinces us that the registration lists in most of the precincts canvassed have been systematically stuffed with a view to voting a large number of fictitious names by means of repeaters," he said.

Lodging House Voters.

From one West Madison street lodging house, he asserted, fifty-eight persons who do not live there are registered. This was true of thirty-seven names in a West Jackson boulevard lodging house. In many instances persons were registered from vacant houses or vacant lots. The Nineteenth, Twentieth, and Twenty-third precincts of the ward, the association learned, show more than 100 discrepancies in each precinct.

"In one case an investigator employed by the Citizens' association went to a west side rooming house," said Assistant State's Attorney William H. Duval. "He had with him the lodging house affidavit filed by the owner.

"'Do Shelby Singleton, Michael F. Sullivan, and B. Grogan live here?" the investigator asked, and the proprietor in each case answered in the affirmative."

Investigators in making a house to house canvass unearthed what appeared to be a great conspiracy among certain lodging house proprietors to deceive canvassers as to the number of qualified voters living in their houses. To refresh their memories these proprietors in many instances had lists posted in hallways in order to carry on this deception, it appeared.

Dead Men Registered.

The state's attorney was told that dead men and inmates of the penitentiary and the bridewell appeared on the poll books. Most of the judges and clerks of election in the ward are amenable to one faction, and for this reason perpetration of frauds is easy, the prosecutor was told.

Charles W. Hawthorne to Join Institute Staff

Charles W. Hawthorne, painter, will become a member of the teaching staff of the Art institute on March 1, it was announced by institute officials yesterday.

Mr. Hawthorne is a native of Illinois. He has received many awards, among which are the silver medal from the Buenos Aires exposition, 1910; Clarke prize, National Academy of Design, 1911; Isidor medal, National Academy of Design, 1914; Temple gold medal, Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, 1915; silver medal, Panama-Pacific exposition, 1915.

CRIME OF THE WEEK

A Seven Day Chicago Record.

Murders	7
Holdups	40
Burglaries and larcenies	275
Pickpocket cases	4
Con game cases	6
Stolen autos (not recovered)	4
Safe robberies	1
Bogus check swindles	7

The total of property reported as taken, according to police information, is $35,000, of which $25,000 was in burglaries and larcenies.

WEEK'S CRIME REVEALS GAIN DESPITE POLICE

Despite police activities crime continues unabated. There were 275 burglaries and larcenies last week, compared with 264 the previous week. The value of loot from this source was $5,000 greater than the week before.

Forty holdup robberies were reported to the police, one of which was a "pay roll job" amounting to $1,800. In a financial way it was a good week for holdup men, the total amount taken being $4,500.

Confidence men also had a week of unusual prosperity. Their operations yielded more than $2,000. Pickpockets and bogus check swindlers were active, also automobile thieves.

The murder record of the week is seven, bring the total since Jan. 1 up to seventeen.

Two burglaries, each amounting to $500, were reported to the police yesterday. Three men are wanted for robbing the residence of Chester R. Williams, 1544 Jonquil terrace. They used a "jimmy" on the front door.

The Fiftieth street police are searching for a burglar who entered the residence of Mrs. Anna Rosenblatt, 5341 Prairie avenue, while the family were asleep Friday night.

Reward for Arrest.

Gov. Lowden has authorized a reward of $200 for the arrest and conviction of Louis Doveno, alias Delloiacano, a 22 year old Italian, wanted for the murder of Patrolman Edward J. Mulvihill.

CHIEF GRIEVED AS HOYNE ASKS ABOUT SALOON

Prosecutor Wonders Why Graham's Place Is Run Openly.

Diplomatic relations between Chief Schuettler and State's Attorney Hoyne seemed on the verge of a break, such as has usually characterized the relations of the two offices, last night when Mr. Hoyne publicly demanded:

"Why is George Graham's saloon permitted to sell liquor without a license, and why is he permitted to operate a gambling house?"

Graham's saloon at 5314 South State street had been violating the law without molestation until Mayor Thompson revoked the license. On Jan. 28 Graham told a reporter for THE TRIBUNE that he was "through with Chicago." But he hasn't moved.

Schuettler Grieved.

"I regret that the state's attorney's office has seen fit to ask through the newspapers why Graham's place is permitted to have gambling and sell liquor without a license," said Chief Schuettler. "As a lawyer he knows it is necessary to obtain legal evidence as to gambling and liquor selling, and that evidence cannot always be obtained in a minute.

"I felt that the state's attorney and myself were working in complete harmony, and I am sorry he did not call the matter to my attention, as he would have found that my department has not been idle in the matter. If the state's attorney has evidence that any one in the police department has been culpable I will do all in my power to aid in punishing the parties."

Hoyne's Assertion.

Hoyne declared the only difference in conditions in Graham's place since his license was taken is that the gambling establishment has been moved upstairs from the basement.

"I am informed," he pursued, "that a partner of Graham told an acquaintance that the saloon is making more money without a license than with one."

Later in the evening, when Mr. Hoyne had been told of Chief Schuettler's protest, the state's attorney said he had no intention of reflecting on the chief but said his remarks concerned only the lax police work in the district in which Graham's saloon is situated.

Lieutenant Denies.

In the absence of Capt. James Madden of the Englewood station, Lieut. Thomas Monaghan last night denied the sale of liquor and gambling operations were permitted in the saloon. He said a detective has been stationed in the place since the mayor revoked the license.

"Mr. Hoyne ought to know better than that," said Graham. "I can't sell liquor and have not, nor has there been gambling here. How could I, with police stationed here constantly? Only soft drinks are sold here now.

"I have a prospective buyer—William H. Smith—and Smith will buy the place if he can get assurance that he will get a license to sell liquor."

MUSIC!

Final "Pop" Concert of Splendid Series Will Be Given This Afternoon at Senn High School

DIRECTOR GLENN DILLARD GUNN and his American Symphony orchestra at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon will give the last of the series of ten "popular" concerts under the auspices of THE TRIBUNE, the Civic Music association, and the board of education. The event will take place at the Senn High school, 5900 North Glenwood avenue, and will begin with rendition of "The Star Spangled Banner," with orchestral accompaniment to singing by the audience.

The soloist of the occasion will be Ira Hamilton, one of Chicago's noted pianists, who will render a Liszt concerto. Another noteworthy number will be the famed "Nutcracker" suite by Tschaikowsky.

Concert patrons to reach the Senn High school will utilize the following transportation systems:

GIRLS FIND HOME AS MARY DAWES HOTEL IS OPENED

Twenty-five girls, who earn from $5 to $10 a week, awoke this morning between clean linen sheets in tiny, tidy bedrooms, took their clothes from dustproof lockers and hurried to an appetizing breakfast in a sunny dining room where four canaries sang.

Their rooms cost them 20 cents, their fried sausage 7 cents, coffee 3 cents, rolls, butter, and tarts a penny apiece.

Mrs. Dawes Welcomes Visitors.

The Mary Gates Dawes hotel for working girls at 317 Throop street opened yesterday. Mr. Charles G. Dawes, who built the hotel, and his mother, to whom it is dedicated, welcomed hundreds of visitors and conducted them through the building.

There are 275 bright bedrooms with neat fixtures and soft beds worthy to be found in one of Chicago's expensive hotels. There is a roomy, colorful drawing room with books and magazines and a phonograph and many comfortable rocking chairs. There is a sewing room and a washroom where girls can brighten their clothes for 5 cents an hour. There is a big dining room run in cafeteria style, decorated with bright paper and furnished with enameled tables and chairs.

To Be Self-Supporting.

The biggest surprise came when Mr. Dawes announced that the hotel will be self-supporting. "We have estimated the cost of food and service and feel certain that a charge of 20 cents for the large rooms and 10 cents for the small ones will cover all expenses. We may lose a little on our cafeteria if food prices keep going up, however."

YOU may remember that we opened our sale this year with an announcement showing the same furniture as we show here.

It is so good and so thoroughly up to date that we are again calling your attention to it; you may rest assured that it follows correctly the type of the Queen Anne Period and that the materials used are such as go with the guarantee of Scholle quality; such furniture is the heirloom kind that goes down from one generation to another.

Many customers who visit our store during a special sale seemed impressed with the fact that they are not shown shop worn furniture or goods bought for special sale; but instead are given the newest ideas, fresh goods, Scholle quality, and at prices lower than seems possible for such merchandise. We think we give the greatest values to be had in furniture buying.

No business could grow in volume and reputation as ours has grown unless it did give and give liberally in goods and in service. We would consider it poor business to charge high prices or to deal in anything but the very best goods.

Think these principles over and come in and let us demonstrate to you.

"HALEY-BUCK" BILLS TARGET OF SCHOOL LEAGUE

Teachers' Union Would Get Control, Says Statement.

Control of the public school system will go to the Chicago Teachers' federation, according to a statement issued by the Chicago Public School league yesterday, if the legislature passes Ald. Robert M. Buck's bill for the reorganization of the school board. The league urges parents to assist in the defeat of what it calls the "vicious bills of the Haley-Buck alliance."

The Statement.

"A bold attempt," the statement reads, "to deliver the public school system with property valued at $60,000,000 and an annual appropriation of more than $20,000,000 into the hands of the Chicago Teachers' federation is seen in the Haley-Buck bills which will be introduced in the legislature. With absolute disregard of the rights of 400,000 school children and the future citizens of Chicago, Ald. Buck, spurred by political ambitions, is trying to deliver them into the control of the more or less notorious teachers' federation.

"The purpose of the bill, providing an elective school board, each member to be paid $5,000, cannot be presented to the public more clearly than in the words of the business agents of the teachers' federation to the members of the city council when the report of the schools committee was before that body for adoption.

Tell How It Was Done.

In effect, this is the word that was sent to most of the members of the council:

"The board of education as it now exists cannot be controlled by the Teachers' federation. Ald. Buck and his committee have prepared a bill which will give to us absolute control of the schools of Chicago. This is a cold-blooded proposition between the members of the Teachers' federation and the members of the city council. We have an organization in each precinct and each ward in the city. If you support Ald. Buck's recommendation, you shall have the entire support of our organization in your campaign for reëlection. If you do not, we will throw that support and the support of the Parent-Teachers' associations against you.'

Explanation.

"The Chicago Public School league sought an explanation from several members of the city council as to their reasons for supporting this partisan, unfair and vicious report conceived in the mind of Margaret Haley. This is the explanation of several aldermen:

"'Our recommendation does not make much difference to the legislature. They won't pass it anyway and there are two or three hundred teachers in my ward whom I don't want to antagonize. They might work against me. That's the reason I voted for it.'

"This measure is being fostered by an organization that put politics of the lowest kind into our public schools, an organization that would wreck the public school system of Chicago and leave the children whose parents cannot send them to private schools in ignorance; by an organization which has terrorized teachers and which has used the mass of the teachers for the benefit of a few leaders.

An Alternative Plan.

"If the efforts of this organization fail on the elective school board plan the Haley-Buck combine has another scheme to control the schools through an amendment to the present law which takes from the board of education the authority to employ or discharge teachers. It places this authority in the hands of the superintendent of schools with the provision that no teacher may be dismissed until the case has been reviewed by a court. It is possible by this measure to prevent practically the discharge of a single teacher, no matter how incompetent, immoral, or inefficient.

"These bills have not as yet been introduced. So far the Haley-Buck combination has been unable to find a legislator who will sponsor their selfish measures.

Argues Against Bills.

"The two Haley-Buck bills should be defeated for the following reasons:

"The principle of the short ballot is disregarded.

"It would force every teacher to circulate petitions and become a cog in a political machine under the domination of an organization whose dealings in connection with the schools are not noted for improving the educational advantages of the school children.

"The salary combination of $5,000 a year would mean that it would be sought by many men worth not half that amount. It would lower materially the standard of board members and no man of affairs could be induced to make such a race.

"By means of the recall provision, the teachers' federation would be able to harass every board member until they would not dare disobey the edicts of Margaret Haley.

"The bill and the investigation prior to its preparation was entirely partisan, only members of the teachers' federation being represented at the hearings.

"Election of school board members at the time of the city council election would, of course, involve the schools in the petty issues of the wards. Our children must not be sacrificed in the mire of ward politics."

THE Cornell Alumni Association of Chicago held its fortieth annual banquet last night at the University club with 300 Cornellians and their guests from other places of learning present. Charles Sommers Young of the class of 1895 was toastmaster. Among the speakers were Prof. Eugene P. Andrews of the class of '95; Daniel Reed, '96, assistant football coach; Charles Melville Howe, '19, and R. W. Sailor, '06, former business manager of the Cornell Alumni News.

TWO INJUNCTIONS ISSUED AGAINST GARMENT UNIONS

Judges Smith and Baldwin Order Strikers Not to Picket.

Two injunctions to prevent picketing by the striking garment makers were issued last night. The second was granted by Judge Frederick A. Smith at his home at 11:45 p. m. and runs against the International Garment Workers' union, locals No. 81 and 100; the Woman's Trade Union league, and the Skirt and Cloak Makers' union, which has threatened to strike in sympathy on Monday.

The other writ, issued by Judge Baldwin, not only forbids the strikers from actively picketing the shops, but also forbids the following acts:

From watching the complainants' place of business.

From congregating about or near the places of business of the complainants.

From calling upon such employés (of the complainants) for the purposes of inducing them to leave the employment of the complainants.

From attempting by payment or promise of money, employment or other rewards to induce employés of the complainants to leave their employment.

From inducing any of the employés of the complainants to refuse or fail to do their work.

From doing anything which subjects any of the complainants' employés to criticism, censure, or annoyance because of their employment by the complainants.

Broad in Scope.

One portion of the document includes "all associations, firms, and persons assisting, aiding, confederating, or conspiring with them" (the strikers) as defendants.

"It would seem by the terms of the injunction," said Louis F. Jacobson, the attorney who obtained it in behalf of more than fifty women's garment manufacturers, "that any paper encouraging the strike would come within the ground it covers."

On being asked by reporters to amplify that statement, however, the attorney at first amended it, and then said that he "took it back, in view of the fact that there might be come misconstruction."

Recalls Former Writ.

About a year ago another injunction issued by Judge Baldwin contained a clause which would have deprived two Polish editors of the right to comment on developments in connection with the tannery workers' strike. On being interviewed by a reporter for THE TRIBUNE, Judge Baldwin admitted that he hadn't read the document carefully before signing it, and the clause was stricken out.

Copies of the injunction issued last night, which takes effect immediately, will be placed in the hands of the strikers today.

It was declared in the evening by Sol

It was declared last evening by Sol Seidman, general organizer of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union, that nonunion employés of women's clothing factories at 1056 North Wood street and 1138 North Ashland avenue fired several shots from the windows of the establishments to frighten girl pickets and drive them across the street. The charges could not be verified.

"Haven't heard a thing of it," said the desk sergeant at the Rawson avenue station last night.

COLD—Keen and Sharp—
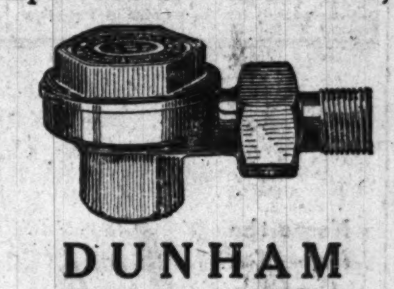
Cuts Rooms from your House

BUT not if it be Dunham-heated. For then every nook and corner will be cozy-warm all through the coldest winter. Each room will be at a certain, predesired temperature the whole day long, every day, and at another temperature—lower—while you sleep. And this automatically, with no cellar trips to open and shut damper doors.

The Dunham System operates noiselessly with no pounding of radiators and with minimum coal consumption. Each part is made to last. And does.

While the first cost of a Dunham Vapor Heating System is not as low as that of an old-fashioned, faulty hot water or steam system, small operating and nominal maintenance charges make the Dunham far the cheapest in the long run. A steam fitter can Dunhamize your home.

Before you build or make alterations, write for full information. Ask for our book, the "3 H's." Send for it immediately. You'll be in pocket, you'll be happier and healthier for having read it.



DUNHAM
Radiator Trap

This device is one of the fundamentals of the DUNHAM VAPOR HEATING SYSTEM. Because it makes impossible the presence of water in radiators, it prevents their pounding and knocking, reduces fuel consumption, causes the radiator to heat evenly and quickly, eliminates the hissing air valve and spurting water.

NAILING DOWN PROSPERITY

NEVER in the history of the world has any country been more bountifully favored than this country during the last two years. Nearly every one in America has prospered during the European war. The golden flow of wealth into this country has resulted in a commercial and industrial development that a few years ago was beyond our conception. In this prosperity Chicago has shared to perhaps a greater extent than any other city in this country. In every line of business, in speculation in the grain markets, in the purchase of securities, in stock market speculations, in manufacturing, in increased wages, in prodigious profits on food stuffs and commodities—the people of Chicago have piled up many millions of dollars in profits.

THE wise man of today will nail down some of this prosperity by putting at least a portion of his money into Chicago Real Estate—the safest and most profitable investment in this country today. For many months we have realized—and now we want the public to realize—that the year 1917 will probably bring to Chicago Real Estate the greatest boom ever known in this country. The people who already own real estate, and those who will buy now in advance of that boom, which is sure to come, will make great fortunes out of their investments.

NO one ever was made rich by investing small savings at low rates of interest. Some of the most substantial fortunes in every city of America were made out of real estate. The greatest fortunes of today are largely invested in city real estate and securities based directly on real estate, and these fortunes are being increased out of real estate investments year by year at an almost unbelievable rate.

MOST substantial fortunes in this country have had small beginnings and have grown by wise and consistent investments. We have seen hundreds upon hundreds of working people made independent through the purchase of lots in our subdivisions on small first payments and monthly payments. We have 50,000 customers on our list, many of whom have purchased from us consistently since we started business 17 years ago. Some started by purchasing lots for $100—and today attend our sales and purchase $20,000 to $50,000 worth of property.

Real Estate Securities Desirable.

Chicago real estate securities are a particularly desirable investment at the present time for every one who seeks a high degree of safety and stability. All listed stocks and the lower and medium grades of corporation bonds are liable just now to sudden and extreme fluctuations of market value in response to changes in the foreign relations of the United States. The outcome of a battle in Europe may cause a big advance or a decline over night.

Real estate, unless it be near the seaboard, is little subject to such influences, and Chicago ground values are better situated in this respect than those of any other large city in the United States. Being in the center of the most productive region of the country and a thousand miles from the coast, this city is the farthest possible removed from both physical and financial perils of war. Whatever may happen, the farms of the middle west will continue producing crops, the smaller cities will go on manufacturing and trading, and Chicago, the physical center of the region, will continue to be its commercial focus.

Necessarily the population of the city must increase steadily. When general business depressions come they will reduce the rate of increase, or may even cause slight setbacks, but such checks are only temporary and not long enough in duration to have any marked effect on values as a whole. The land will remain, and as the city increases in population and importance values will inevitably tend upward.

Not only is the present time favorable for real estate securities as compared with other investments, but it is favorable as compared with other periods in the local field.

RISK COMPANIES SWING TO LOANS ON REAL ESTATE

New York, Jan. 21.—Real estate mortgage loans on farm and city property have supplanted railroad bonds as the largest single class of investments held by life insurance companies, according to a report of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents.

The report shows that from 1906 to 1914 the real estate mortgage loans increased from 27.37 per cent of the assets of the American companies to 34.46 per cent.

"The largest relative increase in any single item of investments held by the life companies (outside of policy loans, over which they have no control) is in the class comprising state, county, and municipal bonds. Their holdings in these securities increased from $160,000,000 to $530,000,000 during the decade."

Woman Found Dead from Gas.

Mrs. Lillian McFarlane of 1126 North Clark street was found dead from gas yesterday in her home by her son, William. The police were notified.

Study the Real Estate Situation for 1917

IF you want to make 1917 the biggest profit-making year in your life, study the real estate situation. Read what the editor of The Tribune Investors' Guide says about real estate—Chicago real estate in particular. His conclusion that real estate is the safest and surest of investments is the result of an intelligent study of the investment market. The insurance companies also recognize the safety of real estate investments. During the last year the investments of American insurance companies in real estate securities increased many millions of dollars.

Our program for 1917 contemplates the placing upon the market of a piece of property that has the greatest profit-making possibilities of any property that we have ever handled. All the energies and efforts of our great organization are combined and concentrated on this great real estate project which we will offer to Chicago realty buyers as a magnificent investment opportunity.

"A Model Modern City Within the City of Chicago"

A Four Million Dollar Bartlett Development—Only 24 Minutes From Downtown.

A RECENT decision of the Supreme Court enabled Bartlett to gain possession of a wonderful piece of property that has been held intact under private ownership for nearly half a century. Close to 400 acres there is of it—a tract that is by long odds the most remarkable inside the city limits.

It is located less than twelve miles from the city hall. At its front door is a self-supporting, tremendously thriving, thoroughly developed district. Right on the tract are two stations of a railroad that provides 24-minute service to and from the loop. And four separate street car lines are at hand, with 5-cent fares to downtown.

Consider the above facts, one at a time. Think what each must mean to the future of a piece of property. Then weigh carefully the influence of ALL taken together. And remember that you have yet to hear things about this marvelous development that are of even more vital importance. The coupon brings them to you—each and every one.

This property will not be opened to the public until next spring. Complete facts will be withheld from all but advance inquirers until the sale is announced. But meanwhile hundreds of thousands of dollars of improvements will be installed—worth-while value-increasing improvements — sidewalks, sewers, water, electricity, gas, etc.

Because this tract came to us through a legal decision its purchase price was forced down to an unbelievably low figure. Bartlett's huge spot cash buying power forced that figure down still lower. This makes bargain prices possible—lower even than the usual Bartlett prices—prices which in the aggregate represent about what a smaller real estate operator would have had to pay at WHOLESALE! And Bartlett easy terms besides!!

Coupon Brings You Advance "Ground-Floor" Facts

¶ You incur not the slightest obligation in mailing us the coupon. And, on the other hand, you put yourself in position where you can have all the facts placed before you long in advance of the general public. You can learn (if you are further interested when you know the entire story) just why you double your chances for profit by "getting in on the ground floor"—by making yourself a preferred customer of the Bartlett organization and earning the special privileges that always go to our preferred customers. Mail the coupon today—get all the facts—let us help you make 1917 YOUR big year!

NO TRUST GOOD, IS U. S. REPLY IN HARVESTER SUIT

Brief Filed in High Court Denies "Benevolence" —Asks Dissolution.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—The government today filed its brief in the Supreme court in the dissolution suit against the International Harvester company, its officers and directors, appealed from the federal court in Minnesota, which ordered the dissolution of the company.

There is no such thing as a good or benevolent trust within the meaning of the Sherman law, the government contends, and all combinations which break down the competitive system are in restraint of trade. After an exhaustive review of authorities and of declarations made by Senator Sherman, author of the measure, at the time of its passage, the brief continues:

"It is apparent that the objection to substituting a despotic organization of industry for the competitive system were quite as much social and political as economic, and therefore it would not have satisfied congress to be told, as we are told in this case, that the power which they feared was thus far being exercised benevolently, that prices had not yet been increased, nor wages lowered, nor the quality of products degraded, nor competitors oppressed.

Cannot Plead Benevolence.

"In their minds the mere existence of such powerful combinations was an evil —a continuing danger—from which, in the long run, if not immediately, would come disaster. For, as in the organization of government benevolence can never justify absolutism, neither can it do so in the organization of industry.

"The fundamental contention of the defendants (that the anti-trust law prohibits only combinations injurious to the public by raising prices, limiting production, deteriorating quality, decreasing wages, or oppressing competitors) loses sight entirely of the broader purpose and basis of the act.

"It fails to take into account that the view of public policy upon which congress legislated was not to wait until the evils of undue concentration of economic power have occurred or become imminent, and then attempt to restrain them, but to prevent their occurrence by striking at undue concentration of economic power itself.

Must Include Every Combine.

"Unless the underlying purposes of the act are to be wholly thwarted, its prohibitions must be construed to include every combination in whatever form it interferes or threatens to interfere with the normal and effective operation of the law of competition in any branch of trade either because the combination is so comprehensive that such is its necessary effect or because the character of the means employed or other circumstances justify the inference that such an interference is intended and therefore dangerously probable."

The company's plea that three formidable competitors with a combined capital of $91,000,000 were engaged in the same business and afforded brisk competition and testimony relating to the contention are reviewed in detail. The competition thus afforded, the brief states, was "negligible," and the competition of all other companies combined left the defendants in possession of approximately 80 per cent of the trade, sufficient, it is contended, to constitute them a monopoly within the meaning of the law.

The customary request that the manner in which the dissolution may be best effected be left to the lower court to devise, is made.

PATRIOTISM AND SATIRE VIE AT GRIDIRON CLUB

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—Patriotic fervor stirred participants at the closing dinner of the season given by the Gridiron club of Washington tonight, with President Wilson, members of the cabinet, and others prominent in government and business life of the nation as guests.

Songs that rang with the spirit of Americanism and demonstrations of loyalty to the president were interspersed with travesties on the peace note leak investigation, woman suffrage pickets at the White House gates, prohibition for the District of Columbia, California's part in the national election, with Senator-elect Hiram Johnson impersonating himself, and with other satirical allusions to various phases of national life.

The leak inquiry was caricatured in several sketches, one of them a musical melange and another a melodramatic effusion entitled "The Waif," in which "Administration Leak" appeared as the heroine and "Barney [T. W.] Lawson" as the irrepressible villain. Introducing the musical sketch, one of the correspondents with a tremulo tenor sang "Down on the Leaky Way," which was followed by another sung by a club member in the character of Representative Wood of Indiana, whose resolution led to the congressional investigation into charges of a leak on the peace note message.

The "Leaky Way."

The "Leaky Way" chorus ran thus:

Come where the information oozes
Down on the Leaky Way.
Come see the Lambs at play
Bears eager for the fray!
Come hear the tickler gently ticking,
Giving the leaks away.
See the brokers gay,
They are making hay,
Down on the Leaky Way.

The impersonator of Representative Wood was presented as "William Wood, the plumber, the man who stops the leaks," who sang:

I come from Indianny,
A statesman great and true,
And when I smell a scandal
I don't care what I do;
O, if I hear a rumor
I follow it for weeks,
For I'm William Wood, the plumber,
I'm the guy who stops the leaks.

"Camping Tonight."

"Camping Tonight" was a song to the suffrage sentinels, running thus:

We're camping tonight on the White House grounds,
Give us a rousing cheer;
Our golden flag we hold aloft,
Of cops we have no fear.
Many of the pickets are weary tonight,
Wishing for the war to cease.
Many are the chilblains and frost bites, too;
It is no life of ease.

"Tom Lawson, Barney Baruch, Charley Sabin, and Otto Kahn" appeared as a quartet, singing:

"They met Tom Lawson on the street,
Barney and Charles and Ot.
He said: 'You boys appeared to know
More than the public ought;
Now won't you come to Washington
And tell about the leak?'
They whispered: 'No, no, thank you, Tom.'
And didn't give a squeak.

"But Tom came, willing, eager, too,
And said they should be brought,
So Henry sent a sergeant-at-arms for Barney and Charles and Ot.
'Now, boys,' said Bob, 'come tell us all
About this inside ring.'
They whispered; 'No, no, thank you, Bob.'
And didn't tell a thing."

Dr. Grayson Is Target.

Dr. Grayson, whose nomination as medical director of the navy with rank of rear admiral, was another target for musical shafts to the tune of "Captain Jinks."

He's an Admiral great, in the new Navy,
His name is Dr. Cary G.,
And though he'll seldom go to sea,
He's an Admiral in the Navy;
And if the Navy has a chill—
Take a pill, take a pill—
No battleship will have the grip
While he's Admiral in the Navy.

New Light on Capital.

In initiating a new member of the club John Snure, correspondent of the Des Moines Register-Leader, pseudo Ellis Island officials conducted an immigration examination for admission.

Inspector [to applicant, sharply]—Born?

Applicant—Yes.

"Business?"

"Rotten."

"Foreign country?"

"Ioway."

"Who is president of the United States?"

"Woodrow Wilson."

"What does he do?"

"Spends most of his time dodging women with yellow flags."

"Who is the vice president?"

"I don't know."

"Never mind; neither do we."

"Who makes the laws?"

"Woodrow Wilson."

"If Wilson makes the laws, what does congress do?"

"Squanders money on creeks, rivulets, and bluffs; mostly bluffs."

"What is the building called in which congress meets?"

"A school for scandal."

"What are the qualifications for a rear admiral of the navy?"

"To cure a cold and play a good game of golf."

"Are you an anarchist?"

"No; I'm a member of the press gallery."

Thereupon the applicant qualified for admission.

NURSES BATTLE AND BEAT FIRE AT ST. LUKE'S

Nurses and other attachés of St. Luke's hospital formed a fire brigade early yesterday and fought a blaze under a stairway on the fourth floor of the nurses' training school until city firemen arrived. The training quarters adjoin the old hospital building. The fire caused small loss and not a patient left the buildings.

One hundred and twenty-five nurses were asleep when the fire started. They were aroused, but did not find it necessary to go into the street. Several patients in the hospital proper were cool spectators.

Miss Margaret McClintock, night supervisor of nurses, discovered the blaze at 3 o'clock in the morning. She spread an alarm.

MODART CORSETS
Front Laced
can only be appreciated by a trial fitting. Style must be seen. Comfort must be felt. Words can not express these, so here is a suggestion:

Before buying your next corset have a trial fitting at one of the three most famous Chicago department stores listed below.

You will find no better service, better skill in fitting and more thorough knowledge of corsetry than in these stores.

Put yourself in their hands and you will get results. They know what they can do with the MODART Corset if you will but let them fit one on.

TRACTION BILLS NOW HOLD STAGE IN LEGISLATURE

Chicago Merger and Franchise Measures Occupy Present Week.

BY E. O. PHILLIPS.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Chicago's traction problem will be turned over to the Illinois legislature early next week. Committees have delayed consideration of the home rule and other bills having to do with public utilities, not only because of the dominant interest during the last week in Gov. Lowden's consolidation bill but because the final draft of the bill having to do with the franchise angle of the street railway lines had not been completed.

Word has reached Springfield that this bill, now being finally formulated by Walter L. Fisher and which is expected to have the indorsement of a big majority of the city council of Chicago, will be ready for introduction Tuesday or Wednesday.

Passage of Measure Expected.

At this stage of the session it is a reasonable prediction that the general assembly will enact a bill that will authorize the consolidation of the surface and elevated systems without serious change from the form of the bill that has been approved by the committees on local transportation and of judiciary of the Chicago council, and already introduced in senate and house.

It also is believed comparatively easy sailing is in sight for its companion bill, dealing with the franchise term proposition. Efforts to complicate the situation by applying conditions of 1897 to conditions of 1917 have had a flareback and surface indications of highly sensational developments have caused no stir in the statehouse.

Split Over Home Rule Bill.

No forecast is safe at this time as to the demand from Chicago for home rule over its public utilities. The Chicago delegation in both houses is badly divided and the same old downstate combination that opposes any grant to the city of power that is now held by the state public utilities commission is as strenuous as ever in objecting to any kind of a home rule bill. It is realized that the element has some strong support from Chicago.

It is probable that consideration of the home rule bill will begin in committees during the first week in March, and that this and the traction bills will hold the legislative spotlight for the remainder of the session after that time.

The constitutional convention resolution is due for a vote in the house during the week after next. The chances now appear to be exceedingly bright for the necessary 102 votes to adopt the joint resolution in the house, which already has passed the senate.

Causes of Phone Errors and How They're Kept at Minimum.

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

Yesterday I called a phone number. Before I finally got the connection three different operators asked: "What number did you call, please?"

Looking back, it seemed to me that the telephone service in Chicago was deteriorating; that mistakes were more frequent than they used to be. Realizing that kicking the telephone service in the slats is one of the most popular of indoor sports, I decided to make further investigation.

First of all it appears the number of calls a day in Chicago has vastly increased. In January, 1914, only a few more than 1,800,000 people said "hello" in a single day. Last month the number of calls had risen to more than 2,500,000—an increase of 36 per cent.

Increase in Operators.

Three years ago there were 5,825 operators in the various exchanges, including the girls who were being trained. Now the number has risen to practically 7,100—a jump of 21 per cent.

Just now the telephone company is training girls who will take the place of operators on vacation next summer. There are more of them in school—and not actually at work—this year than in 1914, but there is no apparent reason why there should be a larger percentage.

It would seem to be clear, therefore, that the telephone operators today have more work to do than they had in 1914—each operator has more calls to answer each day. Therefore, more errors might reasonably be expected. Making telephone connections, plugging the proper cords into the proper holes, is a somewhat nerve straining business.

Table of Errors.

I got figures on the number of errors recorded by twelve young women, each of whom was busy all day calling various telephone numbers on a trunk line of her own. They made an average of eighty-five calls each, a total of 1,029. Each of them kept a record of what happened to her calls on Jan. 18, 1917. Summarized, the report shows:

Given wrong number	65
Disconnected while talking	28
Number given, but no response; necessary to get operator a second time and give number over again	30
"What number did you call, please?"	8
No response from central operator	11
Put on busy wire	34
Total	176

Not Always Operator's Fault.

Out of 1,029 there was a total of 176 errors, or 17 per cent. In fairness it should be said that the telephone operators are not in the least responsible for the fact that in thirty-four cases the telephones called were busy. Subtracting these from the total there still remains enough errors to make the errors amount to 13 per cent. It is also true that a certain per cent of wrong numbers are due to the mistake of the person calling.

The telephone company says that in about six out of each hundred calls there is likely to be an error of some kind, though not always the fault of the operator who handles them. They keep track of all errors on about 2,500 calls, selected at random from each day's business. As a result of these checks they say the present average of errors does not rise above 6 per cent.

High Mark at Christmas.

During the last holiday season the telephone business in Chicago reached its high water mark. There were on several days more than 3,000,000 calls. During that period, it is admitted, there was something of a slump in the service. Since that time the company says there has been a steady improvement.

At present the city has accountants going over the books of the company preparatory to the fixing of telephone rates to subscribers for the next five years. That work is expected to take a good part of the current year. The new rates will or should go into effect in January, 1918, and continue in force until 1923. Under the ordinance the city council, in conference with the company, is given the power to determine what the charge shall be.

Robert B. Taft Weds Miss Martha A. Mielke

Robert B. Taft of 5627 Dorchester avenue and Miss Martha Augusta Mielke of Bellwood were married last night at Mr. Taft's residence, which will be the home of the couple. In getting the marriage license, Mr. Taft gave his age as 43 and that of his bride as 21. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Oscar Helming of the Hyde Park Congregational church. Miss Frieda Mielke, the bride's sister, was maid of honor.

Paisley Assets Put at $85,000; Debts, $500,000

That the liabilities of the private banks operated by the three Paisleys on the north side—William H., Oliver F., and James T.—amount approximately to $500,000, while collectable assets will not reach more than $85,000, was the statement of Frank Spohr of the Chicago Title and Trust company, who testified before Judge Kersten yesterday, where the Paisleys are on trial. Among other witnesses was William Bruckner, vice president of the Continental and Commercial National bank, who testified that the bank held the Paisleys' notes to the amount of $4,000, but they have been charged off as uncollectable.

Denver Man Here to Aid Fund for Buffalo Bill Shaft

John Talbot of Denver reached Chicago yesterday to start a movement for funds to build a monument to Buffalo Bill on Lookout mountain. Several vice presidents of the organization started in Denver will be appointed. The board of education will be asked to suggest that school children contribute buffalo nickels toward the monument. The matter will be taken up with the Showman's league Tuesday night.

Why Not Be the Prize Winner of Your School

Start That 100-Word Essay Today and Bring It to Our Store Tomorrow in Person

To some one boy from each High School, we are going to give a suit of his choice of

LANGHAM HIGH CLOTHES

The boy or young man who wins the prize will be the one from each High School, who submits the best essay on

"How Much Does Good Taste in Dress Influence Success?"

Keep the essay within 100 words. Write it neatly on one side of the paper only and bring it to our store in person (don't mail it or have another carry it for you) on or before March 3, 1917. There are no other conditions—no other restrictions. Handle the subject the way you think best.

We want every young man in this town to know all about Langham-High Clothes. That's why we are giving away one suit to one boy in each High School, who writes the best little article. Langham-High are the first clothes that were ever specially designed for younger young men—we mean the fellows between 15 and 20 who know what they want in clothes. Langham-High will satisfy you perfectly.

This is a chance to get a dandy suit of Langham-High free—don't overlook it. The name of the prize winner in each High School will be announced in this paper.

It will be pretty fine to be that fellow. Each one has the same chance no matter what class he belongs to or how many compete. Hundreds have already submitted their essays.

Will we see you this week with your essay?

Palos Hill With Nine Adults on High

You can prove every statement we make about the Jeffery Six. And some of the things we say this car will do seem almost impossible in the ordinary language of motor cars. In fact, there are many feats that the Jeffery Six has performed that will test the mettle of any car made. Frankly speaking, the Jeffery Six is an exceptional car, and will outperform anything on four wheels at anywhere near its price. This is a strong statement to make, but you can prove it with a ride in a Jeffery Six.

Take the Palos Hill test for instance. The Jeffery Six pulled up and over this grade, the bugbear of motorists, carrying nine people, on high speed, through mud, clay, and heavy going, a stunt that most cars balk at or worry through on low speed.

After climbing this hill the same car stepped out on a smooth road to the tune of seventy miles an hour. There is both power and speed in this car. The Jeffery Motor will develop more real pulling power for its displacement than any other motor made.

And this power comes without a struggle on the part of the motor. You will notice a very marked absence of vibration. This is due to the wonderful inherently balanced crankshaft. Even at high speed you don't get a series of electric shocks from the steering wheel.

The motor is just a sample of how well this car is built. Practically every part is staunchly and honestly manufactured in the big Nash factory. The bodies are made of first grade white ash and heavy gauge steel. They stay tight. You won't get that irritating body rattle after your Jeffery Six has seen a few weeks' service.

You do not need to take our word for these things. Make us prove it. We will do it in competition with any car and leave the decision to you. We have an interesting booklet that tells the story of the Palos Hill climb. We will be glad to send it to you. Salesroom open Sundays—evenings by appointment.

EUROPE TO FACE VAST PROBLEMS AFTER THE WAR

Disbanding Armies and Fixing Boundaries to Take Years.

BY NORMAN HAPGOOD.

[Copyright: 1917: By Norman Hapgood.]

LONDON, Feb. 17.—It is estimated that it will take eighteen months merely to get the British army back from France to England when the war is over. That little detail may give an idea of the size of the task that will follow the end of hostilities.

When the few big points are agreed upon the full working out of the settlement may well take as much time as has been occupied by the war itself. The men who meet at The Hague or Berne, or wherever it may be, will face a puzzle more complex than confronted those who planned a new Europe after the overthrow of Napoleon. Our own country ought to be preparing itself as rapidly as it may for its part, official or unofficial, in working out the many-sided problem.

One of the best known statesmen in the kingdom, whose name is honored throughout the United States, said to me yesterday that the one part of the whole question that he would like to have left absolutely to the United States was the most difficult of all, namely, the Balkans, Constantinople, and the adjoining part of Asia Minor.

Big Problems to Be Solved.

Although Great Britain is a world state and its inhabitants are accustomed to thinking of remote parts of the globe, as Americans seldom do, nevertheless even the British are just beginning to realize the extent of the implications that have grown out of this struggle.

The attempt to make the settlement along the lines of nationality is, of course, natural and right, but its limits need to be clearly understood. The nationality principle is a useful one when nationalities are as distinct as they are in western Europe. If you divide Europe in three strips the word nationality will have a different meaning for each of the strips.

The western strip contains countries which, whatever their origin, have become so thoroughly settled and accustomed to the existing situation that the sense of nationality with them means devotion to the existing political unit.

The central strip, however, is made up of about two dozen separate nationalities many of which do not feel at home in the larger political units of which they have been made part. Unfortunately the outlines of these subordinate nationalities are not distinct and their composition is not uniform, so that if you take part of an existing empire away and make a separate state of it on the principle of giving independence to the prevailing racial elements, you find your new states also with a strong and discontented minority.

Russian Unity Growing.

In the third strip, Russia, nationality has still another meaning. There you have a gradually increasing sense of national feeling among the elements making up the immense, inchoate and widely scattered nation. So that, if we xcept the Finns, the Poles and the Jews, there is an increasing national feeling all over Russia in the sense in which American national feeling has grown until the separate states and sections of the country have been subordinated to the union one and inseparable.

It is in Austria that the attempt to make a settlement on lines of nationality alone offers the greatest difficulty. I have heard it said that the answer of the allies to President Wilson was written by the French and submitted for suggestion to the other principal allied governments, and that the first draft did not contain the expression about the Chekho-Slovaks, which was put in later by M. Briand.

If this is true it was a tactful method of saying that Bohemia should be treated as a separate unit and be given its freedom, either through absolute independence or through increased autonomy under Austria.

Race Question Again.

What would be included in the new kingdom of Bohemia would have about twelve million inhabitants. About three million of those, however, would be Germans, so you would again be facing the problem of a separate minority.

There has been an able and persistent agitation for the independence of Bohemia carried on for many years, some persons think M. Briand probably was led to raise this issue by the fact that La Nation Tcheque is published in Paris and many Bohemians have long lived and worked there. Others think that the motive was probably one of political safety, the desire, in other words, to lessen the power of Germany after the war.

If it should obtain independence there are some Poles who are decidedly anxious to have it combined with Poland, but the pressure for this outcome comes from a small number. What would be absolutely necessary would be an arrangement between Poland and Bohemia by which Bohemia should obtain access to open water. The waterways could be made of great use to her only through co-operation with Poland.

Turk Must Save Face.

The same line of reasoning that makes some persons prefer to keep the Austian empire alive while improving conditions in it makes them oppose the attempt to throw the Turk altogether out of Europe.

If the Turk should be left in Europe the actual power would all be taken away from him by some such device as telling him that Constantinople and the adjoining country on both sides of the straits would be managed by a financial commission which would take its orders from an international commission. The international commission would carry out treaties entered into by the principal powers for the entire government of the region.

The Turk being without arms or fortification, the Russians would have not only free passage through the straits in times of peace but the opportunity to get there first in time of war. The Turk probably would give up Armenia without a wry face, but of course he can be thrown absolutely out of Constantinople only after a most severe defeat.

It is obvious that Germany, like all other trading countries, ought to have access to the raw materials of Africa, India, and the far east, also there is at least a strong probability that if she were fully occupied building up foreign trade in a way satisfactory to her she would be less likely to turn her energy to increasing her military power with aggressive design.

Balkan Railway a Snag.

This outlet for foreign trade may well be accomplished through free ports. It is cheaper to ship to Turkey, Syria, and even Smyrna through Trieste than by rail through the Balkans. Certainly no railway through the Balkans to Bagdad will be permitted by the governing powers among the allies without the most complete safeguards against its being used for military purposes.

Urge U. S. Control Palestine.

One especially interesting aspect of the future settlement involves Palestine. The whole Jewish question will come to the front soon. When parliament met on Feb. 7, one member raised the question of the Jews in Russia.

There have been recent anti-Semitic developments in Germany. France has made claims in Syria and Russian statesmen have backed these claims. But the movement grows to put Palestine under American control.

As to Alsace-Lorraine, the arguments put forth for the public will, of course, be largely those of sentiment, notably of language and of local sympathy.

The most important of all the facts, however, are the potash salts in Alsace and the coal and iron in Lorraine. With the potash salts that she already had, Germany in 1871, through the deposits in Alsace, obtained a complete monopoly of ingredients which are essential in chemicals, and notably in explosives. The extent of the deposits is not yet known, but what has already been discovered would last the whole world for several centuries. These salts are also essential for artificial fertilizers, soap, matches, photography, printing, and hundreds of other commercial purposes.

The war may have to last until autumn. No prophecy of too definite a kind is worth making. What is certain is that any crystalization of opinion on the big points of Austria, Turkey, Poland, Alsace-Lorraine, and the principles of trade is an unmistakable and definite step both toward bringing peace about and toward making it stable after it is here.

REAL BOY

Youngster of Nine Has the Courage but Not the Years to Pass Muster with Uncle Sam.

Dick Boyd

The sergeant in the marine corps recruiting office, 628 South State street, found a husky youngster at his desk yesterday.

"I want to enlist," said the boy courageously. "I'm Dick Boyd and my home's at 6025 Harper avenue."

And then Dick was gravely put through all the tests required of full grown applicants—he was even taken before the medical examiner.

But it was at this point, when he was glowing with enthusiasm, that he told his age—9 years. Whereupon he was put on "the reserve" list, to wait for a call from Uncle Sam perhaps ten years hence.

JIM O'LEARY SAYS HE'LL PAY ON MARCH 6

Despite the fact that congress has officially declared President Wilson reelected, Jim O'Leary says he won't pay election bets until the president is inaugurated. He admitted he was holding out for "one chance in a million."

O'Leary said he was having no trouble with any of the Wilson bettors.

Despite this assertion the following ad was placed in the want columns of THE TRIBUNE:

PERSONAL—PERSONS HAVING BET money with Jim O'Leary on the presidential election will learn something to their advantage by communicating with A H 68, Tribune.

Horner to Allow Sale of Von Frantzius' Stocks

A petition filed by Charles M. MacDonald and Gustave F. Fischer, administrators of the Von Frantzius estate, asking an order be entered directing them to sell stocks and securities or devise means of realizing equities in securities held in pledge, was heard by Probate Judge Horner yesterday. Attorneys representing 360 creditors appeared in court. Judge Horner announced he would enter the order Monday.

SON TESTIFIES OF HIDDEN LIFE OF HETTY GREEN

Says She Used Many Aliases to Avoid Being Bothered.

New York, Feb. 17.—Eccentricities of the late Mrs. Hetty H. R. Green, reputed to have been the richest woman in the world, were disclosed in the surrogate's court here today through the filing of testimony given by her son, Col. E. H. R. Green, before a transfer tax appraiser. The state is endeavoring to prove that Mrs. Green was a resident of New York when she died.

Hitherto unrevealed methods that Mrs. Green adopted to conceal her identity to avoid cranks, her fears for her personal safety, after the attempt on the life of Russell Sage, the numerous aliases under which she lived in unpretentious neighborhoods.

Used Many Names.

Among the assumed names used by Mrs. Green, her son testified, were Mrs. Dewey, Mrs. Warrington, Mrs. Norton, Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Nash, Mrs. Martin, Miss Hickey, and others he could not recall. A list of checks drawn in 1915, covering twenty-five weeks, showed the rich woman paid from $1[illegible] to $14 a week for board and lodging.

Asked if his mother remained long at a time in her boarding houses, Col. Green replied:

"No, sir, a short time. The newspaper men and the cranks used to get after her, and the charity people would get after her, and she would keep moving around. Every place she went she had a different name. Her favorite name was Dewey. She had a little dog by that name."

Had No Social Life.

Of Mrs. Green's social life her son said:

"My mother was not much given to social life. My mother was nothing but business, business, business. Three or four years ago she said to me: 'I am alone, all the people I know are dying off.'"

OWEN MAGNETIC

No Gear-Shifting Whatever in the OWEN MAGNETIC

¶ The greatest claim for other cars is that you "seldom have to change gears—or go out of high-gear."

¶ That is their ideal of greatest flexibility, simplicity, etc.

¶ Gear-shifting always has been a nuisance—but the "multiple cylinders" of other cars merely lessen gear-shifting and complicate construction.

¶ The ONLY car with NO GEAR-SHIFTING whatsoever is the Owen Magnetic—and its construction is greatly simplified besides in its high-power six-cylinder engine and its wonderful Magnetic Transmission.

¶ It is the wonder car of the age. The simplified car of greatest flexibility and efficiency. You have always wanted a car like this.

Have been built and actually delivered to retail buyers since August 1st, 1916.

These figures—320,817—represent the actual number of cars manufactured by us since August 1st, 1916, and delivered by our agents to retail buyers.

This unusual fall and winter demand for Ford cars makes it necessary for us to confine the distribution of cars to those agents only who have orders for immediate delivery to retail customers, rather than to permit any agent to stock cars in anticipation of later spring sales.

We are issuing this notice to intending buyers that they may protect themselves against delay or disappointment in securing Ford cars. If, therefore, you are planning to purchase a Ford car, we advise you to place your order and take delivery now. Immediate orders will have prompt attention.

Delay in buying at this time may cause you to wait several months.

Enter your order to-day for immediate delivery with any of the authorized Ford agents listed below and don't be disappointed later on.

Prices: Runabout $345, Touring Car $360, Coupelet $505, Town Car $595, Sedan $645, f. o. b. Detroit

FRANCE IN GRIP OF COAL FAMINE; FOOD CONSERVED

Seine Ice Threatens to Stop Supply of Fuel for All Citizens.

BY ROBERT HERRICK.

PARIS, Jan. 28.—It is cold. The Seine, which threatened a flood all the early winter, preventing regular coal transport by barges, now threatens to freeze, which also will delay coal deliveries.

Coal, which has been costly and hard to get, becomes almost impossible to find. Women stand in line for hours before shops where the municipality sells coal in small quantities. Even the better hotels and restaurants are beginning to be unnaturally cold. Even the rich cannot much longer buy exemption from the hardships of war time.

It is cold inside as well as outside. Then thanks to the shortage of coal there is less gas and electricity; one appreciates at last those primitive necessities of civilized life—light and heat. There is more or less recrimination in the papers and in the chamber of deputies. Everybody wants to find some one to blame for the general discomfort.

Same Condition in Germany.

The last government probably depended too much upon "system D" and luck in not having a flood of the Seine or a freeze, and the present government got caught. But when one turns to the German papers one finds pretty much the same condition in Berlin and elsewhere in Germany. The truth is that coal means power as well as light and heat, and the war is eating up an abnormal amount of the world's precious store of power; every nation is spending more power than it is creating.

No government really can help the situation as long as the war lasts. The lack of coal will become more and more evident, as the munition factories eat up what coal can be dug out of the mines. Another reason for believing that this war cannot endure through a fourth winter.

At last the little cake, my old, much loved friend, has received the long threatened blow. Beginning with next month the little cake must go into retirement for two days each week. That is the point of the wedge, the flourish of the knife against my little friend, who has stood out so bravely until this moment. It is to save sugar and flour and eggs, too, that his doom is sealed. One feels that he will fade away in base imitations, weak and tasteless, until he is no more—no, before that time comes the war will be stopped.

Restaurant Menus Reduced.

Along with the little cake the menus in restaurants and hotels must be reduced "for the sake of precaution" to two main dishes beside hors-d'oeuvres and desserts. Now what is a hors-d'oeuvre, properly speaking? Many perplexing points will be put up to the police courts for settlement, and one foresees an endless topic for discussion and wit.

Two good dishes, a hors-d'oeuvre, and a dessert should give any one enough to eat, provided they are of good material, not made in the laboratory as many German dishes are said to be.

The truth is that Paris has not yet had any real war hardships of food—this is the beginning. How will Parisians take it? At first jauntily and then with more or less evasion. No Frenchman believes in the possibility of a serious food shortage such as he gloatingly reads of about his enemies. One can always "débrouiller," and the minister of agriculture has said something about buying tractor plows in America to cultivate the waste places and raise more wheat.

Surplus Stocks Smaller.

But one cannot get away from the fact that too many people are busy killing each other and the world is destined to go hungry before long if some of them are not allowed to dig in the fields and raise foodstuffs. Surplus stocks are disappearing and armies are hungry bodies of men.

The French army is abundantly and well fed; also the English. Opinions differ about the German army. But all the civilian populations are feeling the pinch, more or less; the French, I believe, least of all. The decision that the whole world awaits should not come through the stomach, but the stomach will have its say in the matter, no doubt. It is hard to fight, or make shells for that matter, on a hungry stomach.

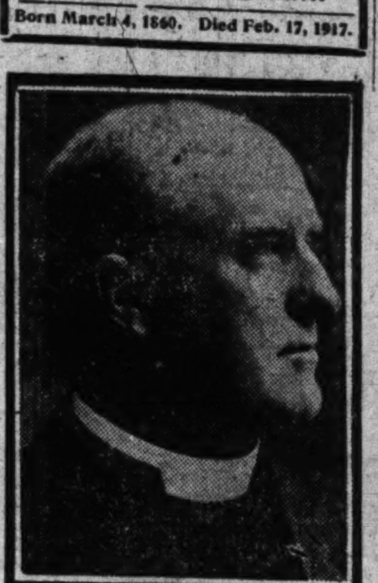
Bishop S. C. Edsall.

Born March 4, 1860. Died Feb. 17, 1917.



Rochester, Minn., Feb. 17.—Episcopal Bishop Edsall died at the Mayo hospital here shortly before 3 o'clock this afternoon.

Edsall's relatives, including his son, Lieut. James Edsall, were at his bedside when death came.

Edsall came here less than a week ago. He said he had not been feeling well since he fell in Minneapolis several weeks ago.

An examination revealed a serious abdominal cyst, which necessitated an operation at the Rochester sanitarium. He failed to recover from the operation.

BORN IN DIXON, ILL.

Samuel Cook Edsall was born in Dixon, Ill., March 4, 1860, and for forty years his activities were confined principally to Illinois.

He was ordained a priest in 1889 and founded the mission church of St. Peter in Chicago. He was rector of St. Peter's from 1889 to 1899, after which he served two years as missionary bishop of North Dakota.

Bishop Edsall's last pulpit appearance in Chicago was at St. Peter's church several months ago, and on that occasion he made a strong plea in favor of the program for military training in the United States.

Consecrated in 1901.

After serving as rector of St. Mark's church in Minneapolis for a short time he was consecrated bishop of Minnesota in October, 1901.

Bishop Edsall was a thirty-second degree Mason.

Mrs. Edsall, formerly Grace Harmon of Aurora, Ill., died in February, 1913, in Minneapolis. Three children survive the bishop, Mrs. F. S. Hetherington, who resides near New York City; James K. Edsall, a lieutenant in the Minnesota national guard, and Samuel Harmon Edsall, Minneapolis.

Riverside Man Charged with Firing His Home

J. V. Weedon, whose home in Herrick road, Riverside, was damaged by fire Thursday night, was formally charged with arson yesterday before Justice Fred S. McClory of Riverside.

Firemen asserted they smelled gasoline and found a can which had contained it in the damaged residence.

U. S. BRIEF ASKS DISSOLUTION OF STEEL COMPANY

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—The United States Steel corporation's defense to the government's dissolution suit was assailed today in a lengthy brief filed by the government in the Supreme court.

The government charges that the corporation was formed not, as contended, as the result of the legitimate development of trade but for the "suppression of competition and the exploitation of the public." The government meets the corporation's contention that it is not a monopoly because it alone cannot dictate prices with the declaration that the corporation controls the output of more than 50 per cent of production in almost every branch of its activity and has maintained prices, notably in the case of steel rails, to the extent that competitors virtually have followed the prices fixed by the corporation.

"If one-half of the steel industry may be thus combined through one holding company certainly those controlling the other half would have the right to combine through another holding company," the brief says. "And, of course, if it be lawful to centralize control of the steel industry in two holding companies it would be equally lawful to central control of every other industry in two holding companies. Such undue concentration of control over industry was the very evil which the act was intended to prevent."

The finding of the lower court in dismissing the government's suit then is assailed.

Prismolite

The Perfected Lens

There is substantial scientific reason for the great popularity and big sales of the Prismolite lens. Here is why they are in such big demand:

Why is a slightly cloudy day better for taking an outdoor photograph than a brilliant, sunny day?

Because the more complete diffusion of sunlight broken up by the vapor in the atmosphere more clearly defines all objects. The sensitive plate on which the picture is taken—which is somewhat like the sensitive retina of the eye—is not confused by glare or shadows.

For the same physical reasons a perfectly diffused artificial light defines objects much more clearly and, therefore, affords a much better driving light than will a brilliant, glaring headlight.

The Prismolite lens gives a more scientific, a more thorough diffusion of light—and, therefore, a nearer approach to daylight conditions than any other lens.

Prismolite is a convex lens of high grade polished plate glass, upon the outer surface of which have been formed thousands of perfect prisms—64 to the square inch. These prisms very thoroughly break up and diffuse the light, while interfering so little with the power of the lights that one can tell time by an ordinary watch 200 feet ahead. So broad is the diffusion of the beam that this can be done fifty feet off the direct line of the lamps.

This demonstration has been made time and again with Prismolite and lamps of twenty-four candle power. Prismolite has been approved by the police authorities of all leading cities and by those states having automobile lighting laws. You will never be stopped with Prismolite.

Weeks of Waiting
HUDSON SUPER-SIX
A Situation You Can Now Avoid

Last spring we faced this condition:

Last year we built 25,000 Hudson Super-Sixes. This year's output will be 30,000—not a great advance.

Early last year the Super-Six was unknown. It was a new invention—an enigma. Some said an experiment.

It has since won all the worth-while records.

Its praises are sounded by more than 25,000 owners.

It holds today undisputed world supremacy.

National Show sales broke all records. In every section the demand is unprecedented for this time of year.

Another over-demand seems inevitable—and near.

Last year the Super-Six outsold any other fine car. This year's demand seems likely to be doubled.

So we urge that fine-car buyers decide the question now.

The first thing, and the chief thing, to consider is the motor. And its chief virtue is absence of vibration.

Vibration causes friction. In the average type it wastes half the motor's power. It restricts performance, it causes wear, it prohibits endurance.

The Super-Six invention—a Hudson patent—almost eliminates friction. So nearly, that it added 80 per cent to the six-type efficiency, and made this type supreme.

It has proved that by winning all worth-while records. That is, all stock-car records for speed, for hill-climbing, for long-distance endurance, and for quick acceleration.

It excels in all sorts of performance. And it probably doubles the life of a motor, due to this minimized friction.

First in All Ways

All the latest Hudson bodies were designed for this top-place car. Every item of beauty and luxury shows their leadership.

In engineering, the Hudson staff has held first place for years. Everyone concedes the leadership of Hudson engineers.

This year, a new gasoline saver gives another important distinction. A shutter controls the heat and regulates the combustion efficiency of the motor.

So the fine-car buyer who buys on merit is bound to choose the Hudson. And this is to urge that you find it out in time to get prompt delivery.

BY MAROON.

Minnesota defeated Chicago, 20 to 18, in the hardest fought basketball game of the season, and went back into the lead in the conference race. The Maroons gave Dr. Cook's boys a battle every inch of the way and staged a desperate rally near the close which put them three points to the good. At this point the Gophers called for a rest. With two minutes to go, Gillen slipped in a pair of baskets and the visitors guarded every remaining play by clever stalling and held their slim lead.

At the half the Gophers led, 12 to 9, and they started out the last period with a burst of speed and sank two more baskets. Then Page's offense got under way and the Maroons spurted. A swift pass from Gorgas bounced off of Bent's arm into the net and Townley, Gorgas, and Clark tipped short shots through the net. The Maroons could not hold their advantage when Gillen and his mates ran wild in the last minute. Lineup:

Urbana, Ill., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Illinois dampened Purdue's championship hopes and improved its own fighting chance for conference honors tonight when it conquered the Boilermakers, 27 to 16. Jones' tossers led from the outset and the visitors were unable to catch up at any stage, although they fought hard. Alwood, assisted by spectacular feeding on the part fo the Woods twins, caged six baskets. Lineup:

Madison, Wis., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Doc Meanwell's rejuvenated Badgers trounced Ohio State tonight, 40 to 15. The Badgers got the jump at the start and maintained their lead by a wide margin all the way. Midgame the score was 22 to 6.

Wisconsin, with the Chandler-Meyers-Olson combination, performed in the best style of the season. The Badgers displayed the fierce fighting and smooth scoring ability that characterized Meanwell's champion teams in years past. For Ohio, Norton was the visitors' brightest star, caging three baskets and doing stellar guarding all the way. Lineup:

STAFF WILL TRY FOR MARK TODAY

The official list of entries for the first annual skating derby of the Illinois Sportsmen's club to be held at Douglas park today were announced yesterday. The list includes such well known knights of the steel blades as Art Staff of the Northwest Skating club, international amateur champion; Sigurd "Brick" Larsen of the Norwegian Turners, and Vic Gunderson. Staff also will attempt to hang up a new world's record for skating a furlong backward. The first event will start at 1:30 o'clock.

Indiana Wins Dual Mat Contests from Purple

Bloomington, Ind., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Indiana defeated the Northwestern wrestling team in the new gym, 28 to 6, tonight. The Purple got only two decisions and no falls. In the 125 pound class Hook of Indiana got a decision and a fall over Hafley, the fall coming in 4:00. Dalzell of Indiana, 135 pounder, got two falls over Maizell, Northwestern. The 145 pound contest between P. Moore, Indiana, and Johnson, Northwestern, resulted in three draws. Two 158 pound matches were staged because neither team had any heavyweights. In the first J. Moore, Indiana, won two falls from Olsen, Northwestern. Hancock, Northwestern, won decision over Tatlock, Indiana, in two falls, in the other.

TELL YACHTSMEN OF NAVAL DUTIES

How submarine hunting may displace mere racing as a sport and the duty of Chicago yachtsmen and motor boatsmen will be explained tomorrow night at the first "get-together" dinner of the Edgewater Beach Yacht club. It is the intention of the new organization to take the lead among Lake Michigan yachtsmen in preparing to aid the United States navy in case the use of an auxiliary scout patrol becomes necessary on either coast.

Yacht clubs in the east are already keenly alive to the need of coöperation with the navy. It is pointed out that while the United States sea forces are strong in dreadnaughts, the "mosquito fleet" for patrol duty in deficient.

A partial list of reservations for the dinner, which will be held at the Edgewater Beach hotel, was made public yesterday by Commodore William A. Lydon, and is representative of leading lines of business, the professions, and public offices.

Dartmouth Takes Meet; Caldwell Beats Eby

Boston, Mass., Feb. 17.—Dartmouth college athletes tonight defeated the track teams of Harvard university and the University of Pennsylvania in an indoor meet. The Hanover collegians scored 47 points, Harvard, 30½, and Penn, 11½.

The world's indoor record of 6 seconds for the 45 yard hurdles was equaled twice. W. T. Dobbs of Dartmouth won the regular event in this time, and Earl J. Thompson, a Dartmouth freshman, the national junior hurdles champion, made the same time in a special contest.

In a special 1,000 yard race D. S. Caldwell of the Boston A. A., defeated Earl Eby of the Chicago Athletic association, J. W. Ryan of the Boston A. A. finishing third. The time was 2:20 4-5.

MICHIGAN MEN GET INVITATION TO 'BIG 9' MEET

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

The door was partly opened yesterday for the University of Michigan's return to the Western conference at a joint meeting of the faculty representatives and graduate committee at the University club. They decided to allow Michigan's track men and relay teams to compete in the first annual relay carnival of the University of Illinois, to be held at Urbana on March 3.

As a result of this action, the conference let down the bars and rescinded its rule made some years ago which prohibited a member of the conference competing against another school which had withdrawn from the organization.

Every institution which is a representative of the "Big Nine" will be represented by either individuals or relay teams. Michigan will send its best athletes and relay teams to the games, thereby making the event a stepping stone for Michigan's ultimate return to the fold.

Situation Now Clear.

The meeting was called to consider the invitation which Illinois extended to Michigan to take part in its games. The Wolverines accepted and Illinois was glad to renew athletic relations. Some members of the conference thought such a movement would be a violation of the boycott rule, but at the joint meeting it was decided to allow the invitation and acceptance to stand. Prof. J. F. A. Pyre of the University of Wisconsin, secretary of the faculty committee, afterwards made the following statement:

> Today's meeting was called because Illinois invited Michigan to participate in its relay games on March 3 at Urbana. Michigan accepted. Under the circumstances the invitation will be allowed to stand.

Refuse Further Comment.

Asked whether this would be a stepping stone for Michigan's return to the conference, Prof. Pyre said, "I have nothing to say." Further than these few remarks nothing could be gleaned from any members of the committee. It was a secretive affair, and apparently every member was bound to secrecy.

After the meeting had adjourned A. A. Stagg of the University of Chicago walked into the club to attend a golf meeting. He had little comment to make on the action taken, but asserted he would be glad to have Michigan back in the conference. Outside of athletics, Mr. Stagg asserted that the friendliest kind of feeling always has existed between the two institutions.

News Pleasing to Stagg.

"I am glad to hear that Michigan will compete in the Illinois relay games," Mr. Stagg said. "It will stimulate interest in athletics in the west and arouse enthusiasm such as we have never had before. Michigan belongs in the west and I, for one, will be only too glad to see the Wolverines back in the fold."

When asked if the expansion of the organization from nine to ten institutions would make it too unwieldy Stagg said it would not hurt it a bit but would put more work on the secretary. Asked if the present rule which provides that every conference football team must play four of its seven games with other conference elevens would be altered, Stagg said a plan could be devised whereby the rule could be amended.

Prof. T. A. Moran of Purdue, president of the committee, asserted that Michigan had made indirect overtures to return to the conference. At a meeting of the Michigan Alumni club held at Detroit a short time ago a vote of the members was taken, and it was six to one for Michigan's return. Michigan alumni residing in Chicago are keen for the return of the Wolverines.

Contracts for Next Fall.

Michigan has contracts with Pennsylvania and Cornell for football games this fall, and it is extremely doubtful whether matters can be adjudicated to such an extent as to have the Wolverines play one of the conference colleges. Schedules would have to be rearranged and other matters looked after before satisfactory schedules for the ten institutions could be arranged.

With the exception of Prof. Sembower of the University of Indiana all the other representatives were present. The following attended: Prof. T. A. Moran, Purdue, president; J. F. A. Pyre, Wisconsin, secretary; G. A. Goodenough, Illinois; A. W. Small, Chicago; T. E. French, Ohio State; B. J. Lambert, Iowa; W. V. Pooley, Northwestern, and James Paige, Minnesota.

Michigan Man Seeks Coach.

Prof. Ralph Aigler of Michigan, a member of the athletic board of control, was in town for the purpose of securing a basketball coach. He refused to divulge the name of the tutor he wanted, but asserted everything has been completed for his contract, which will be drawn as soon as he returns to Ann Arbor.

Prof. Aigler also said he was not approached by any members of the conference faculty committee relative to Michigan's threatened return. He admitted, however, that the sentiment of the board at Ann Arbor was in favor of Michigan competing with western universities and colleges.

MAROONS SWAMP ILLINI IN DUAL SWIMMING MEET

Urbana, Ill., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—University of Chicago swimmers, headed by Meine and Crawford, defeated the University of Illinois today, 42 to 26. The Illini partly solaced themselves by winning an exciting water basketball contest, 4 to 3, the visitors being without the services of Capt. Clark.

Two new tank records were established. Chicago made the 200 yard relay in 1:47 1-5, lowering the old record of 1:50, made by Yale. Faircloth of Illinois swam the 150 yard back stroke in 2:05 2-5, the former tank record being 2:07. Summaries:

200 yard relay—Won by Chicago [Earl, Collins, Crawford, Meine]. Time, 1:47 1-5.

Fancy diving—Won by Johns, Illinois; Grey, Illinois, second; Crawford, Chicago, third.

50 yard swim—Won by Meine, Chicago; Gould, Illinois, second; Andrews, Illinois, third. Time, :27 4-5.

200 yard breast stroke—Won by Bowers, Chicago; Meine, Chicago, second; Falkenburg, Illinois, third. Time, 3:04.

220 yard swim—Won by Earle, Chicago; Crawford, Chicago, second; Roos, Illinois, third. Time, 2:46 4-5.

Plunge for distance—Won by Carlsen, Chicago; Vial, Illinois, second; Harper, Chicago, third. Distance, 73 feet.

150 yard back stroke—Won by Faircloth, Illinois; Collins, Chicago, second; Meine, Chicago, third. Time, 2:05 2-5.

100 yard swim—Won by Crawford, Chicago; Gould, Illinois, second; Waldo, Illinois, third. Time, 1:02 3-5.

Score: Chicago, 42; Illinois, 26.

Water basketball: Illinois, 4; Chicago, 3.

NEW TRIER LOSES TO GRAND RAPIDS

Grand Rapids, Mich., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Grand Rapids Y. M. C. A. swimmers defeated representatives of New Trier High school of Evanston tonight, 40 to 28. Dennett was the star of the Chicago team, scoring eleven points. George Schaefer, interscholastic plunge for distance champion, was tied in his specialty by Capt. Kramer of the local team. Both negotiated the sixty foot tank in :28. Summaries:

Plunge for distance—Schaeffer, New Trier, and Kramer, Grand Rapids, tied for first [60 feet, in :28]; Driscoll, Grand Rapids, third.

80 yard breast stroke—Won by Cordo, New Trier; Zuidervelde, Grand Rapids, second; J. Beukema, Grand Rapids, third. Time, 1:08 3-5.

60 yard back stroke—Won by Dennett, New Trier; King, New Trier, second; Souden, Grand Rapids, third. Time, :42 2-5.

220 yard swim—Won by Buck, Grand Rapids; Stafford, New Trier, second; Dennett, New Trier, third. Time, 2:45 1-5.

Fancy diving—Ruggles, Grand Rapids, first [322.59 points]; J. Beukema, Grand Rapids, second [320.85 points]; Stafford, New Trier, third [316.95 points].

Relay—Won by Grand Rapids [J. Beukema, Souden, C. Beukema, Elliott]; New Trier, second [Knebel, Weld, King, Stafford]. Time, 1:29 1-5.

Badgers Win, 3 to 2, Over Purple Hockey Players

Madison, Wis., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—After Northwestern hockey players led with 2 to 1 at the end of the first half the Badgers came back and grabbed a 3 to 2 victory. With Wisconsin's victory today each team has a victory to its credit, and on March 3 the better team will be determined in a third contest. Evans, for Wisconsin, played a stellar defensive game, and Capt. Lange was Northwestern's star, being responsible for the Purple's scores. Moran contributed two goals for Wisconsin, and Barry's tally won the game.

CRAZY KENNEDY, DETECTIVE

Words AND Pictures

BY RING W. LARDNER

CHAPTER I.

"Here's a puzzler," he said. "'Wanted—Butler, first and second cooks, first, second, and third maids. All must hate cheese. Call at 1922 Lake Shore drive.' What do you make of that, Morrison?"

"Some fanatic," I hazarded. "Or else some one who is made ill by the odor of cheese and wants assurance that it will not be brought into the house. What do you think yourself?"

"I have not sufficient data to reach a conclusion," replied Kennedy. "I can only tell you that the advertiser is wealthy, that his first name is Paul and his last name Wendell, and that he is well educated."

"O, surely, Kennedy," I scoffed, "you can't deduce all that from one small ad."

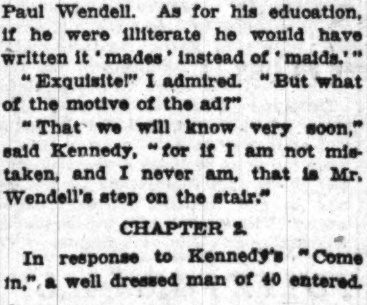
"It's not so difficult, Morrison," replied my friend. "A man must be wealthy to want all those servants and to live on Lake Shore drive. As for his name, I happen to know that No. 1922 is the old Wendell estate and that the home is now occupied by Paul Wendell. As for his education, if he were illiterate he would have written it 'mades' instead of 'maids.'"

"Exquisite!" I admired. "But what of the motive of the ad?"

"That we will know very soon," said Kennedy, "for if I am not mistaken, and I never am, that is Mr. Wendell's step on the stair."

CHAPTER 2.

In response to Kennedy's "Come in," a well dressed man of 40 entered.



A Well Dressed Man of Forty Entered.

"Good afternoon, Mr. Wendell," greeted Crazy. "We were just reading your queer ad in the Times."

"How did you know my name was Wendell?" astonished the visitor.

"I knew from your address," Kennedy replied.

"It is true," admitted Wendell. "I have come to you as a last resort."

"This is no resort," said Kennedy.

"I see you must have your joke," said Wendell, smiling slightly. "But the affair is no joke to me. I will state the facts as briefly as possible. My wife, who was a Miss Schultz, is a great lover of cheese for breakfast. It has been my practice, in the last four years, to buy a pound of cheese every evening on my way home, so that she may have it next morning fresh. In the last two weeks the pound of cheese has disappeared every night, leaving her cheeseless at breakfast. I have fired and hired a dozen sets of servants to no purpose. I am convinced that it is an inside job and have tried to engage help that despised the victual in question—all in vain."

"Where do you put the cheese when you bring it into the house?" queried Crazy.

"On the piano, of course," said Wendell.

"Naturally," agreed Kennedy. "And I think the way to solve your mystery is for I and Morrison to come to your home tonight and sit up and watch the piano."

"O, if you will do that I will pay your splendidly," said our grateful guest.

CHAPTER 3.

On our way to the Wendell mansion Kennedy stopped at a drug store and gave an order to the clerk that I did not hear. The clerk handed him a small package and we went on our way.

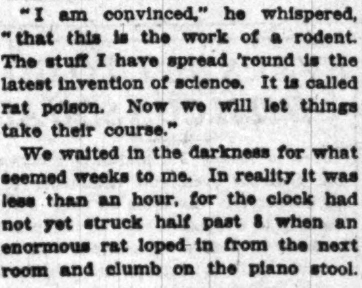
It was 7:30 p. m. when we reached Wendells, and the family had retired.

"I see we are not too late," said Kennedy, for the pound of cheese held a conspicuous place on the keyboard of the famous Wendell upright.

Opening the package he had purchased of the druggist, Crazy approached the piano and smeared it, cheese and all, with the contents of a small box. Then he returned to sit beside me on the couch.

"I am convinced," he whispered, "that this is the work of a rodent. The stuff I have spread 'round is the latest invention of science. It is called rat poison. Now we will let things take their course."

We waited in the darkness for what seemed weeks to me. In reality it was less than an hour, for the clock had not yet struck half past 8 when an enormous rat loped in from the next room and clumb on the piano stool.



An Enormous Rat Loped in from the Next Room.

An instant later there was a terrible growl and the rodent fell to the floor.

"Better capture him now!" I cried.

"No," said Kennedy; "he'll die in the open air if we leave him alone," and before he had finished speaking the rat had leaped through a bay window and fallen to his death on the cement walk outside.

"We won't disturb Wendell now," said Crazy. "Besides, I don't feel that I have done very much. It was but a question of time and Mr. Rat would have died of overfeeding."

"But, surely," I said, "before we go we should remove the poison, lest Mrs. Wendell eat some of it on her favorite dish in the morning."

"No," said Kennedy. "Cheese at breakfast is a pernicious habit, and tomorrow morning's experience will cure her of it for life."

ANN ARBOR STAR WILL JOIN CUBS FOR MASK JOB

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Al Benton, one of the star athletes of the University of Michigan, will be on the Cubs' special train leaving for the California training camp Tuesday night. Because of the uncertain condition of the catching staff for the north side team Manager Mitchell engaged the collegian who was catcher on the Michigan team when George Sisler was pitcher. The youngster was recommended to Mitchell by Carl Lundgren, the old time Cub pitcher who is baseball coach at the Wolverine school.

Besides being a great baseball player Benton was the regular end for a couple of seasons on Yost's football eleven and is said to be an all round athlete of great promise. He is a sturdy fellow with speed and the reports are that he can hit the ball out of the lot on numerous occasions.

Cubs After Catcher Snyder.

At the same time Benton was being engaged President Weeghman and Manager Mitchell of the north siders were trying by long distance telephone to close the much talked of big trade. It is supposed the deal is for Catcher Snyder of the St. Louis Cardinals, although the officials decline to give the facts.

Indications were that all but three or four of the Cub players will be on board the train Tuesday night. Orders have been sent to all to report here tomorrow to Manager Mitchell at the Hotel Sherman. Only those who live in the west are excused. Some who have not yet signed their contracts are expected to attend to that duty between now and 8 o'clock Tuesday night, when the train will be started on its long journey to California. President Weeghman has declared that no one who hasn't signed will be taken.

Expect Eighty in Party.

Secretary Williams of the Cubs has all arrangements made for the special train, but as yet isn't sure of the size of the party. It is expected that about thirty ball players will be aboard and enough others, including President Weeghman and numerous friends, to bring the total number to eighty persons.

The train will pass through Kansas City the following morning, and all of Wednesday will be steaming out over the Kansas prairie. On Thursday morning the historic city of Santa Fé will be reached, where a special reception has been arranged in the form of an Indian luncheon, with Gen. Pershing and his staff present to greet the Cubs. Several hours will be spent there, then the train will move on, reaching the Grand cañon the following morning, where an entire day will be spent sightseeing. Leaving the cañon that night, the special is scheduled to reach Pasadena Saturday.

Rowland and Grabiner Back.

Manager Rowland and Secretary Grabiner of the White Sox returned from the American league meeting in New York, but had nothing exciting to relate, as they made no attempt to trade off any of the south side stars nor any attempt to procure additional ones.

Saier to Talk Contract with Weeghman of Cubs

MAGIN, COREY CROSS SECOND AS 5,000 YELL

Winning Pair Takes 14 of 21 Sprints in a Berlin Finish.

FINAL STANDING

Teams.	Miles.	Pts.
McNamara-Verri	2,413	53
Magin-Corry	2,413	66
Madden-Drobach	2,413	77
Cameron-Kaiser	2,413	119
Ryan-Thomas	2,413	154
Mitten-Spencer	2,413	163
Sullivan-Kopsky	2,413	172

Carman-Lawrence and Ohrt-Grimm failed to qualify for Berlin finish.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Reggie McNamara and Francisco Verri took first honors in the six day bike race, which ended at Dexter pavilion last night, with a final hour of Berlin sprints that kept a crowd of nearly 5,000 fans in one continuous uproar. The total distance covered was 2,413 miles, about 400 miles behind the record.

The Australian-Italian riders won fourteen of the twenty-three sprints of one mile each which featured the last hour of the final night and had the prize cinched some time before the end came at 10:30 o'clock. Their total of points was fifty-three. The team of Magin and Corey took second honors of the week, being about the only pair capable of disputing the sprint honors at the end with McNamara and Verri. Their total was sixty-six.

Third to Madden, Drobach.

Madden and Drobach landed the third prize with 77, the former winning three of the sprints in the last hour, while his mate took one. Cameron and Kaiser were fourth with 119, Ryan and Thomas fifth with 154, Mitten and Spencer sixth with 163, and Sullivan and Kopsky seventh with 172. The other two teams, Carman and Lawrence and Ohrt and Grimm, failed to regain their lost lap before the final hour and were not permitted in the sprints.

McNamara was the real star of the entire grind and won the applause and admiration of the fans at the finish by his wonderful sprinting. He won eight of the twelve sprints in which he appeared. Once he finished second, twice he was third, and once, he was fourth.

His partner, the speedy Verri, rode in eleven of the sprints, winning six and always was in the fight. Once he was forced to accept last place because of a foul.

Almost Steal a Lap.

In spite of the fact that the Sullivan-Kopsky team finished last, these two riders received almost as much applause as the winners, because of a trick worked in the sixteenth sprint, when they nearly lapped the field. Sullivan sneaked a lead while the preceding bunch of riders still were on the track and had half a lap lead before the trick was discovered.

Kopsky then picked up his mate on the fifth lap and continued the hot pace, and soon the entire field of fourteen seemed to be in the race. But the pace was too hot to gain the lap, although the boys did succeed in winning that one sprint.

Although the crowd didn't come up to expectations, still it represented a big sum of money because of the boost in prices for the final night. So the promoters are thought to have come out with a handsome profit.

Carman Fails to Regain Lap.

Previous to the final hour the crowd warmed up its voice yelling for Clarence Carman of the Carman-Lawrence team, who made dozens of efforts from 7 until 9:30 o'clock to regain the lost lap in the race and be eligible for the final sprinting and the prize. Right up to the last Carman continued his efforts and kept the entire field in hot water. Several times he had nearly half a lap lead, but never was able to stick long enough to make it.

When the two teams—Lawrence-Carman and Ohrt-Grimm—had to drop out before the final hour of sprinting they were tied in points, and Ohrt and Carman did a ten lap sprint to determine which should be last. Carman won the sprint.

Jones Nips Moore, 50-49, in Cue League Contest

In a hard fought match, which went eighty-four innings, Frank Jones of Philadelphia by a sprint at the wire nosed out John Moore by one point in their Interstate Three Cushion match at Flenner's. Both players scored fairly well in the opening stages, but Moore crept ahead, and at the fiftieth inning led, 42 to 36.

The Quaker City player managed to whittle down this lead until at the finish he needed four points to one by Moore. Jones then ran out the game. It was a battle to keep out of last place. Moore had high run of six. Score at ten inning intervals:

Jones	6	13	14	23	28	36	40	45	50
Moore	9	16	19	29	36	42	48	49	49

Ed Rein, the Chicago amateur, announced yesterday he would compete in the class A balkline championship at Boston next week.

JINX SNATCHES BANTAM HONORS FROM PAL MOORE

BY RAY PEARSON.

There's a young boxer and a wee one who is now making Chicago his home, who thinks a jinx star is hovering over him. His name is Thomas Wilson, more familiarly known as Pal Moore, and he hails from Memphis, Tenn., where he engaged in most of the ring battles that show in the record books. Moore is a bantamweight and he takes pride in the claim that he is not one of the misfit type who cannot step on the scales and make the "honest to goodness" figures of 116 pounds for the class. Moore in a pinch can even make a lower notch than this and hold his usual strength.

Now to the jinx stuff. Moore has been scrapping for three years and in that time he has had the pleasure of meeting all of the topnotchers in his division and among those are included Pete (Kid) Herman of New Orleans, the Italian boy who holds the title of world's champion; Kid Williams of Baltimore, the boy from whom Herman took the title last month, and Johnny Ertle of St. Paul, who claims he is the real champion because he won from Williams on a foul before Herman got a crack at the Baltimore Dane.

Beats Three Topliners.

The records show that in his bout with Pete Herman, Moore won the decision in eight rounds at Memphis. In his clash with Williams, a no decision contest, he won off by himself in eight rounds, while in his meeting with Ertle he scored a decision victory. Of course, Moore delights in pointing to his record showing these victories, but he sadly laments the fact that he fought all but one of them when they weren't champions, and, therefore, was unable to achieve the glory of gaining the title.

That's where Moore figures the jinx comes in, and now he is on the warpath to kill off the jinx. With his manager, Tommy Walsh, he is playing all his cards for another meeting with Herman now and he also wants another crack at Ertle.

Not Raking in Shekels.

"What good did it do me to hand lacings to Herman, Williams, and Ertle when there wasn't a chance to cop the title," remarked Moore yesterday. "Of course I got a little coin, but they don't hand out the shekels in large gobs at Memphis, especially to bantamweights, so I've had to make all the capital possible out of the fact that I defeated these boys, and that hasn't been extremely successful.

"It takes a champion to pull down the coin in the boxing game, and, despite the fact that I've beaten the boys who have held the title, I'm no nearer to being the title holder than I was before I met them.

"It seems to have been my luck to be matched with these boys at the wrong time, except in the case of Williams, and I would have had to knock him out in eight rounds to be champion then. I've never performed in a titular ring contest, and so you see I'm in a predicament that few boxers ever have found themselves in. Now I've got to go and get Herman in the ring and beat him again in order to be champion."

No Decision in Williams Go.

The only one of this trio that Moore met in a no decision bout who was a champion was Kid Williams. When the match was made for Memphis over the eight round route the Baltimore Kid refused to box unless a clause was inserted in the articles that no decision would be given.

Moore agreed to this, but had a verdict been permitted he would have been the champion, for he beat Williams so far that there could be no doubt as to which boy was the winner. Moore knocked the champion to the canvas twice, one of the knockdowns being scored in the fourth round and the other in the fifth.

New York, Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Carl Morris was matched today to box Frank Moran ten rounds March 12 at Madison Square garden. The two fighters refused to accept guarantees, but insisted on percentages.

Field of 175 Athletes Named in Soldiers' Meet

Close to 175 individual track athletes have entered the annual indoor games of the First Regiment Athletic association on Friday and Saturday at the south side armory, Sixteenth street and Michigan avenue. Because of belated communications from organizations wishing to enter, the association officials decided to keep the entry list open until Monday. Coach Martin Delaney of the Cherry Circlers has filed the names of forty of his best performers, including Jo Loomis, Andy Ward, and P. Graham. Coach Stagg of the University of Chicago entered thirty-five. The Illinois Athletic club was next with twenty-six, and the Mystic Athletic club with twenty. Jesse Smith, 28 North Dearborn street, has charge of the entries.

Go Over Huggins's Head to Get Infielder Hornsby

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 17.—Miller Huggins, manager of the Cardinals, returned from the New York meeting tonight, announcing he had refused many offers for Roger Hornsby, the Cards' peppery infielder.

When he hit town Huggins learned Mrs. Helen Britton, president of the club, was considering an offer from the Cubs and Braves for Hornsby, the owners of the clubs "going over Huggins' head" in an effort to get Hornsby. Hug is peeved and said so. If Hornsby goes it will be without his approval.

Corrigan's Colors Supreme at West Side Track in 80's

BY R. L. CARY JR.

In a previous article I related how the old west side track in Chicago was closed through lack of support under the régime of J. F. Winters. Soon afterward it was leased to Edward Corrigan and David Waldo. This was in the late '80s.

Under this management the track took on a new lease of life and there was some mighty good racing there. The stable of Corrigan, then at the zenith of its fame, was one of the strongest in the west. The green with white sash was known from one end of the country to the other through the performance of Freeland, whose defeat of Miss Woodford, a noted race mare owned by the Dwyer brothers of Brooklyn, set the entire turf world ablaze.

Murphy Wins on Freeland.

This race, run at Monmouth park in the summer of 1885, was a match at a mile and a quarter. Jimmie McLaughlin, then the star rider of the eastern tracks, had the mount on Miss Woodford, while Isaac Murphy rode Freeland. It was the old story. Murphy simply lay a neck behind McLaughlin until the stretch was reached and then came away and won by a good long neck amidst the cheers of the western contingent, which had backed the Corrigan horse almost to a man.

Freeland was not the only good horse in Corrigan's string. He had Pearl Jennings, a mare that at that time was almost unbeatable at a mile and a sixteenth; Modesty, a War Dance mare with which Corrigan won the first American Derby in 1884; Irish Pat, a good, serviceable gelding and winner of many stakes; Lizzie Dwyer and Ida Hopes, a pair of 3 year old fillies with which he ran one-two in the Ashland Oaks at Lexington, and others.

Corrigan, however, had lost the services of Isaac Murphy as rider and of J. W. Rogers as trainer. His stable was in charge of his nephew, Pat Dunne, a capable, painstaking man, who might have made a better showing if he had been left to his own devices or had Corrigan heeded his advice.

Kuhl Secretary of Track.

The track secretary was Harry Kuhl, who had been with Corrigan when the latter was building railways in Colorado. He was a capable official and later became secretary of the Western Jockey club.

The attendance during the time that Corrigan and Waldo ran the track, which was until Hawthorne was completed, was remarkably good. Corrigan won more than his share of the purses, but why shouldn't he? He had by all odds the strongest stable then racing in the west. I worked for him many years and I never found him to be anything but on the level. Quick tempered and domineering he was, but his word was as good as his bond. All that he ever asked was an even break. I have heard a great many accusations made against Corrigan, but as a rule they came from men who had fancied grievances.

Learns How Horses Travel.

After the close at the west side Corrigan shipped a carload of horses to Latonia to learn by experience how horses traveled. I went with them. There were sixteen horses in the car, among them Unite and Bonanza. The latter was a recent purchase from Christy Bros. and subject to car fits. He had one of them going down on the train, becoming all but unmanageable. When we reached Latonia in the early gray of the morning and the horses were disposed of in the stalls, Dunne and I were eating breakfast. Corrigan crossed the track and, approaching Dunne, said:

"Pat, I want you to take Bonanza out and work him a mile and a sixteenth this morning. I am going to start him in a race at that distance this afternoon."

Dunne Leaves Corrigan.

"Mr. Corrigan," replied Dunne, "Bonanza had a very bad night of it, and is in no condition to be either worked or raced."

"Who is running this stable, you or I?" snapped the old man. "All that you have got to do is to do as I tell you to."

"You are running the stable, of course," snapped back Dunne quick as a flash, "and from this time on you are training it, too." Slipping on his coat, he strode away in the direction of a car that would take him to the city. This ended Dunne's connection with the stable.

SHOOT CONTEST TO NORTHCOTTS

The team captained by W. P. Northcott yesterday won the monthly shoot of the Hamilton club at the Chicago Yacht club with 118 targets. L. A. Bell's team was second, five targets behind. In the target handicap event L. A. Bell, with an allowance of four targets, was first. Each contestant shot at fifty birds and Bell broke 43 and with his handicap registered a score of 47. W. P. Northcott broke 44 and with a handicap of two birds turned in a score of 46. H. A. Newkirk was third with 45. Scores:

H. R. Everding of Portland, Ore., has donated four trophies to be competed for at a shoot at the Lincoln park traps in honor of T. A. Marshall. The Lincoln Park club also will donate two trophies.

EVANS NOT TO GO WITH CUB SQUAD

Charles Evans Jr., national amateur and national open golf champion, will not accompany the Cubs on their training trip to the coast. If the north side batsmen in their swings at the ball this summer fail to display the rhythmic action which marks the good golfer they can blame it on the United States Golf association.

Some weeks ago it was heralded that President Charles Weeghman had invited "Chick" to go on the training trip for the purpose of giving the Cubs some idea as to the correct method of hitting the ball. Unbelieving golfers ventured to suggest that Mr. Weeghman and his fellow magnates who are addicted to the sport of the links were desirous of getting "Chick" into their foursomes.

But the statement has been made that "Chick" was going to give the ball players pointers, and as these are parlous days for the amateur sportsmen "Chick" sought advice from the powers that be. He was advised not to make the trip and decided accordingly.

Westergard vs. Zbyszko in Contest at Coliseum

Jess Westergard and Wladek Zbyszko will grapple at the Coliseum Thursday night. Both are well above the six foot mark and weigh over 220 pounds. Westergard has been doing his training at Des Moines and will arrive in Chicago tomorrow. Zbyszko is conditioning himself near New York City and also will be on hand tomorrow and finish his training at the Illinois Athletic club. Arrangements are being made for Westergard to do the finishing touches at the Chicago Athletic club.

TRAVIS PASSES FROM RANKS OF AMATEUR GOLF

Veteran Will Continue as a Course Architect, Incurring 'Pro' Ban.

BY JOE DAVIS.

With the passing of Walter J. Travis from the ranks of amateur golf competition the game in this country loses its most picturesque figure. After winning the recent tournament at Palm Beach, Fla., the veteran announced he would continue to act as a golf course architect. This, under the last ruling of the United States Golf association, makes him ineligible for amateur competition. As far as the national amateur tournament was concerned, Travis already had retired, feeling that the strain of the big event was too great for his physical powers.

Beats Best of Britishers.

There are two events in American golfing history which long will be remembered—Travis' winning of the British amateur championship at Sandwich in 1904, and the winning of the American open championship by Francis Ouimet at Brookline in 1913, when he defeated Harry Vardon and Edward Ray in the playoff of their triple tie.

When Travis went across the pond in 1904 he was the American amateur champion and had previously won that title in 1900 and 1901. He never was taken seriously by the Britishers, and even when he faced Edward Blackwell in the final the giant Englishman was favorite. Outdriven fifty yards from the tee, Travis, by a marvelous display of approaching and putting, defeated the English star, 4 and 3.

Learns Game in U. S.

Although born in Australia, Travis learned all his golf in this country, starting at the age of 35. Physically he did not possess the advantages of many of his rivals, but keen application to the problems of the game, coupled with great nerve, placed him at the head of the amateur golfers of this country, and it was not until increasing years brought a decline in his physical powers that he bowed to the skill of the younger players.

KEOGH TO FRONT IN CUE COMBATS

Jerome Keogh, who a decade ago was the world's pocket billiard champion, climbed in front of the three cushion spotlight last week when he swung around the western end of the interstate three cushion circuit and won four of his five games. The little man from Rochester, N. Y., upset both Ellis and Cannefax on their own tables, leaving the five leaders closely bunched. Standing:

Champion Frank Taberski of Schenectady, the pocket billiard champion, generally is picked to defeat Louis Kreuter, the young New Yorker, in their match for the title at Youngstown, O., this week. Play will start Thursday night.

Tomorrow night Dr. Campbell, formerly of St. Louis, and Frank Young will start play in a 150 point match at three cushions at Foley's room. Campbell at one time represented the Mound city in the National Three Cushion league. The other blocks will be staged Wednesday and Thursday nights.

FULTZ FORMALLY CANCELS STRIKE

New York, Feb. 17.—President David L. Fultz of the Baseball Players' fraternity announced today that the members of the organization had been formally released from their pledge not to sign 1917 contracts until they received the consent of the fraternity officials. This release is the final step in calling off the recent baseball strike which for a time threatened to seriously interfere with the game during the coming season.

Fultz, in announcing the withdrawal of the strike order, said that the fraternity would continue as the players' official organization and the future of the association would depend upon the interest and action of the players themselves in this connection.

Stucky, Former Head of Louisville Clubs, Dies

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 17.—Dr. T. Hunt Stucky, a former president of the old Louisville American association club, and also president of the club in the days when Louisville held a franchise in the National league, died at a sanitarium here today after an extended illness. Dr. Stucky was 58 years old. He was one of the most widely known physicians in Kentucky.

Illini Grapplers Beat Purdue.

Urbana, Ill., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—The University of Illinois decisively defeated Purdue grapplers tonight when the Illini mat men took five out of six bouts. Mullendorf of Purdue won the only match for the Boilermakers at 135 pounds.

Nothing of special importance developed until trick nine. West would have lost his contract had he not made a present of a heart trick to south, compelling that player to lead up to the king of clubs. The situation is interesting.

M'COY MAY HAVE TO FIGHT DILLON 'STEAD OF DARCY

New York, Feb. 16.—Boxing evidently is not going to allow itself to be dealt another blow through the matching of Les Darcy and Al McCoy in this city. Indications now are that this pair will not be allowed to stage their advertised ten round encounter the night of March 5.

Monday afternoon the commission will meet to hear the complaint of John Weismantel, matchmaker at the Broadway Sporting club, Brooklyn, who contends he has the papers signed that McCoy agreed to a bout in Brooklyn with Jack Dillon long before he ever was approached regarding a bout between himself and Les Darcy. Inasmuch as it is a rule strictly adhered to by the commission to hold boxers to contracts, McCoy probably will be ordered to go through with the Dillon bout.

Mathey and Herd Enter Semi-Final of Net Meet

New York, Feb. 17.—Dean Mathey and Clifton Herd won their way into the semi-final round of the annual national indoor singles tennis championship tournament today. A. H. Man Jr. also gained a place in the next to the final round by defeating Charles Chambers, while Mathey was eliminating A. S. Cragin and Herd defeating Craig Biddle. Summary:

National indoor championship singles: Fourth round—Dean Mathey, Cranford, N. J., defeated A. S. Cragin, New York, 6—4, 7—5; Clifton B. Herd, California, defeated Craig Biddle, Philadelphia, 6—2, 6—3; A. H. Man Jr., New York, defeated Charles Chambers, Brooklyn, 6—2, 6—3; S. Howard Voshell defeated Count Otto Salm, 6—1, 6—4.

National indoor championship doubles: Second round—G. King and T. N. Sturges, New York, defeated L. Hartman and S. D. Macallister, New York, 2—6, 7—5, 10—8.

Third round—George King and Thomas N. Sturges, New York, defeated Willard Botsford and Rowland B. Haines, New York, 2—6, 8—6, 6—4; Alrick H. Man Jr. and Clifton B. Herd, New York and California, defeated Harold L. Taylor and R. C. Doggert, Brooklyn, 6—1, 6—1.

Ball Fans to Banquet Semi-Pro Cup Winners

Several hundred semi-pro ball players and fans will banquet the Normals and Romeos on Tuesday night at the Grand Pacific hotel. John M. Lowry is handling the plans. The event is to celebrate the Normals' triumph in the City league pennant race last summer and the Romeos' victory in the Sweitzer cup event, which carried with it the semi-pro championship of the city.

Scandinavian Mat Men Start Tourney Today

Opening bouts in the annual wrestling tourney of the Scandinavian-American Athletic union will be held today at Birns' hall, California and North avenues. On Feb. 22 the second batch will be held at Hamlin and Armitage avenues, and the final contests on Feb. 25 at Fifty-ninth and Aberdeen streets.

SOUTH SIDE CLAIMS GREATEST DISTRICT FOR TENNIS PLAYER

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Right in the heart of the south side of Chicago is the greatest tennis district in the world. Within a mile and a half radius of the South Park club at Sixty-second street and Calumet avenue are 443 courts, according to a tabulation undertaken by the club.

The statistics on the number of courts included hundreds of public clay, turf, and stone dust courts, both singles and doubles, at Jackson park, about a mile east of the club, Washington park a few blocks away, Hamilton park a mile and a quarter south, and along the Midway plaisance.

The well kept grass and hard courts of the University of Chicago, scene of many conference and prep championships, are included, as are also those of the Y. M. C. A. college; those on the leased tract of the old Hyde Park Cricket club, and scores of private courts dotted here and there over the lawns about boulevard residences in the Hyde Park and Woodlawn districts.

The South Park club will begin the construction of six more stone dust courts with the first moderate weather. It will then have nine. A meeting will be held Feb. 28.

The annual meeting of the Chicago Tennis club will be held at the City club at 7 o'clock Tuesday night. The nominating committee will put in the field the following ticket of officers, which is expected to have no opposition:

For officers [directors ex-officio]—President, James J. Forstall; first vice president, Walter T. Hayes; second vice president, Alister H. McCormick; secretary-treasurer, Peirce C. Ward.

SPORTING NOTES

The Bates Jr. challenges any 105 pound team in Chicago, at home or away. Phone Mr. Otto, Superior 8608.

Second regiment heavyweights are seeking basketball opposition at the armory, Madison and Washtenaw. Any five caring to play should call B. E. Lephrot, Normal 7039.

Racine, Wis., hockey players will tackle the All-Chicago aggregation gathered by Paddy Harmon at Riverview this afternoon. It will be the third of a series, each having won once.

The Chicago Revolver club shot two matches in the U. S. Revolver association intercity telegraph competition, scoring 634 against Aspinwall and 630 against the Citizens' club. R. R. Palmer was high both times.

Sinai Social center will stage the A. A. F. championship track meet on March 17. Blanks will be issued this week for both senior and junior events. Gold, silver, and bronze medals will be awarded.

Hamilton Park quintets have issued a plea for games. The park fives range from eighty-five pounds to unlimited weight classes, and all want to book home contests for Wednesdays or Saturdays and games away on other nights. Phone Stewart 850.

The Gimball Athletic club opened its new gymnasium and clubrooms in the Arcade building, Pullman, with a membership of 250. Boxers or wrestlers looking for workout or matches should call at the gym any afternoon or night.

The Bethany Young Men's club basketball team of Edgewater would like to book games with teams having their own gymns for Friday and Saturday nights at the weight of 135-40 pounds and 115-20 pounds. Address R. Bartold, 1305 Thorndale avenue.

The Polish-American A. C. 1917 west park indoor champ, and winner of sixteen games in a row, has challenged the victor in the present series between Central Turners and the Training-Dodgers A. A. to decide the city honors. The Poles already have defeated each. Phone Humboldt 7798.

Calumets, now leading the Chicago Ice Hockey league, and the exponents of the fast Canadian game, composing the Northwestern Dental school seven, will clash Tuesday at White City rink. Burgess of Yale and Pettengill, Dartmouth last year, have added to the Calumets' strength.

With five nines already in, the Commercial Baseball league will hear applications for the vacant berth left at a meeting Friday night at 6 o'clock at 14 South Wabash avenue. Western Electrics, Illinois Tools, U. S. Ball Bearings, Wilson & Co., and Stewart-Warner Speedometer nines are already in the circuit.

CHICAGO ENTERS 125 BOWLING FIVES FOR A. B. C. CHAMPIONSHIP

Chicago will send 125 five man teams to Grand Rapids next month for the purpose of rolling in the seventeenth annual tournament of the American Bowling congress, according to Judge Howard. The mark breaks all records for number of teams that will travel to a bowling meet, the former high mark being the 118 that went to Peoria, forty miles nearer than the Furniture city.

Howard will draw a check of nearly $10,000 to pay for Chicago entry fees as he estimates there are [illegible] doubles and about 650 singles made up out of the five men teams. The total delegation that will comprise the local delegation will reach close to 800 men and their gross expenses for the meet will reach over $40,000, about as much as the total prize money to be offered by the promoters this year.

The first Chicago team to roll will be Charley Crouse's Academy club, which will shoot on March 7, being one of the first of the outside clubs to appear, while the last batch of Chicago men will roll on March 25. Prospects that the tournament will reach the 800 mark, predicted several weeks ago, are bright.

The Logan Square alleys will stage a practice tournament for all A. B. C. five men teams that are entered this year, the meet opening on the same date as the Grand Rapids national event, but closing a couple of days earlier. The meet is open to teams from all parts of the country who are regularly entered with Secretary Langtry, at least four of the regulars being required to roll.

The entry fee is $5 a team, and must be mailed before midnight Feb. [illegible] to Leo A. Schuenemann, 2550 Milwaukee avenue.

LAKE FOREST BEATS MONMOUTH, 31 TO 23; LEADS "LITTLE FIVE"

Lake Forest college defeated Monmouth today in a lucky game on the Lake Forest floor, 31 to 23. The teamwork of both squads lacked much of being perfect. The play of the Monmouth men was clean throughout and plucky in many spots, but luck was against them at the baskets. A feature was the number of successful long throws for baskets by McFerran and Coleman. This game eliminates Monmouth and makes Lake Forest an easy leader in the Little Five race. Lineup:

Lake Forest [31].		Monmouth [23].
McFerran	L. F.	Brettain
Coleman	R. F.	Van Pelt
Marsh, Oke	C.	Graham
Haligas	R. G.	Moffet
Holmes	L. G.	Quinby

Baskets—McFerran [6], Coleman [3], Marsh [4], Haligas [4], Brettain [3], Van Pelt, Graham, Moffet, Quinby. Free goals—McFerran, Quinby [9].

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT.

"REMEMBER the Buffalo." is the slogan of one of the most influential game protective associations in the country, but it is rather inconsiderate of them to ask us to remember the species that had so much to do in building up these United States and was rewarded by the most shameful, wasteful slaughter in all the history of the world. Originally the buffalo was generally distributed over the North American continent and but for him our expansion westward would have been long delayed if not entirely prevented.

Restless spirits like Boone followed the buffalo over the Appalachians and he was soon driven out of Kentucky and a little later out of all the territory east of the Mississippi.

* *

Illinois was once a buffalo country and you can still find the remains of buffalo "wallows" near Chicago. From the time of the civil war until the '80s the states west of the big river swarmed with these great rugged creatures that furnished food, clothing, shelter, fuel, and the implements of war and peace to the Indians and helped to feed the railroad builders and the settlers.

In those days a buffalo hide sold for as little as $1 and thousands were killed for their hides or for their tongues and the rest left to rot. Most of the good restaurants in the west in those days hung out a sign reading: "No Buff Served Here."

* *

The main southern herd was just about cleaned out in the late '70s and by 1883 the northern herd was no more. Nearly a million hides were shipped down the Missouri river in 1883.

Of all these countless millions of buffalo what have we left? A wild herd or two somewhere in Athabasca, about 1,400 in the parks of Canada, and a few over 2,000 in the national parks and buffalo ranges in this country.

"Remember the Buffalo" is indeed a good motto for those who are hollering about their "rights" when the government tries to protect game that is going the way of the fourteen species we have exterminated in the last sixty years.

MICHIGAN TEAM TRIMS HARPERS BY 46-31 SCORE

Well Balanced Squad Wins First Meet of Season at Ann Arbor.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Over 1,000 spectators saw Michigan defeat Notre Dame by a score of 46 to 31 on Waterman gymnasium floor tonight in the first indoor track meet of the season. Michigan got a good start when Cross and Smith beat Bachman in the shot put. "Cee" hurled the ball 45 feet 3 inches, while Smith beat the Catholic shotputter by an inch.

As was expected, Notre Dame copped first in the hurdles, but Beardsley nosed in for second place in this event. In the 880 Meehan and Kasper showed a pretty pair of heels to the Michigan contingent and Bouma got a lone Wolverine counter for this number by taking third.

Dash Event to O'Brien.

O'Brien won the fifty yard dash by an excellent final spurt at the tape, with Scofield just a step ahead of Mulligan of the visiting outfit.

Michigan demonstrated that it had two dependable performers in the high jump, Simmons and Haigh taking the first two places in this event. Scofield jumped into the 440 just a few minutes after finishing the sprint and won it. He was the only Michigan man to place in this event.

Summary of Events.

50 yard dash—Won by O'Brien, M.; Scofield, M., second; Mulligan, N. D., third. Time—:05 3-5.

440 yard run—Won by Scofield, M.; Miller, N. D., second; McDonough, N. D., third. Time—:54.

880 yard run—Won by Meehan, N. D.; Kasper, N. D., second; Bouma, M., third. Time—2:01.

Mile run—Won by Carroll, M.; Sedgwick, M., second; Noonan, N. D., third. Time—4:25 3-5.

60 yard high hurdles—Won by Kirkland, N. D.; Beardsley, M., second; Sterritt, N. D., third. Time—:08 2-5.

High jump—Won by Simmons, M.; Haigh, M., second; Donohue, N. D., third. Height—5 feet 10½ inches.

Shotput—Won by Cross, M.; Smith, M., second; Bachman, N. D., third. Distance—45 feet 3 inches.

Pole vault—Won by Kessler, M.; Edgren, Yeager, Bachman, N. D., tied for second. Height, 11 feet.

Relay race—Won by Notre Dame. Time—2:48 2-5.

Bartfield and Ahearn Win in Gotham Bouts

New York, Feb. 17.—[Special.]—Soldier Bartfield and Young Ahearn were the winners in the star bouts at the Clermont A. C. tonight. Bartfield easily beat Kid Queens, who substituted for Jake Herman, and Ahearn outpointed Will Langford. Bartfield completely outclassed Queens, scoring two knockdowns in the second round and another in the seventh.

Joe Welling decisively whipped Pete Sartley at the Broadway Sporting club, Brooklyn.

Frankie Mason Wins Over A. Armstrong in 8 Rounds

Bay City, Mich., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—In an eight round bout between Frankie Mason, Fort Wayne, Ind., bantam, and Artie Armstrong of Chicago before the Bay City A. C. last night the Hoosier boy got the popular decision. Mason had Armstrong on the floor in the second and fourth rounds.

Rivers to Meet Frankie Murphy.

Joe Rivers, the Spanish lightweight, who has been training in this city, and his pilot, Bob Laga, left last night for Columbus, O., where the former will box Frankie Murphy a twelve rounder Monday night. The men will weigh in at 138 pounds ringside.

"Our Country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong."
—Stephen Decatur.

A GREAT CONSTRUCTIVE MEASURE.

On Thursday the popular branch of the state legislature passed Gov. Lowden's consolidation bill and it is now up to the senate to say whether or not it will make this important reform a reality.

The administrative code bill consolidates about 100 boards, commissions, and bureaus into nine principal administrative departments and establishes a budget system of appropriations to take the place of the present inefficient system of committee appropriation.

The departments will be that of finance, agriculture, labor, mines and minerals, public works, charities and corrections, public health, trade and commerce, and registration and education. None of the constitutional elective offices is affected, only the offices for which the governor is directly responsible. The saving will therefore be at his political expense so far as jobs are concerned, but Gov. Lowden has placed public benefit above any personal political consideration.

Each department will be in charge of a director, to be appointed by the governor, with the advice and consent of the senate, for a term of four years. This centralizes responsibility for the proper conduct of these executive departments where it ought to be, in the chief executive of the state.

The consolidation will save on the pay roll several hundred thousand dollars yearly, but its chief saving will be in the increased efficiency and responsibility which will come with an elimination of overlapping work and the confusion, complication, and delay which are the necessary effects of a haphazard administrative machinery never consistently or harmoniously developed but patched together during a long period of years.

But the governor's bill provides for a reform even more beneficial than the consolidation and simplification of executive departments. It establishes the budget system of appropriation.

The present method is for the head of each office, board, or commission to prepare his own estimate of appropriation. As Gov. Lowden said in his inaugural address, the responsibility of the official is limited to his own office and his outlook is not likely to be any broader. "He is not required to see beyond his own department, which he is ambitious to extend. He is not likely to be sparing in his requests. He may often ask for more than enough and he usually gets it. His estimate is made without reference to the necessities of other departments and without reference to the income of the state."

The estimates of these officials go to the appropriation committee of the house. Hearings are had, but the committee has neither the time nor experience necessary for a thorough investigation and criticism of the various estimates. It does the best it can, in most instances, no doubt, but it can only perform a very crude sort of surgery, which cannot produce a well balanced expenditure, keeping the grand total down to real needs, not stinting deserving activities while yielding too much in some other direction.

It is hardly to be wondered at that through the great growth of governmental activities incident to our progress, the increase of our population, and the awakening of the civic conscience to many new needs, public expenditure has increased by leaps and bounds. But its increase has been greater than the results obtained, and this is largely because of the very faulty method of appropriation described in outline above. The biennial budget in 1909 was less than $20,000,000. In 1915 it was $46,000,000.

Granting that our expenditure must be greater than when the state was a less populous and simpler community, such an increase as this is indefensible and emphasizes the urgent need for more careful methods of appropriation and expenditure.

Under the proposed budget system the duty of presenting estimates to the assembly would devolve upon the director of the department of finance. He would take the various bureau and department estimates and subject them to expert review. He would be fully equipped for this purpose. He would establish uniform bookkeeping and have power to investigate expenditures of all state agencies. A budget would be prepared on the basis of this comprehensive criticism with the items scaled properly and ready for intelligent review by the legislature.

This system is the only one which can bring about appropriation for the public needs which shall be both broad and well balanced, sufficient yet economical.

Every man who pays taxes, and every man, woman, and child who is interested in the many agencies for public and individual benefit which the state maintains, is vitally, personally interested in the passage of Gov. Lowden's bill.

LEGISLATIVE FLUIDITY.

American legislation is a highly emotional process. Unless it touches substantial interests of money or of labor it registers nearly every light wind in American opinion. A substantial change has to be fought for with determination over a period of years, but superficial custodial laws are made with a rapidity that suggests an instability of American customs, thought, ideas, and habits.

The sensitiveness of a legislature to highly energized group opinion is probably the cause of this. A small group, quite determined in thought and magnificently vocal, imposes itself upon not only the legislature but upon the populace as the ordained voice of the nation.

Inasmuch as groups are very numerous and sternly determined, law making reflects all this manifold activity of organized minorities, and the passive and placid majority seems to be in a state of fluidity, seeking to change its channels constantly. The impression is that the American democracy has arrived at nothing fundamental in its life, but is constantly experimenting with habit and methods of living.

A very wise speaker of the house of representatives of the Illinois assembly once said, in a moment of weariness and vexation, that 90 per cent of the bills presented to the legislature ought never to have been even printed for consideration.

OUR NATIONAL DANGER.

The object of war is to impose national will upon an enemy or to avoid the imposition of enemy will upon the nation. The German will is to pursue a sea policy which our government will not endure. A war, if one results from these conflicts of policy, will be to determine whose will prevails.

This is the first, if superficial, aspect. Causes may be much deeper and consequences may be much greater. If the United States enters into the condition of war it has entered a dangerous condition. It is necessary to remind some Americans of this. There is a disposition to regard war as a state of mind, which may be entered without many new activities.

If the United States should go to war with Germany, American purposes and the purposes of the entente become similar in one respect if in no other. The defeat of Germany becomes of consequence to the United States, even as it is of consequence to Great Britain, France, and Russia. Not only is there no certainty that these nations will win their own war. There is no certainty that they will not yet be overrun.

There is no certainty that the British fleet will not come to a disaster. The probability is that it will not. There is no certainty in the matter. If Germany, by success—even if it had to be astounding success—in submarine operations, gained command of the seas, would that mean nothing to the United States, the enemy of Germany?

If—to get the matter well within possibility—operations in the next few months persuaded the entente powers that they could accept a peace which now they reject, and if this peace left Germany not only intact, but with new strength, and still at war with the United States, would that mean nothing to the American republic?

The notion that, having the misfortune to go to war, we should not conduct the war upon terms of the greatest advantage to us, but should wait until the terms had become of the least advantage, seems a part of an impulse towards self-destruction.

It would be much wiser to adjust ourselves to Germany's sea policy, to ask that the German embassy reopen its offices, to tell Gerard to remain in Berlin and accept all the consequences of such compromising, than to enter the war without the determination of fighting it to the best of our ability and strength in the most favorable circumstances.

It seems almost incredible folly that we should take a chance of fighting alone when we can fight in company. A declaration of war will commit us to consequences. If Germany comes to terms with her enemies and is freed of them, is hand loose and outside the ring now around her, and if she looks across at the United States, a nation which has hurt her and which is at war with her, the situation will have elements of unpleasantness which ought to be apparent even now.

The United States then would have to do alone what Great Britain, France, Russia, etc., etc., have not been able to do. If that were to be our policy, why undertake the enterprise at all? We could better afford to agree with Holland and Switzerland and declare that our neutrality is invincible and that nothing can modify it.

If Germany and Japan found a common cause after this war, the United States, having given both reasons for disliking it and being at war with one, would be in a precarious state.

Japan and Germany would not have to be allies in such an undertaking. They would need only to act simultaneously, and the greatest humiliation the American republic ever suffered would be the consequence.

Editorial of the Day

UNIVERSAL MILITARY SERVICE.

[From the Illinois Staats-Zeitung.]

When examining our military bill more fully we find that on paper even we are quite far from UNIVERSAL military service as yet. For the six months' training agreed upon young men of the age between 19 and 26 years have been chosen. To this measure we cannot object. But now let us consider the provisions concerning those exempt from military service. There we not only find an excessively great number of exceptions, but the law itself also seems to have "loopholes." All young men, upon whom father, mother, sister, wife, or children are dependent for support, shall be exempt from military service. Further, men who are physically unable to carry arms are also exempt; this is but natural. The provision that members of religious sects, the doctrines of which oppose war, should be employed behind the front only, is also acceptable. But that every able young man, upon whom some family is dependent for support, should be exempt from military service, not only appears as a big hole in the law, through which shirkers are able to escape their duties, but this provision even is apt to make universal compulsory service a farce. Let us look about among families—will we not find in nearly every case reasons which would exempt a young man from military service? We are willing to believe in the patriotism of our young men, but will this patriotism not be suppressed in quite a number of cases by the force of circumstances, by the necessity to preserve the breadwinner for the family? And right here the government should step in. Our country is rich enough to support families the supporters of which have been summoned for military service; but our country is not protected sufficiently against exterior enemies as to be able to forego the services of a great number of able men. To the contrary—though we have no intention to point to a "mene tekel"—our political experience shows us, unfortunately too plainly and too obviously, that our country will have to defend her right by means of arms sooner or later, with regard to her economical development and to the extension of her commerce. And this conviction, known to every man who is politically ripe, admonishes us to establish universal, compulsory service as quickly as possible. Nobody knows how much time we will have to prepare for the defense of our homes. Foreign nations are becoming obtrusive already, because we wish to be the masters in our own homes. And we believe that no other word should find a better place in the hearts and minds of all good citizens than "AMERICA FOR THE AMERICANS" next to "AMERICA FIRST."

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

[Copyright: 1917: By the Brentwood Co.]

LONDON society has sustained a great loss through the death of Lady Reay, whose hospitable house in Great Stanhope street has been for close upon forty years the rendezvous of all that was most clever and interesting in the British metropolis and whose salons enjoyed international celebrity. In fact, few foreigners of distinction ever visited London without calling upon Lady Reay, who would invariably invite to a luncheon or to a dinner in their honor precisely the very people that they were most anxious to meet.

It was not that she was of any ancient lineage. In fact, she was the daughter of an English merchant of the name of Hasler who had acquired a fortune in the Russian trade. She inherited his wealth, and another fortune from her first husband, Capt. Alexander Mitchell, M. P., of the Grenadier guards. She owed her influence and her power in the London great world almost wholly to her tact, to her remarkably sound judgment, to her exceptional knowledge of men, women, and conditions both at home and abroad.

It was in her salons that Mrs. Asquith as Margot Tennant made her debut, and it was to her that Lord Aberdeen brought his bride on the return from his honeymoon. Lady Reay had the innate talent for drawing out the best of every one who approached her, and it was that which caused them to appreciate her so highly—the more so as she had the reputation of not suffering fools gladly.

She certainly brought out all that was best in her second husband, Lord Reay, who is now lying very seriously ill himself at his home in Great Stanhope street, the result of an accident, and who in his seventy-eighth year has been so much affected by the loss of his wife that his recovery is considered doubtful.

Lord Reay, who since the beginning of the present war has sent more than 1,000 of his clansmen, the Mackays, of whom he is the chieftain, to fight for their king, was a Dutchman when he married Lady Reay, or, as she was then, Mrs. Mitchell. He had been active until then as secretary of legation in the diplomatic service of the Netherlands, under the name of Baron Donald Mackay, and was also a chamberlain of the late Queen Sophia of Holland. His father, who was president of the privy council of the Netherlands, inherited the Scottish barony of Reay and the baronetcy of Mackay from a cousin in 1875, and less than two years afterwards died without ever having visited Scotland or taken possession of the entailed estates there. Mrs. Mitchell, however, on marrying his son shortly after the latter's succession to his father's honors, insisted upon his securing naturalization as a British subject in order to enjoy to the full his prerogatives of his Scottish peerage, of his chieftainship of the great clan of Mackay, as well as the full benefit, material and political, of the ownership of the large entailed estates in Scotland.

In the early days of their marriage the Reays had all sorts of odd experiences when traveling on the continent. He was so widely known everywhere as Baron Mackay that his acquaintances, and, above all, hotelkeepers, ignorant of the fact that he had become a Scottish peer, could not understand why he was traveling about on the continent with a Lady Reay. Indeed, at St. Moritz, in Switzerland, the boniface of the principal hotel, prompted by the English chaplain of the place, respectfully urged "Baron Mackay" to at least permit the English lady of title with whom he was traveling to pass as Baroness Mackay instead of as Lady Reay in order to satisfy the demands of propriety.

◆

Lady Reay made her husband acquainted with the Gladstones. Indeed, Lord Reay became a great favorite of the Grand Old Man, and the latter, forming a very high opinion of Lord Reay's intellectual attainments, Dutch levelheadedness, and extensive learning, made it his business to push him in every way. He caused an English barony to be added to his Scottish one so as to give him a seat in the house of lords, appointed him to the governorship of Bombay, where he did exceedingly well; made him under secretary of state for India in his last administration, and secured for him, in spite of his foreign birth, a seat in the privy council. Lord Reay was also for a number of years chairman of the London school board, president of the Royal Asiatic society and of the British academy, and was head of all sorts of useful scientific and philanthropic institutions.

Lord Reay has always been regarded as preeminently a safe man and is universally respected as such, and while possessed of the most courtly manners and pleasant looking, did not appear to his advantage in the kilt and Highland dress which Lady Reay always insisted upon his wearing when staying at their various country seats north of the Tweed. In fact, to me he never looked so much of a Hollander as when rigged up as a Highlander.

Lord Reay has no children, and accordingly his Scottish peerage and his baronetcy, as well as the entailed estates, will go at his death to his very remote cousin, Baron Eric Mackay, who makes his home at The Hague with his wife, the former Maria Van Dedem, and whose father, the late Baron Aeneas Mackay, who died a few years ago, held on several occasions the office of premier, of minister of foreign affairs, and of president of the council of state of the Netherlands. Lord Reay's English barony will become extinct with his death.

Among Lord Reay's ancestors were Otto Mackay, who fell at the battle of Flodden Field, and Gilchrist Mackay, who flourished in the reign of Robert III. The original Mackays are asserted by philologists to have been the Aedui of Julius Cæsar, who helped him in his war with the Teutons, so that the Mackays in fighting today in France against the Germans are merely renewing a quarrel near 2,000 years old.

The first Lord Reay was one of the most devoted adherents of Charles I., who, not content with creating him a baronet and a peer of the realm as Baron Reay, further advanced him to the dignity of Earl of Strahnaver. But the latter dignity was never perfected, Scotland's parliament refusing to ratify the creation. Lord Reay, finding himself excluded from the amnesty in the treaty between the Covenanters and King Charles, withdrew to the continent.

From that time forth the Scotch Mackays were heard of in all parts of Europe, as soldiers of fortune in the service of the king of Denmark, of King Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden, of the Russian czars, of the kings of Poland, of the kings of France and of Spain, and of the Prince of Orange in the Netherlands, where the family may be said to have made its headquarters, never neglecting, however, to maintain the connection with Scotland, each generation furnishing officers to the army and to the navy of the British crown.

One of them, George Mackay, son of the third Lord Reay, was owner of Skibo castle as far back as in the early part of the eighteenth century. In fact, Skibo castle remained in the possession of the Mackays for several generations. Today it is the Scottish home of Andrew Carnegie.

FOOD AND ENERGY

WE eat food because we are hungry, because we like its taste, because of an instinct which guides us to select what is good for us and to reject what is harmful, and because of customs and habits. We may never have heard of calories, but somewhere in us there is a machinery which makes us crave heat making foods in cold weather and protein foods when we have labored hard. Under special circumstances we crave salt and the special craving at times for water we have set apart from hunger and call thirst.

The cravings and instincts of animals and uncivilized men the civilized man has studied until he not only knows them practically better than any wild animal or savage man, but he knows the science which underlies them.

The savage knows that there are certain foods which he must eat in cold weather. The scientist first called these heat making foods. Then he discovered that these foods are used by the body as fuels through processes quite similar to burning. Next it was discovered that when the fuel foods are burned in the body they make just the same amount of heat they make when burned outside the body.

Next it became necessary to have a standard for measuring the amounts of heat—something similar to yardsticks, pint measures, and pound weights. The standard hit upon is called a calorie. A calorie is the amount of heat necessary to raise the temperature of one pound of water 4 degrees Fahrenheit.

The next discovery was that the same quality which made heat could make energy. That was not a remarkable discovery since there were so many related facts that were common knowledge. For instance, fuel under a boiler is burned to make heat, which in turn is used to make steam, and this is used to produce work.

Since heat values and energy values were the same and interchangeable, it was concluded that the measure known as the calorie would answer for both fuel foods and energy foods. The savage sensed that when he had worked hard, fought hard, or hunted hard he needed meat; that his growing young needed milk and eggs; that the meat eaters conquered the vegetable eaters and the fruit eaters.

The scientist discovered that work wore the tissues of the body; that for the repair of waste proteins and salts were required; that the proteins from meat, milk, and eggs were better repairers than the proteins from vegetables.

There is no scientific measure of protein that corresponds to the calorie as a measure of heat and energy. The best that can be said is that a pound of a given food contains a certain number of ounces or grains of protein, and also that the human body under certain conditions requires a certain number of ounces of protein to repair wear and tear.

Next came the explanation of the advantage of a meat over a vegetable diet as a repairer of wear. Proteins are not simple substances. They, in turn, can be split up into amino acids. The amino acids in protein from meat are better suited to repair the wear in the body of the human animal than are those in the protein from vegetables.

At the head of the list are the proteins of milk and eggs, then come those from meats. The amino acids in gelatin are so different from those of meat that we know they cannot repair waste by themselves. We call them incomplete proteins. Among the vegetable proteins some are more nearly what the human body requires than are others.

It is no whim of taste that men prefer wheat bread. It is not because wheat came from Palestine. Wheat protein is nearest perfect of all the vegetable proteins. The amino acids of corn protein are not exactly right for the human animal. Wild animals know that certain mineral foods are necessary. They travel long distances to reach "licks." On the one hand where there is enough lime the animals are strong and heavy. On the other they avoid the bad lands where there is an excess of certain minerals.

The scientists explain all of this by saying that certain amounts of certain salts are necessary for the maintenance of bodily well being. Furthermore, they say that when the amount taken in is beyond the needs of the body the excess is either passed through the body without being absorbed or is absorbed and in greatest part immediately thrown off.

And, finally, the knowledge that freshness in certain foods is necessary at times is instinctive. The hibernating animal escaping in the spring goes for young green twigs, the young of all animal kind are fed on milk fresh from a mother.

The scientist tells us that there are substances called vitamines; that these are necessary for continued good health; that they are delicate and that much disturbance of a food is liable to get rid of its vitamines; that this vitamine quality, whatever it is, is a delicate quality.

To boil milk destroys this quality, to polish rice removes it. To get it in sufficient quantity possibly we need to eat some fruit and some fresh vegetables occasionally. That food may be digestible it is desirable that it be palatable. Its odor and its taste must appeal to the proper brain centers. Whether the taste be natural or acquired, it must be catered to.

That the processes of digestion and absorption may proceed normally it is necessary that the foods eaten should have proper bulk and consistency. Let us illustrate in this way: The starch in dough can be cooked in a few minutes; that in oatmeal is so mixed with cellulose or fiber that hours of cooking are required that the heat may get at the starch granules and cook them.

The digestive juices cannot get at food elements until the food has been properly broken up, and later absorption cannot take place until the digested food is a proper solution or suspension.

For proper action of the intestines sufficient bulk and sufficient moisture are necessary. The great sources of heat and energy are fats and starches. Sugars are closely akin to starches. The great sources of protein are milk, meat, eggs, and grain. The great sources of salts are fruits, vegetables, and table salt. The great sources of vitamines are vegetables, fruits, and milk. The great sources of bulky constituents are vegetables, fruits, and the outer parts of grain.

The secretions of the body can change many of the elements of foods. Starches are changed into sugar. They can be stored in the body as fat or as sugars or they can be burned into carbonic acid with the formation of heat or energy or both. Fats can be stored in the body as fats or as sugars or they can be burned into carbonic acid with the formation of heat and energy.

Protein can be built up as body tissue or it can be converted into fat or sugars and stored. It can be burned into urea and allied substances and excreted by the body, principally by the kidneys, or it can be burned into carbonic acid and excreted principally by the lungs. While protein can be converted into fat or sugars, neither fats nor sugars can be converted into protein, such as muscle or tissue cells.

So far instinct has blazed the paths which science has later followed. Some of the paths were made plain by instinct. They were broad highways easily seen and followed. Some of them were no more than Indian trails—a leaf turned here, a track there—from these science learned but little. From this point on science gets little help from instinct.

Oxygen	97.5 pounds
Carbon	27 pounds
Hydrogen	15 pounds
Nitrogen	4.5 pounds
Calcium	3 pounds
Phosphorus	1.5 pounds
Potassium	.52 or over 8 ounces
Sulphur	.375 or over 6 ounces
Sodium	.225 or 3.6 ounces
Chlorine	.225 or 3.6 ounces
Magnesium	.070 or about 1 ounce
Iron	.006 or about 40 grams

And faint traces of a few other chemicals.

To supply the daily waste from wear and the energy and heat required the food must contain varying quantities of the above ingredients. Most of the oxygen needed is taken in with the air, but all the other elements are taken as food. The measure of the amount of food required is generally expressed in calories in speaking of the heat and energy requirements, and in grains or ounces of protein in speaking of the repair requirements. Generally the amount of minerals required is left to chance or instinct.

In bed 24 hours	1,600 to 1,800
At rest but sitting most of the day	2,000 to 2,300
Work chiefly done sitting	2,200 to 2,800
Work chiefly done standing or walking	2,700 to 3,000
Work developing muscular strength	3,000 to 3,500
Work requiring severe effort	4,000 to 6,000

The number of calories per pound of weight per hour according to different kinds of activity is as follows:

Sleeping	½
Sitting quietly	3-5
Standing	¾
Light exercise	1
Moderate exercise	1¼ to 1½
Active exercise	1¾ to 2
Severe exercise	3 or more

EXERCISE OUTDOORS.

H. L. M. writes: "I am a boy 19 years old, 5 feet 3 inches tall and weigh 101 pounds. My bowels are not normal but I feel well. Would you please advise if there is anything wrong with me? I would like to weigh heavier. What weight should I carry?"

REPLY.

You should weigh about 123 pounds. You are, therefore, about twenty-two pounds under weight. Get plenty of exercise in the open air. Acquire proper habits and then let the results take care of themselves. The less a boy of good habits thinks about his health the better. If you wish to take on weight, in addition to your regular diet, eat a bowl of sweetened rice and milk twice a day.

KEEP CLEAN.

L. E. L. writes: "I am 43 years old and have been bothered for several years with itching piles. Is there any permanent cure for this without an operation?"

REPLY.

The itching is in the vicinity of the piles and not in the piles themselves. Thorough attention to local cleanliness generally cures this symptom. However, irritation in the bowels can cause itching of the skin near the bowel. This as a cause of itching piles is of secondary importance. By eating plenty of fruit and vegetables, drinking water in great abundance, eating bran as bread and as a cereal, you should cure your constipation. Thus you will greatly benefit piles and perhaps cure them.

THE NORTH SHORE CHANNEL.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Is there a contract for the removal of the north shore channel embankments in Evanston? This work is completed as far as Noyes street, but I would like to know when work will begin on the remainder of the embankments. FRED NELSON.

There is an agreement dated March 31, 1907, between the sanitary district and the National Brick company providing for the removal of the spoil banks along the north shore channel between the Chicago and Northwestern Railway company's crossing in Evanston and a point 440 feet north of Pratt avenue. Operations under this agreement were begun July 13, 1910, and a total of 401,100 cubic yards of spoil were removed up to Dec. 14, 1916, principally from the south end of the work. A supplementary agreement dated Nov. 16, 1916, between the same parties provides that the National Brick company shall commence on April 1, 1917, to remove the spoil nearest to the Chicago and Northwestern railway crossing in Evanston and work south, removing all of the spoil by Jan. 1, 1924. Chicago, Feb. 15.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Your editorial, "Treasonable Talk," is quite in line with your recent attitude of—don't let the other fellow say anything; if he dares to make utterance, either don't report it at all or censor it to such an extent as to array the populace against him.

The great menace and danger to this country at this time are not such men as Rodriguez or Kennedy, but the liars and distortionists that go to make up the bulk of the American press.

FAILURE OF GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP.

Toronto, Ont., Feb. 14.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—My attention has just been drawn to a letter, contributed by a correspondent in Washington, Ia., and printed in your columns, in which objection is taken to some favorable editorial comments which you were good enough to make regarding my recently published book on the government owned telephone system in Manitoba.

He says that "I seem to have picked out the period when the Manitoba government telephone system had a deficit, and, without giving the causes, make out a strong case for the Bell Telephone company against government ownership." Had he read the book he would have found that no period was "picked out"; but, on the contrary, that the history of the government telephone enterprise was given from its beginning and the causes of what I consider to be its failure fully described, documentary evidence being given for every statement of fact.

I also printed an analysis of the system's financial reports showing that the real financial result of the system has been recurring annual losses; and it cannot be dismissed with haphazard and unscientific statements.

Your correspondent also says "the present value of the property is over $1,000,000 greater than the cost." I have quoted the results of an official inquiry made by the Manitoba government which show that at the end of 1914 the construction cost of the telephone plant—that is, the value of the plant at that time—was less than the amount at which it was carried on the books of the telephone department by $1,138,568. The accountant who made this valuation recommended that this sum of $1,138,568 should be gradually wiped off by setting aside an annual sum for the purpose. This has not been done, and until it is done it is idle to talk of any "profits."

Your correspondent also states that the telephone rates have not been increased under government ownership. Business telephone rates in Winnipeg before the acquisition of the system by the government were $50; they are now $60. The government induced the people of Manitoba to acquiesce in the purchase of the system on the plea that the telephone rates would be "cut in two." Thus, even if the rates had not been increased, the government would have failed, as it has failed, to redeem the promise on the ground of which the enterprise was undertaken.

It is true that the number of telephones in Manitoba has been increased; the causes of the increase, which have been political rather than economic, are fully discussed in my book. Your correspondent is, however, quite at sea when he says "they have now ninety-seven telephones per each 100 of the population in the province." As a matter of fact, Manitoba has about ninety-seven telephones for each 1,000 of population, a number much less than that in other analogous areas where telephone service is operated on commercial principles. JAMES MAVOR.

A REAL AMERICAN BOY.

Barrington, Ill., Feb. 15.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I am an American boy, 13 years old, and am filled with patriotism. I thought that I might suggest an idea for a cartoon. The idea is this: The kaiser is standing near a tree in which hangs a hornets' nest and on another limb is a nest with the dove of peace in it. The kaiser has a submarine in his hand and is striking at the hornet's nest, which is meant as the United States. The hornets are just beginning to buzz. Title: "He Struck the Wrong Nest."

This is my own idea and I hope to see it printed. My father takes THE TRIBUNE and I read it every night after my chores are done. LESLIE KIRSCHNER.

P. S.—Although I have a German name I am an American through and through.

MIND READER WANTED.

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 14.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—As a Kansas City reader of THE TRIBUNE, may I ask some light as to what President Wilson meant when he maintained that the allied blockade of Germany was "illegal, indefensible, and ineffective?" If this be true, should not the allied ambassadors also be invited to homeward trek?

The writer hereof has a serious complaint to make against the allies—i. e., that they have over a long period of time stolen, pried into, and destroyed much of his mail between Germany and the United States. However, I am perfectly willing to waive my well established rights (as our government seems already to have done), hoping thereby to help prevent the lambs being led to slaughter. R. C. ADAMS.

HARD TO GET AWAKE.

Brookline, Mass., Feb. 12.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The Boston Transcript of Feb. 6 quotes from you upwards of half a column. The last three paragraphs state: "American soldiers must go to France. . . . Every interest in the United States must be subordinated to the purposes of victory."

Yours is the first paper that I have seen that has suggested any depth of thought on the possibilities of the future. The British spent a long time waking up after August, 1914. I fear our process of awakening is going to be even more lengthy. The longer we take waking up the greater amount of wastage in lives and money. We are not yet at war, but I think the chances are so strong that we shall be at war that I desire to urge you to give in your paper reiteratingly some vision of what this war, if it does come, must mean to us. I am one of those who believe in the advisability of the war and that whether or no it comes there should be widespread education as to what it would be or is to be. SINCLAIR K

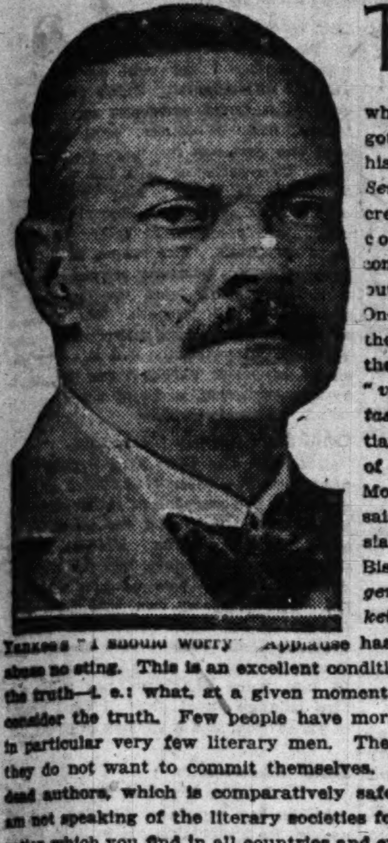
Of an entirely d

AN AMERICAN CRITIC

by Edward Golbeck



THERE is one advantage in growing old which Cicero forgot to mention in his treatise De Senectute, the increase of moral courage that comes to you without your bidding. One understands the "ataraxia" of the Stoic, the "vanitatum vanitas" of the Christian, the Nirvana of the Indian, Montaigne's "Que sais-je?", the Russian's "Nichevo," Bismarck's "allgemeine Wurstigkeit," and the Yankees "I should worry." Applause has no charm and abuse no sting. This is an excellent condition for speaking the truth—i. e.: what, at a given moment of our life, we consider the truth. Few people have moral courage, and in particular very few literary men. They are vain and they do not want to commit themselves. So they praise dead authors, which is comparatively safe. Of course, I am not speaking of the literary societies for mutual admiration which you find in all countries and even in all larger cities. They are business enterprises and I am dealing with literature and its honest but often overcautious apostles who do not dare to say: "Ecce homo! A number one!"

The aim of this article is to introduce to those who do not know him Mr. Paul Elmer More, the author of the "Shelburne Essays," as a number one. I would like to write about him according to his own theories, and that I cannot do. For I can only say what I think and feel in the manner of "irresponsible impressionism" which More does not regard complacently. Like Charles Lamb, I "never judge systemwise of things, but fastened upon particulars." And I would like to write about him in his own style, but that is impossible to a man who learned the English language late in life. More has characterized his own diction when he said: "The attraction of Cowper's style is in the perfect balance of the members, an art which has become almost lost since the eighteenth century."

* *

ABOUT two years ago I bought one volume of the "Shelburne Essays." I did not know the name of the author at that time, but I never could resist the title "Essays." While turning over the pages my eye lit by mere chance on this sentence: "He (Hawthorne) told of the inevitable loneliness that follows man from the cradle to the grave; he spoke of the loneliness that lends the depth of yearning to a mother's eyes as she bends over her new born child, for the soul of the infant has been rent from her own and she can never again be united to what she cherished." Then I said to myself in my native language: "Der Mann ist tief." He has a rare power of psychological observation and sees things which we average beings do not perceive. And as this is so, I must call him a poet, which to my mind is the highest title on earth, bestowed only by a special decree of the Lord. I was right. (Naturally I was right, for, although an idiot in many branches of human activity, I am endowed with a sixth sense, the sense of the exquisite.)

Yes, Mr. More—like Sainte-Beuve—is just enough of a poet to be an excellent critic. Let me prove it by some quotations. There is his wonderful definition of faith: "Faith is the deliberate turning of the eye from darkness to light," worthy of Cardinal Newman. What a vivid illustration is contained in the following sentences about Browning: "At intervals the staccato of his lines, like the drilling of a woodpecker, is interrupted by a burst of pure and liquid music, as if that vigorous and exploring bird were suddenly gifted with the melodious throat of the lark." No wonder he knows what poetry is and can do. "And that, I suppose, is the real function of descriptive poetry—not to present a detailed scene to the eye, but in its mysterious manner to sink our sense of individual life in this larger sympathy with the world." About Thoreau he says, "Always it is morning with him," and I would barter many pages of realistic portraiture for one sentence like this which is thrown in occasionally without any pretentious underlining.

* *

HIS gift of summing up characters or at least the "faculté maitresse" of certain men is extraordinary. About Lafcadio Hearn: "He employs the power of suggestion through perfect restraint." Maybe More thought of himself while writing down this appreciation. He is wearing the amulet of reticence himself and possesses "that quality of restrained dignity, I had almost said of self-respect, which we find it so difficult to impress on our broken modern style." Here is a resurrection of Charles Lamb: "He alone found the secret of sacrificing his heart to stern and unrelenting duty and of dwelling the while resolutely on the surface of life, a patron of puns and a devotee of the genial vices." About Hawthorne: "The awful voice of the old faith still reverberates in his stories of New England life and gives them their depth of consciousness; the dissolution of the commands of a sectarian conscience into the forms of a subtle symbolism lifts them from provincial importance merely to the sphere of universal art."

He explains Cowper's religious madness by the absence of "an insulating pad of worldly indifference between his faith and his nerves." Whitman and Swinburne he characterizes as "poets of vast and confused motion." His judgment about Browning shows a penetration which cannot be hoodwinked by any poetical legerdemain: "The secret of his more esoteric fame is just this, that he dresses a worldly and easy philosophy in the forms of spiritual faith and so deceives the troubled seekers after the higher life." Whitman seems to him "rather a preacher of poetry than a poet." He gives the following subtle explanation of Rousseau's doctrine that man was originally good and only deteriorated by society: "He, Rousseau, was, he felt, by his instincts good, yet he was painfully aware of his actual lapses into turpitude and shame; he could only shift the responsibility of this corruption upon outside influences."

* *

HIS characterizations of entire periods are no less acute than these psychological apercus. I at least cannot imagine anything more adequate than the following delineation of Rabelais and his milieu. "In Rabelais I seem to see the embryonic humor of a world coming to the birth and not yet fully formed. Through the crust of the old medieval ideals the new humanism was struggling to emerge, and in its first lusty liberty mankind, with the clog of the old civilization still hanging upon it, was like those monsters that nature threw off when she was preparing her hand for a higher creation. There is something misshaped, as of Milton's beast wallowing unwieldy, in the creatures of Rabelais' brain; yet withal one perceives the pride of the design that is foreshadowed and will some day come to its own." Of an entirely different kind, but just as pertinent, is his comparison between Jane Austen and Mrs. Gaskell. "What impresses one in Miss Austen's books is a feeling of stability; governments may fall in London, but any change in the manners and occupations of this provincial folk is inconceivable. In 'Cranford' just the cotnrary is true. Here the grace is something that has survived into an alien age, and is about to vanish away; there is a tremulous fragility in its beauty."

And in a wonderful essay about Walter Pater, which must have aroused the wrath of many a disciple of that idol of the select few: "The simple fact is that in 'Marius we have no real conversion from Epicureanism to religion, no Christianity at all as it would have been recognized by St. Paul or St. Augustine, but only another manifestation of that æstheticism which Pater sucked from the romantic school of his century and disguised in the phraseology of ancient faith. To write thus was to betray Christianity with a kiss." It is true, and in the last sentence trenchantly true.

MR. MORE has that moral courage which I mentioned above. Few people would dare to say about Christian Science what he says in his essay about Emerson: "There is a mysterious faith abroad in the land, which, however we grudge to say it, is the most serious manifestation of religion discoverable in these days. We call it Christian Science, or faith healing, or what not—the gospel of a certain Mrs. Baker Eddy; but in reality it does not owe its strength to the teaching of an ignorant woman in New Hampshire. It is a diluted and stale product of Emersonianism, and the parentage, I think, is not difficult to discover." Then he shows this filiation and continues: "Such a creed, when professed by one who spoke with the noble accent and from the deep insight of an Emerson, was a radiant possession for seeking humanity forever; it is folly and inner deception when repeated parrotlike by men and women with no mental training and, visibly to all the world, with no warrant of spiritual experience."

This is refreshingly strong language. Mr. More is never a victim of phrases, may they be ever so high sounding. One of these phrases is the "brotherly union among men." Mr. More mentions this battle cry of Tolstoy and adds dryly: "Nor, until some ulterior goal is proclaimed, can I see that the humanitarianism of Tolstoy or any other doctrinaire saves us from this vicious circle of attempting to unite men for the mere sake of union." He is that uncommon type of man who, although a scholar, has preserved his common sense intact. He, if any one I know of, comes up to Matthew Arnold's definition of the man of culture who "knows the best which has been thought and said in the world and through this knowledge turns a stream of fresh and free thought upon our stock notions and habits," but he is not a "highbrow." He has written most beautiful essays about men with simple souls, songbirds like Whittier and Longfellow, whom sophisticated epigones claim to despise, and he has said that "philosophy expresses the pure love of truth only so long as it remains untechnical," a debatable assertion of praiseworthy courage.

* *

A YOUNG friend of mine to whom I recommended More found him too "cloistral." Youth wants enthusiasm. But an enthusiast is no critic. An enthusiast would not be able to say what More says about Keats: "He was never quite able to distinguish between the large liberties of the strong and the jaunty flippancy of the underbred; his passion for beauty could never entirely save him from mawkish prettiness, and his idea of love was too often a mere sickly sweetness."

It is a dogma now to consider Sainte-Beuve the model of critics, and his output is certainly admirable in quantity and quality, but I must frankly confess that I do not see why, waiving his priority in time, he should be called greater than More. Lemaitre is very elegant ("une âme élégante" he liked to say), France a charming causeur, Faguet a marvelous condensator of theories, Harden the best connaisseur of dramatic literature, Kerr a gifted poseur with genuine lyrical outbursts, but for "judgmen," insight into poetical intentions, feeling for beauty, sense of shades and proportions, More is second to none of them. His range is very wide, he disserts about Indian, Greek, and Latin literature; he quotes German, French, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, and, to put it plainly, he always knows what he is talking about. His buildings are more than attractive façades. He is solid, serious, sincere. He has a theory of his own while all other modern critics are more or less undulating. But to criticize this theory of "dualism" is beyond my range. I shall have done enough when I have said that on the day when his books will be "best sellers" we can boast that there is an American culture.

THE CHICAGO RIVER

By Charlton Lawrence Edholm.

The following poem, clipped by Librarian Henry Legler from the columns of a newspaper, is tacked up in the corner devoted to literature on Chicago at the public library:

They have bound me with bridges,
With tunnels burrowed under me!
Incessant, unresting,
All day and all night
Traffic roars over me,
And my uplook to the blessed sky
Is barred with girders, cables, stacks.
My banks, with docks close hedged.
Inexorably,
Hem me in.
Vacantly,
Through smoke and floating smudge,
The sun looks down upon me
Like the bleared eye of an old, old man.
No outcast of the gutters
Slinks by more soiled than I,
Polluted within and without!

But on my shackled breast I bear
Corn and iron, lumber and coal.
The little children of India eat of my wheat;
My lumber shelters the stricken of Messina;
Ten million wheels are set awhirl with my coal;
The iron that burdens me forms a ready tool,
Fit for the hand of man.

What singer can sing of me one low keyed song?
The Hudson, the Rhine, the Danube, the Nile,
All these, all these have their poets,
As beautiful women their lovers.
Fringed with vineyards and stately gardens,
Castles and temples are their jewels,
And song is theirs by right!

But I?
Soiled am I and brackish
As sweat on the brow of a workman!
But the broad ships that weight my breast
Are like iron medals with these words wrought:
"FOR SERVICE."
Therein alone is my glory:
I serve; I serve.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

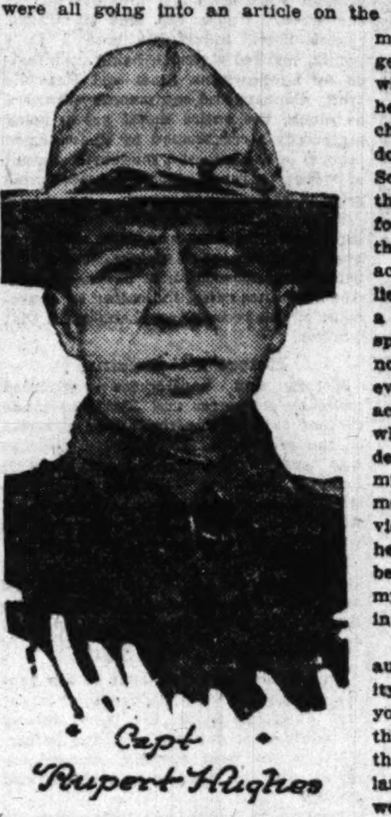
RUPERT HUGHES was in town last week watching his stepchild, "The Lioness," get acquainted with the big city. Gertrude Atherton, from whose "Perch of the Devil" he made the play, promised to come, too, but she didn't. For a few moments after we had said "how dy' do" Mr. Hughes talked about "The Lioness," about his other plays, and about how the movies treat a real plot (they were rare invectives which I would fain repeat if he hadn't said they were all going into an article on the movies which he is writing for a magazine). Then I asked him how he gets time to do novels and stories when he's always writing plays and helping to produce them, and he nonchalantly said, "O, I don't know. I don't write regularly any of the time. Sometimes I'll not write for six days, then I'll start and write like a fiend for a week. I never can write anything until I am certain what my characters are going to say and do. I believe that each character should have a personality; should think, talk, walk, speak like himself; and since there are no two people in the world alike, not even twins, so there are no two characters who will talk exactly alike, whose little everyday actions can be describable in the same way. I suppose my experience with plays has taught me that my characters must be individuals. I actually see them walk, hear them talk. Often they get the better of me and actually walk out of my story. But they usually come back in some other story.



"Some of the most highly praised authors never get any real individuality into their characters' speech. If you took away the quotation marks, there would be no difference between the conversation and the author's own language of description. If you put words of less than four syllables into the mouth of a college professor, for instance, the critics shake their heads and say, 'Poor author, isn't it a shame he was denied the benefits of a college education.' Most college professors in books talk like colored barbers. In real life they talk college youth slang. That's one of my hobbies, making my characters talk their own language.

"My other literary hobby is writing strictly contemporaneous stuff. My stories might be actual history dressed up in fiction. The houses that they live in, the clothes that they wear, the food that they eat, the games that they play are all historically, contemporaneously true."

He said many other things, and told me the strange history of "What Will People Say?" which I shall retell to you some day. He's very friendly and chatty and almost exactly the way you'd expect a successful novelist-playwright to be.

This afternoon Wilfrid Wilson Gibson will lead the way to Parnassus at the Little theater. Mr. Gibson was introduced to Chicago—literally—by Maurice Browne. On the first bill which the Little theater presented was his "Womenkind." In Mr. Browne's lectures, which were then a feature of the theater's activities, there was an afternoon devoted to those stark sketches which make up that little volume called "Daily Bread." Since then Mr. Gibson has come into the popularity which America consistently bestows upon an English poet when he fills his manuscript case and starts at New York to lecture his way to San Francisco. "Livelihood" (Macmillan) is the latest volume of his poems. "Battle and Other Poems," which includes "Stonefolds," which had been out of print for some years, was the volume of last year's imprint.

Frances Wilson Huard, author of "My Home in the Field of Honour" (Doran), was a sojourner in our city for the Allied bazaar. Her book is a compilation of reminiscences of the first months of the war, when, she says, her home was sacked and defiled by the invading Germans and eventually turned into a hospital for the care of the wounded. The book is illustrated by her husband, Baron Huard, who is official etcher of the French government. Madame Huard is a daughter of Francis Wilson, the actor. You may have met her some time while she was here. She was lecturing on her personal experiences during the war times.

A book which looks very fascinating is George Frederick Kunz's encyclopaedic volume on "Rings" (Lippincott). It is filled with sketches of rings of fame and fashion of all ages from several millenniums before Christ to the present day, and with descriptive text which undoubtedly is as interesting as the sketches when you take time to purchase its literary and informative wares instead of merely to window shop.

Charles G. D. Roberts, author of "The Secret Trails" (Macmillan) and other popular animal tales, has been promoted in his majesty's service from captain to major. The last word I heard of him was that he is looking years younger than before he went to war, that he has acquired a fine flowing military mustache and that he was actually finding time to write on a new series of stories about a police dog in Canada which would have the general title of "Wooly Billy." I haven't met Wooly Bill yet, though.

Ruth Sawyer, author of "This Way to Christmas" (Harpers) told stories before she wrote them. Once she had a club of eighty boys in a settlement to whom she told stories as a last resort to keep them out of pool halls. Her story telling class was always attended by every one of the eighty, much to her surprise. "For some time I was at a loss to discover the reason," she says, "until the manual training teacher explained. It seemed that the bully of the club had a soft streak for stories, and having settled his approval of the story telling hours he forthwith undertook to sponsor them. Taking his stand every club evening outside the popular poolroom he swore he'd 'lick every bloomin' kid who didn't show up at the clubroom.'"

Florence Howe Hall, author of "The Story of the Battle Hymn of the Republic" (Harpers), says that her mother's famous poem has recently been distributed in large quantities among the British soldiers. An American printer was commissioned by an English woman to print the battle leaflets, which have this introduction: "This magnificent 'Battle Hymn of the Republic' was written in 1861 by a famous American lady, Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, for the army of the northern states of America which were then engaged in a holy war to rid the south of slavery and to preserve the union of the states. It is said to have done more deeds of heroism than any other event of the American civil war. Mrs. Ward Howe was born three days after Queen Victoria and died in 1910 at the age of 91."

Edward J. O'Brien of the Boston Transcript has selected 110 short stories published in 1916 as worthy of honor and the laurel wreath of special distinction he has conferred upon these twenty authors, Gertrude Atherton, Barry Benefield, Frederick Booth, Dana Burnet, Francis Buzzell, Irvin S. Cobb, Theodore Dresier, Armistead C. Gordon, Frederick Stuart Greene, Richard Matthews Hallet, Fannie Hurst, Mary Lerner, Jeannette Marks, Walter J. Mullenburg, Albert Du Verney Pentz, Benjamin Rosenblatt, Elsie Singmaster, Gordon Arthur Smith, Wilbur Daniel Steele, and Alice L. Tildesley. Richard Matthews Hallet's "Making Port" is the best short story of 1916, Mr. O'Brien says.

In a volume of verse by John Reed, author of "The War in Eastern Europe," is this picture of Alan Seeger, whose "Poems" (Scribner's) are the delicate monument to a short life lived to its utmost. John Reed's little book of verse is printed privately.

SEEGER.

A timid footstep—enter then the eager
Keats-Shelley-Swinburne-Medieval-Seeger;
Poe's raven bang above Byronic brow,
In fact, he is, though feigning not to know it,
The popular conception of a Poet.
Dreaming, his eyes are steadily alight
With splendors of a world beyond our sight;
He nothing knows of this material sphere—
Unwilling seems, at times, to linger here;
Beauty is all his breath, his blood, he says—
Beauty is shrine, and Love its priestesses.
Wildly he talks, with solemn bell-like voice,
In words that might have been old Malory's choice—
Proclaiming, in the manner of ascetics,
"For ethics we must substitute æsthetics."

"Tommy" Jonkers is a seaman on the yacht Alvina, which sailed from New York some weeks ago for Liverpool on the way to be delivered to the Russian government. "Tommy" stopped ashore at New York for a day, walked through the Pennsylvania station, saw the picture of an old friend of his in a book shop window, went in to ask about him, and found out some interesting things about himself in his talk with the book clerk. Tommy's friend was William McFee. Three years ago they were on the same ship. McFee put Tommy into "Casuals of the Sea" (Doubleday-Page) without Tommy's knowing it until he came upon his former engineer's picture in a book store window and until the clerk showed him himself in the third section of the novel under the name of Drevis Noordhof. Tommy's real name is Drevis Jonkers, and the clerk recognized him from the author's description. Tommy never expected to find himself in a novel, and in a combination of cockney and Dutch he expressed his delight. He remembered that McFee was always busy writing in his bunk when he was off duty. The book clerk was delighted at his own prowess in recognizing Tommy and told all of his friends about his discovery, and one of them told the Tabloid. William McFee is serving on a British transport in the Mediterranean now.

A week ago yesterday, Feb. 10, was the biggest day that the public library has ever had. There were 5,516 books given out at the main library, which is 403 more than have ever been put into circulation in one day in its history. The books on Abraham Lincoln were so constantly in circulation last week that the lists will be kept, so that those who failed to get the books they wanted when they were on the open shelves may refer to them. The lists tabulate all of the available material, fact and fiction, which the library contains about the great commoner.

SOME PEACE TALK

by Robert Herrick

The following article, in which the French desire for peace is discussed, was approved by the French censor—a possibly significant fact.

PARIS, Jan. 10.—The plain little restaurant was made cheerful by a stray gleam or two of a wintry sunshine. On the clean cloth between my excellent French friend and me were the dishes of an austere but sufficient wartime luncheon. Past the hotel rattled great gray army camions in a long file. Also by the windows passed briskly soldiers and officers in every conceivable variety of uniforms—"uniforms de fantaisie," the remarkable creations that French officers sometimes wear when they are on leave. It was an afternoon of January, 1917.

"Peace talk doesn't seem to interfere with military preparations," I observed. "There is a good deal of movement."

"O, yes!" my friend, who is a distinguished writer, replied. "Everywhere! My son, the elder one, you know, is in charge of a large aviation camp near the lines, very near—they get bombed pretty often—he tells me that the preparations are increasing all the time. It will not be long now before our offensive begins—and it will be terrible!"

He gave me further details, which were interesting, as everything is which comes back from the wonderland of the front through the eyes of actual workers there, not newspaper or tourist observers.

"One gets no hint in the papers of all that—or of anything else. I never knew such empty sheets as your newspapers. They even censure the weather reports. I have to wait for my American newspapers to come over two weeks after to find out what is happening here in Paris. They cable over there what they won't let you people read about your own affairs."

"Imbecile, isn't it?" my lively friend exclaimed.

"Perhaps they are afraid you might talk peace?"

"And what if we should? Think of a people that have a Montaigne, a Voltaire, a Moliere, being treated like so many children who aren't to be trusted to think! . . . But they do think all the same, and they talk among themselves, the real people. Our people are very intelligent."

"Rather! . . . But they don't want Germany's peace."

"Never that! But how are they to tell what kind of peace they do want if they are never to be allowed to print any ideas except those the government wants them to have?"

He expressed himself with considerable irritation. Few incidents of war have so annoyed the French as the medieval manner in which the government has tried to throttle opinion. Something further was on his mind, I could see: he rolled the bread into hard pellets in his nervous fingers. He was an excellent patriot, one of the best, of the purest French stock, from old Picardy. His two sons, one a lad of 19, had been at the front since the beginning. His wife's people and many of his own had been caught in the invaded provinces and not heard from since the fatal end of August, 1914. His country house and little farm, all he possessed of his beloved native soil, was in German possession and, from the vague reports he had been able to get, all was ruined—books, manuscripts, family treasures, furniture, even the buildings. After twenty years of hard work he was poor. Yet never a word of personal complaint have I heard from his lips, even when his younger son was for months at a dangerous advance post and he expected hourly to get news of his death. He and his wife and daughter have kept themselves very busy caring for the refugees from their country, and he has beside some work for the blind and a government "mission." If anybody had a right to speak his mind frankly, surely my friend ought to have it without being suspected of feebleness or lack of patriotism.

"BUT it seems useless," I said, "to talk of peace: the two sides are so far apart—whole worlds apart. No government would dare at this time to propose to its people the only sort of peace that conceivably could be made."

"I am not so sure," he replied, to my surprise. "The situation reminds me of a French fable: There was a big, savage dog, tied up to his kennel, being teased by a small boy. The dog snarled, barked, showed his teeth, and tugged at his chain to get at his tormentor. Suddenly the chain snapped, and then——" he paused with a fine smile on his lips.

"Well, what happened?" I asked.

"Nothing happened! The dog sat back on his haunches and looked surprised, as surprised as the boy."

"And you think that is the way the peoples would take it if a peace were made today the conditions of which, of course, would be intensely disagreeable to everybody concerned?"

He nodded his head vigorously. "Exactly—they would do just nothing at all!"

"If England didn't keep the German colonies and France didn't get back Alsace-Lorraine and a big indemnity?" I particularized skeptically.

"Ecoutez, mon ami!" He looked around carefully over his shoulder, but nobody was in the room. He whispered, putting his hands beside his face to represent the blinkers of a horse. "So many people are like that—they won't let themselves think—not since July, 1914. . . . I can tell you the truth, what I can't say to my intimate friends, because they can't understand. . . . All this talk of territories to be taken for guaranties and indemnities is foolish. . . . That is not the way to make a real peace!"

"No," I said in hearty agreement, "that will just breed another war."

"Why should the allies take Constantinople from the Turks?" he continued, in an excited whisper. "The Turks have proved themselves men in this war; one can no longer talk of them as good-for-nothings. They have their rights, too—one can't talk so easily about taking their territories away from them. . . . The straits should be open for all, yes?"

"Then you don't believe in a peace made in Berlin by the allies?" I asked.

"It would never last, if they could do it."

"In other words, you agree with a dear old friend of mine who said at the beginning of the war—and he was of German descent—'What Europe needs is to get a new mind'?"

"That's just it!" His face expanded with a new light. "And you won't get that new mind if nobody is allowed to discuss the things one has in his heart."

"If the different peoples were allowed to discuss the general principles of the thing—the principles they wanted to see go into effect first, even while the fighting is going on—they've had time enough to think of them, but have never been allowed to say a word in public."

"Just so," he interrupted, "the principle of nationality, the principle of mutual guaranties, the principle of common disarmament, of the freedom of the seas, of no indemnities or reprisals—and all the others. A free uncensored discussion in the press. Then it would be easy to settle the rest when we had got together on the basic principles. With the principles fixed, the rest might be handed over to a board of experts, like an international arbitration board, to settle details under those principles."

"That would raise the question of peace to another, altogether different, plane; it would take it from the material, the physical, the map-making plane to the plane of ideas," I mused.

"Where it ought to be! It isn't, it can never be a material thing, the swopping of territories—peace. It is in the spiritual realm; it belongs to the world of ideas!"

"And do you think that the Boches would let you put it back where it belongs into the realm of ideas?"

He smiled wisely. "Remember my fable of the dog! . . . They would not object; they have had enough of it, the German people."

* *

WE went to my rooms, where we could continue our conversation in privacy. "Would that more people could see it as we do!"

"O, they will, they must! . . . and it wouldn't take long to make a sound enduring peace then, once you could get it away from the map."

He walked rapidly to and fro in front of the doll's house fire I had lighted in his honor, and there was a suspicion of moisture in his honest blue eyes. I knew that he was thinking of those two sons at the front, of his courageous wife working beyond her strength with these desperate anxieties for her young and the petty anxieties of living at wartime prices always gnawing at her; of his young daughter, whose chance of marriage and happiness was decreasing with mathematical precision every day of the war.

"O, these cursed ambitions!" he exclaimed at last. "These personal and national ambitions—running after Morocco, and northern Africa, and the Lord knows what. They are the real causes of the war as everybody with a mite of intelligence knows well enough. . . . But you can't say these things in public—yet."

"You can't say anything but idiocies in public," I growled, and, remembering certain recent personal experiences, added, "and even those are misquoted!"

"But the people understand: they are really wiser than we."

"Don't you think that there are a lot more like us, if they only dared to let themselves think; not pacifists, but real people who understand that sooner or later the truth has got to emerge out of all the misconceptions on which Europe is now living? That to get anywhere you must begin from above, not from below; that you can't make a material peace such as the newspapers are talking about in a thousand years. While a peace of ideas and principles might be made overnight."

"Exactly! It will have to be, some time. We must make that new mind—forget the old one. . . . It is useless to talk punishment, revenge, and all the rest. . . . The war started far, far back, with all of us, in wrong ideas, wrong ambitions—selfishness, in a false notion of what humanity needs."

"And what the world needs now," I suggested, "is a few devoted anarchists with a discriminating taste in reactionaries of all sorts—in irreconcilables and——"

"Ecoutez!" The hum of engines in the air was distinctly audible. We peered out of the window. A monster dirigible was floating over the city.

"Doesn't look much like peace!" my friend said, with a laugh.

"Nevertheless something is passing up there in the airs, something other than dirigibles, aeroplanes, and shells, something that neither you nor I can see—yet!"

"It is necessary to hope."

DISTANT WHEAT FUTURES HIGHER; MAY LOSES GAIN

Market Is Slow and Trade Waits for Shipping Developments.

Wheat trading yesterday was the lightest in some time and the market was unsettled. Following an opening dip in prices there was a good rally, but weakness set in again near the finish and the May delivery lost all of its gain made early, closing at practically the same figure as on Friday. New crop months were helped by the numerous complaints of dry weather from the southwest and finished ⅝@1⅛c higher. Outside interest in the market was at low ebb, and much of the trading was between two of the prominent local operators.

Shipping conditions continued to hold the attention of the trade. Indications are that some progress is being made in the matter of relieving the congestion, but it is still practically impossible to move any grain from here to the east. No export business was reported and foreigners at the moment are directing their attention to moving out supplies already purchased. Clearances of wheat and flour for the day were 314,000 bu, against 1,118,000 bu a year ago.

Southwest Crop Complaints.

Kansas and Missouri points complained much of the continued lack of moisture, and some of the reports were alarming in character. The trade generally, however, realizes that present reports are based on belief and not on fact, as the condition of the winter wheat will not be known definitely until growing weather sets in. One of the local houses said farm reserves of winter wheat were reported to them as the smallest ever known at this time of the year, while in spring wheat territory farmers have only seed requirements left.

Foreign crop advices continued to be unfavorable. Broomhall says that there is less interference noticeable in shipping and that it believed that import arrivals will soon increase. Primary receipts yesterday totaled 652,000 bu, against 1,497,000 a year ago. Local wheat receipts for the week were 569,000 bu, while shipments were 470,000 bu.

Corn Trade Featureless.

Corn was also dull and featureless and closed unchanged to ¼c higher. Much irregularity in price movement was noted. Cash houses and some of the larger local traders bought corn early, while the selling came from scattered sources and was light at all times. Some export inquiry for corn was reported, but no business claimed. Transportation conditions are still against shipping business. Cash corn was steady to ½c lower, with local shipping sales 15,000 bu. Clearances of corn for the day were 123,000 bu.

Broomhall reports export offers of corn abroad as small and demand good. Argentine advices are bullish. Primary receipts totaled 828,000 bu, compared with 1,808,000 bu a year ago. Local corn receipts for the week were 1,557,000 bu, while shipments were 805,000 bu.

Oats Quiet but Firm.

Oats were quiet and followed wheat, finishing ⅛@¼c higher. Trading was entirely local in character, and prices moved over a narrow range. Clearances from the seaboard were 349,000 bu. Cash oats were steady, with local shipping sales 65,000 bu. Primary receipts totaled 609,000 bu, against 830,000 bu a year ago. Local receipts this week were 1,444,000 bu, while 983,000 bu were shipped. London oats were 1s higher and Liverpool advanced 1½d.

Provisions ruled firm and closed with material gains. Packing interests were credited with giving the market support, while there was free buying by one of the local operators. Hog prices at the yards were higher and the Liverpool market was again advanced, spot lard being up 1s 6d, bacon 1@4s higher, and hams 2s higher. Broomhall reports the situation there as acute, with demand exceeding arrivals. Further mining of the North sea will curtail Danish shipments. Hog receipts at western markets this week totaled 772,000 head, against 711,000 last week and 874,000 a year ago.

Rye Market Nominal.

Rye was quiet, with No. 2 quoted $1.47 nominal. Receipts, none.

Barley ruled steady. Malting was quoted $1.10@1.30 and sold $1.14@1.26; feed and mixing quotable $1.00@1.10, and screenings 50c@$1.05, with latter selling at 60c@$1.05; skimmings were quoted 70@75c. Receipts were 16 cars.

Timothy seed was steady; March, $5.60 bid and $5.75 asked; cash lots sold $3.50@5.00. Clover seed ruled firm; cash lots quoted $12.00@18.00 and spot prime $19.60 nominal.

Flaxseed closed unchanged; cash quoted $2.75⅝@2.82⅝ nominal. Duluth was steady to 1c higher; Minneapolis unchanged, and Winnipeg ⅝c lower to 1c higher.

Receipts inspected Saturday: Wheat, 14 cars; corn, 99 cars; oats, 84 cars; barley, 16 cars. Hogs estimated for Monday, 62,000, and for all next week, 235,000.

COTTON.

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—The cotton market was very quiet today, but prices ruled generally steady on reports of a further reduction in war risk insurance rates and covering for over the week-end. After selling at 15.92c May contracts advanced to 16.06c and closed at 16.00c, with the general list closing steady at a net advance of 4@7 points. Reports that the British admiralty might establish an examination station off the south Atlantic coast, such as that now operating at Halifax, attracted considerable attention, as it would be considered advantageous to cotton shippers. It was also reported that the announcement with reference to British restrictions on imports expected on Monday morning had been delayed, and one of the private cables received here said it was considered improbable that the restrictions contemplated would seriously affect cotton. Otherwise the day's news received little comment around the ring, and the market was considered too narrow by local brokers to indicate any material change in sentiment. March contracts continued to rule within 12@14 points of May, although cotton out of the local stock is said to be offered at small premiums on March. Northern spinners were again reported in the market here for small lots, supposedly to replace delayed shipments from the south. Port receipts today were 9,755 bales and 5,748,147 for the season; exports today, 27,177 bales; for the season, 3,943,066; stock, 1,319,844. Futures:

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 17.—A quiet but very steady tone prevailed in the cotton market today; trading being devoted chiefly to evening up of old business. Sellers of the last few days endeavored to get their cotton back and put prices up themselves. The demand was not large but offerings were slender. The close was at a net gain of 4@8 points. SUGAR.

CHICAGO, Feb. 17.—SUGAR—Following prices were quoted by the wholesale dealers per 100 lbs: Cut loaf, H. & E., $9.05; powdered, standard, $8.05; standard cane granulated, $7.85; beet granulated, $8.25; extra C, $7.55; canary, $7.15.

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—SUGAR—Raw: The market showed continued nervousness, but the undertone was firm, although no sales were reported. It was said that sugar was offered for February shipment at 4⅝c, cost and freight, and that some sugar was sold to operators for March shipment at 4½c, cost and freight. Refiners, however, were out of the market and were inclined to hold off and await further advices from Cuba before reentering the market. The close was firm, with prices nominal at 4½@4⅝c for Cubas, cost and freight, equal to 5.52@5.64c for centrifugal and 4.65@4.77c for molasses. In refined business was light, as most refiners were not in a position to accept new orders. Prices were firm and unchanged, with two refiners listing at 7c for fine granulated, while other refiners were asking 7.50c. The market for sugar futures was unsettled, owing to the continued political disturbances in Cuba, and prices were a shade lower under scattered selling by Wall street and commission houses. The close was unchanged to 7 points net lower, with sales of 11,800 tons. March sold from 4.60c to 4.56c, closing 4.58c; May, .54@4.51c, closing 4.51c; July, 4.52@4.51c, closing 4.51c; September, 4.53c, closing 4.52c.

FARM LOAN BOND FREE FROM TAX

Washington, D. C., Feb. 17.—[Special.]—The federal farm loan board today issued the following statement:

"Certain newspaper articles published in the west, especially in Kansas, state that Attorney General Gregory has given an opinion that the provisions of the farm loan act exempting from taxation mortgages taken and bonds issued under the farm loan system are unconstitutional. The fact is that the opinion of the attorney general declares the law perfectly constitutional. The newspaper statements, which have created widespread uneasiness, are exactly opposed to the facts. Farm loan bonds are declared by the attorney general of the United States to be legally and constitutionally exempt from all taxation."

The hog market at Chicago opened at an advance of 10c and closed 10@15c higher than Friday's average. Trade was active and all offerings were well taken, with preference shown for prime shipping hogs, the outside demand, especially late in the session, being exceptionally brisk. Top sales were made at $12.50 and the bulk at $12.25@12.40. Receipts were posted at 17,000 and only about 2,000 were left unsold at the finish.

Final prices were the best of the week, but left the market 5@10c lower than a week ago. At the same time the average of all hogs here this week was advanced to $12.35, against $12.30 last week. Pigs were steady with a week ago. Receipts for the week were more than 48,000 head, while shipments were enlarged by only 4,000, car shortage restricting the outward movement.

CATTLE.

Market for steers was an irregular one the last week. The gains registered on Wednesday only offset in part the declines of Monday, when the bulk of sales were 15@25c lower, while the weakness shown in the latter part of the week left the market a little lower for all but choice steers. Prime steers sold up to $12.00, while the bulk of transactions were from $9.50@11.25. Cows and heifers average 25c lower than a week ago for the bulk of the offerings, while losses of $1.00@1.25 for the period are shown for calves. Receipts for the week were materially larger than for previous week and a year ago, while shipments also showed increases.

Cattle at seven western markets for the week 177,100, against 141,700 the preceding week, 132,000 a year ago, and 87,700 two years ago. Total for 1917 to date 1,267,000, against 1,080,000 the same period in 1916.

SHEEP.

Sheep were strong during the week under small offerings and sharp demand. Ewes made gains of 50@75c, wethers and yearlings were mainly 10@15c higher, with some of latter making 25c advance, while bucks were 50c higher. Western ewes sold up to $11.85, while yearlings were up to $14.00. Lambs closed steady with a week ago for the bulk of offerings, but compared with the high levels of the week, losses of 25@50c are shown. Top price on lambs was $15.00 with bulk selling from $14.00@14.80. Receipts were slightly less than previous week, but materially under run of a year ago.

Total sales of stocks, 273,000 shares.

Total sales of bonds (par value), $1,723,000.

New York, Feb. 17.—All branches of the stock list reflected further confidence during today's brief period of trading, dealings being on a larger and broader scale than any previous day of the week. Under the lead of United States Steel, industrials rose 1 to 4 points, marked strength being manifested by Lackawanna Steel and Republic Iron. Coppers and equipments advanced as much, the entire metal group being materially strengthened by unconfirmed reports of the sale of a moderate amount of "spot" copper at the unprecedented price of 37 cents per pound.

Shippings were the most active features next to steel and iron shares at average gains of 2 points, their rise being accompanied by a decline in marine insurance rates, indicating an abatement of the recent apprehension in that quarter.

Motors Make Gains.

Motors and accessories registered moderate advances and Mexicans made further recoveries from their reversal of the midweek. The more distinctive war supply stocks, notably Central Leather, Baldwin Locomotive, Industrial Alcohol, and National Enameling, were steady demand, rising 1 to 2 points with 4⅝ for New York Air Brake.

Transcontinentals, particularly Canadian Pacific and Union Pacific, featured the seasoned rails, and New Haven threw off some of its recent depression.

American Snuff Falls.

Among the few exceptions to the general advance were American Beet Sugar and American Snuff, the latter falling 12 points after gaining 7 the day before. Final prices were slightly under top levels, but the closing was active and strong.

Trading in bonds was light, with an irregular tone, except in internationals, which showed slight improvement. United States coupon 3s advanced ½ point and registered 4s lost a point on call during the week.

COFFEE.

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—The market for coffee futures showed a further improvement today. Indications of larger clearances from Santos, to Europe, small primary receipts, and the recent absence of selling pressure from Brazilian shippers in spite of comparatively full stocks, appeared to be bringing in little fresh buying from outside sources. There was also a little demand from trade and after opening unchanged to 3 points higher, active months sold about 6 to 12 points above last night's closing figures. Further liquidation of March largely in the way of switching to later months, appeared to be readily absorbed and that delivery rallied from 8.20@8.25c, while May sold up from 8.35@8.45c, and December from 8.55@8.57c. The close was 5@7 points net higher. Sales, 51,000 bags. February, 8.21c; March, 8.24c; April, 8.32c; May, 8.39c; June, 8.54c; July, 8.50c; August, 8.54c; September, 8.57c; October, 8.62c; November, 8.67c; December, 8.71c; January, 8.76c. Spot coffee was reported in moderate demand at 10c for Rio 7s and 10½c for Santos 4s. Offers of Santos 4s were reported in the cost and freight market at 10.00@10.10c, London credits, and of Rio 7s at 9.35@9.50c, London credits. Freights were said to be easier with several steamers now in Santos offering room, while insurance rates were also reported easier. The official cables reported no change in Brazilian markets, except for an advance of 25 reis in Santos futures. Brazilian port receipts, 18,000 bags; Jundiahy, 5,000 bags.

Exceptional Business Opportunity

I will sell 20% interest in one of Chicago's most widely known and best advertised Manufacturing Industries. This company made $50,000.00 net profits in 1916.

This offer must not be construed as indicating that the company is in need of capital, but is made to attract some young man of ability and exceptional high standing to become actively interested in the business and assume responsible position.

This is a rare opportunity for the right man who has capital to invest, and a great opportunity for a father who wishes to start a son in an established business.

No consideration will be shown brokers, as this sale must be conducted through our respective banks.

Big Profits Help Real Estate.

The investment position of Chicago real estate securities has been strengthened wonderfully in the last year and a half by the enormous profits that have accrued to various local enterprises in that time. This influx of wealth has been the most conspicuous in the iron and steel industry, but it has been felt in a hundred other lines.

Take, for instance, the packing companies. Most of them have just issued their annual reports, showing an enormous increase in business done. Not all publish complete figures, but increases of 30, 50, and 300 per cent in net profits tell the story of an increase of hundreds of millions of dollars in gross sales and the disbursing of a substantial fraction of the total in wages. Similarly the great mail order houses have told of sales exceeding by millions of dollars any previous record. Practically every manufacturing concern that has thus far issued a report makes a similar showing.

This flood of prosperity has touched both rich and poor. The great majority of residents of Chicago are better off now than ever before; have more money to spend and more to invest. It is inevitable that part of this money should go into real estate, either as rent or purchase money, thus stabilizing and strengthening the local situation. Some families will buy homes, some will move into larger apartments, and there has been and still continues a steady influx of new workers to take up vacant quarters.

American Can.

W. N. S., Oak Park.—The American Can company earned 12.31 per cent on its $41,233,300 of common stock in 1916 after paying 7 per cent on an equal amount of preferred. There are [illegible] per cent of accrued dividends on the preferred, and, of course, until they are paid the common can have no distribution. The company now has a surplus of $11,112,231, equal to about 23 per cent on the preferred stock, but there is no immediate prospect of action on the back dividends. The reason is that the present large business requires much working capital, and the surplus is needed for this purpose. The common stock is a speculation rather than an investment at present. You can buy one share of stock through any reputable brokerage house, large or small.

Ohio Fuel Supply Company.

C. A. H.—The Ohio Fuel Supply company has just issued $7,615,125 of new stock for the purpose of retiring [illegible] 125 of debentures and the purchase of some new properties. Holders of the $12,230,250 of old stock had the right to subscribe to the new at par, which is $25. The company has paid 8 per cent a year on its stock since 1910. Before that for some time it paid 10 per cent. Gross earnings in the year ended April 16 last were $7,129,736, net [illegible]. The balance sheet showed total assets of $27,467,861, and a surplus of [illegible].

Brief Answers.

C. W. L.—The Haytian American corporation has reputable backing, but, of course, its undertaking is in large measure speculative. It proposes to control some public utilities and a sugar plantation. A purchase of stock would be a participation in the venture.

J. H.—The Connecticut Alloyed [illegible] company was incorporated in December, 1915. It issued $200,000 of 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock and [illegible] shares of common of no par value. No reports are available.

Wanted—a Man

One of our clients has an opening for a real Sales Manager. This man must be one of highly developed abilities, who can originate large business-producing ideas consistently. We would prefer that he know the motor truck field, but this is not absolutely essential. If he has some knowledge of engineering as well as salesmanship, so much the better.

The man we want must be able to handle correspondence, write on business subjects with a human warmth that moves men. He must be of mental and moral integrity, in good health and with a good general education. He must be able and willing to work, with a vigor and enthusiasm which knows neither hours nor tiring. This job is no cinch.

Our client is prepared to pay a salary fully commensurate with the service he requires. To the man who can measure up to the above requirements we can offer an exceptional opportunity. Address by mail, with detail of your qualifications.

Mid-Continent Oil

Nov. 29th, Kansas-Oklahoma Oil was selling at 90c a barrel. It is now $1.70, and many believe it is going to $3.00. Since Oct. 1st, the Sinclair Oil Co., Cosden Oil Co., the Standard's subsidiaries and other big concerns have invested over $60,000,000 in the purchase of storage oil, producing properties and wildcat acreage in this field. The greatest development ever known is now under way.

As oil producers in Kansas during the last twelve years we are familiar with conditions and property values, and will secure settled production, partly developed leases, drilling propositions or wildcat acreage for investors on a straight commission basis or a working interest. Correspondence invited from responsible persons.

NEW YORK BANKS SHOW SMALL GAIN EXCESS RESERVE

No Change in Money Mart Conditions Indicated—Big Demand for Ships.

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 17—The state auditor late this afternoon issued a bank call requesting statements of the condition of all Illinois state banks at the close of business today, Feb. 17.

The New York bank statement showed important changes in loans and deposits, but a small change in the excess reserve. Although deposits increased $32,000,000 there was still a gain in the surplus of $1,256,470, bringing the item up to $165,715,220.

There was nothing in the figures to suggest a change in money market conditions. The statement follows:

ACTUAL STATEMENT.

	Jan. 17, 1917.	Increase.
Loans	$3,466,662,000	$34,728,000

Of reserve in vaults $464,686,000 is specie.

*Decrease.

Big Demand for Ships.

A representative of a large shipbuilding company shows that France and Great Britain are in the American market for all the ships the shipbuilding companies can turn out. This is the first time in history that Europe has asked this country to supply ship tonnage. The American shipbuilding companies are crowded with work and few ships can be bought for foreign countries. The same shipbuilder says this country will be kept busy turning out ships at least five years after the end of the European war.

Chicago Curb Featureless.

Local unlisted securities have been rather dull, with no particular feature. American Fork and Hoe common declined to offerings at 125, after the annual meeting. The preferred remained in demand at 126. American Hominy preferred was fairly active at 73@77. Butler Brothers sold as high as 282¼, but declined to 278, closing at the latter price bid, with stock offered at 280. Consumers preferred sold at 79, ex dividend of 3½ points. United States Gypsum common was steady at 42 to 44, with the preferred in demand at 99 and stock offered at 100. Wilson & Co. preferred changed hands between 104 and 105.

Stocks of the implement concerns were fairly active. Avery common sold between 86 and 89, and the preferred between 95 and 99. Emerson-Brantingham preferred changed hands at 40, closing 40 bid, offered at 42. Moline Plow preferred was in demand at 96¼, ex dividend, with stock offered at 97½.

Improvement in Sugar Stocks.

Trading in the Sugar stocks showed some improvement after a considerable period of inactivity. Michigan Sugar advanced some 5 points to 91, closing at 87½ bid, offered at 89½, ex-dividend of 2 per cent. Holland-St. Louis was wanted at 11½, with stock offered at 12. German-American was steady at 25½ to 27. Utah-Idaho was a trifle better at 25¼ to 26.

Slightly lower prices prevailed in the Motor group. Continental Motors sold between 9½ and 10. Reo Motor Car changed hands at 36 to 36½. Paige-Detroit sold between 38 and 39. Packard Motor was rather neglected, with stock offered at 150, and very little interest on the buying side. A small inquiry existed for Premier Motor common around 31, with stock offered at 34. Rubber stocks have been rather freely offered with little support. Goodyear Tire and Rubber common was offered at 255, with buyers at 252. Fisk Tire and Rubber common was quoted at 70 to 80. Firestone Tire and Rubber was some five points lower at 132 to 136. Some small lot trading took place in Kellogg Switchboard and Supply around 270, closing at 268 bid, offered at 272. Inland Steel was unchanged at 428 to 435. Oxweld Acetylene sold at 175 and 177. Linde Air Products changed hands at 297.

Public Utilities Quiet.

Public utility securities were rather quiet, with sales as follows: Middle West Utilities preferred, 80; common, 60; United Light preferred, 77; American Public Utilities preferred, 68¼; United Light common, 47; American Light and Traction, 359; American Water Works and Electric common, 10¼; Cities Service common, 285; preferred, 89¾; Northern States Power common, 102½; preferred, 98; Standard Gas and Electric preferred, 39¼.

Capital and Counties Bank.

At the annual meeting of shareholders of the Capital and Counties bank, England, the profit and loss account for the six months ended Dec. 31, 1916, showed a gross profit after bad and doubtful debts, etc., amounting to $2,640,000. The net profits were $1,075,000. The directors declared a dividend at the rate of 14 per cent. There was charged off $500,000 on account of reduction in the cost of investments. The latter item is one which has caused all the British banks to suffer in the matter of profits.

The report of the chairman of the board shows that 1,120 members of the bank's staff had joined the military naval forces. Of this number sixty-eight were killed.

Chicago Securities.

Swift & Co. shares were the feature of the local market, advancing 4 points from the opening on a brisk buying movement. There was no special news. The packing business is good, made so by the war, and the prospects of more are considered good.

With the exception of a 1 point advance in Sears-Roebuck common other issues were dull and steady.

To Investigate Explosives Co.

A committee of bankers has been formed at the request of stockholders to look into the financial affairs of the Aetna Explosives company, which is said to need additional working capital. A letter was sent tonight by T. C. Gilbert, secretary of the committee, to the common and preferred stockholders urging them to unite in protection of their interests. It was unofficially estimated that approximately [illegible] would be required to tide the company over.

Last January the company increased the common stock from 70,000 to 630,000 shares with no par value, while the stated amount of the capital of the company was increased from $12,500,000 to $18,000,000.

The company was incorporated in November, 1914, when the war contract business was beginning. After its incorporation it began to acquire powder and munition factories in various parts of the country.

NEWS OF THE FINANCIAL WORLD

An interest in the leather industry of the country says: "If this nation enters seriously into the preparedness campaign, or if the course of events leads us into open hostilities, it is inevitable that Central Leather will be a decided beneficiary. I understand that hemlock sole leather is one of the essential war commodities. Central Leather produces about 80 per cent of all the hemlock sole leather made in the United States."

Cable advices to the Federal Sugar Refining company say that three sugar mills in the province of Santa Clara have stopped grinding as a result of political disturbances. Grinding has been largely interrupted in the provinces of Oriente and Camaguey, and telegraphic communications with the eastern part of the island have been cut.

According to testimony from many sources the latest developments suggest the stock market could hardly be in a more liquidated state, the volume of floating stock is small, and a considerable short interest exists. Prices are low, earnings large, and prospects for the present year show no likelihood of a corporate revenue decline of consequence.

Orders for over $10,000,000 worth of equipment and steel rails are being placed by the Santa Fe company. The expenditure calls for thirty-five passenger, baggage, mail, and express cars, fifty locomotives, 1,000 stock cars, 500 tank cars, and 100,000 tons of steel rails. The contracts will call for early delivery.

It is reported the Crucible Steel company is working on United States government orders at its ordnance plant at Harrison, N. J. The order is for 5,000 fourteen inch armor piercing shells for the navy. The gross value of the order is about $2,500,000.

The Tidewater Oil company and subsidiaries showed for the calendar year 1916 net profits of $11,022,708, being equal to 38.01 per cent on the stock, compared with 19.25 per cent the previous year.

Announcement comes from Kansas City that, owing to lack of rain and scarcity of water, there has been less drilling in the oil districts, notwithstanding record prices prevailed for oil.

The report of the Lackawanna Steel and subsidiary companies for the year ended Dec. 31, 1916, shows net profits of $12,218,235, compared with $2,409,105 in 1915.

Big Oil Well Still Going.

In spite of Mexican disturbances of the last year, the world's greatest oil well, Cerro Azul, No. 4, located near Tampico, Mex., and owned by an American company, has been steadily pouring out oil. Oil was struck in this well on Feb. 10, 1915, and when it was finally brought under control nine days later it was spouting approximately 300,000 barrels daily. Since then it has been allowed to produce only 30,000 barrels of oil each day.

Hand Book of Securities.

The 1917 issue of the Hand Book of Securities, compiled by the publishers of the Commercial and Financial Chronicle, has been received. The book contains 224 pages and gives full information concerning the various railroads and leading industrials whose securities are dealt in on the New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, and Pittsburgh exchanges. The price of the book is $1 and copies may be obtained at the Chronicle office, 39 South La Salle street, Chicago.

Dividends Declared.

Republic Steel declared the regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent on the preferred stock, payable April 2 to stock of record March 20. A dividend of 1½ per cent on common stock was also declared, payable March 1 to stock of record April 20.

Crucible Steel declared the regular dividend of 1¾ per cent on the preferred and 1¾ per cent to be applied on deferred dividends.

Money and Exchange.

Money rates in Chicago firm at 4 per cent on collateral, 4 per cent on commercial paper, and 4@4½ per cent over the counter. New York exchange, 15@5c discount. Chicago bank clearings, $76,623,821.

In Foreign Stock Markets

LONDON, Feb. 17.—With the war loan out of the way the stock market developed slightly increased activity. There was a fair amount of business in corporation stocks and colonial and exchequer bonds at hardening prices, while home rails were firm features and one to two points higher. The old war loan, the conversion rights having expired, was quoted at 91, nine points below yesterday. In the miscellaneous section shipping, copper and oil shares were the best spots. American securities were steady, but very few transactions were recorded. The demand for money slackened and rates were reduced to 4½ per cent. Discounts were easy.

Bar silver, 38⅛d per ounce. Money, 4½ per cent. Discount rates, short bills, 5⅛ per cent. Three months, 5¼ per cent.

PARIS, Feb. 17.—Trading was quiet on the bourse today. Rentes, 62 francs; exchange on London, 27 francs 81½ centimes; 5 per cent loan, 87 francs 70 centimes.

RESIN AND TURPENTINE.

Bethlehem Stock Increase Meets Approval of Court

Newark, N. J., Feb. 17.—The Bethlehem Steel corporation plan for increased capitalization from $15,000,000 common stock to $60,000,000 was approved this afternoon by Vice Chancellor Lane, who dissolved the temporary injunction granted on application of C. H. Venner, representing the General Investment company, owners of 100 shares of common stock.

A stockholders' meeting was in session awaiting the ruling, and the certificate of increase in capitalization was forwarded at once to the office of the secretary of state at Trenton.

Bethlehem Steel directors recently voted to declare a $30,000,000 stock dividend and issue to stockholders $15,000,000 new stock for cash, the stock, however, having no voting power. Under the new plan the total capitalization of the company will become $75,000,000, including preferred stock.

General Sherman said it!

A few weeks ago arrangements were concluded giving me $500,000 for a half interest in a proposition which is today intrinsically worth a million dollars. The present condition of international affairs does not take one dollar off from the value of my enterprise. It is in no way connected with war, and instead of war proving injurious to the company it will help us. But insofar as it affects feelings of the bankers who had agreed to furnish the money and the collateral value of their securities, it has had the result of halting negotiations for the present. To show my good faith I will give the names of these bankers to any inquirer who convinces me of his serious intentions at a personal interview. I am not going to wait for the above negotiations to be reopened. I need a man to invest $20,000 immediately for purposes of the company, not a dollar of which I will personally touch. For this $20,000 cash at once I offer a 10% interest in an enterprise today worth more than a million dollars, with a value in less than five years of at least $5,000,000.

There is not one penny commission in this for any broker, and I will not correspond about it any further than to make an appointment. You may come to me or I will come to you. But you must satisfactorily identify yourself and convince me that you have the money and mean business. I am not pleading for this money. I am offering a wonderful opportunity.

Personally I am well and favorably known. This is an opportunity of a lifetime. Investigate all you like, but lose no time.

THE feature of a surprisingly good real estate market last week was, of course, the transaction involving the erection of a sixteen story store and office building at the southwest corner of State and Lake streets, which also is to contain a vaudeville theater having a capacity of 3,000, the largest theater in Chicago with the exception of the Auditorium.

Apart from the magnitude of the transaction, which, with the building and the capitalized value of the land, will represent an investment of approximately $4,000,000, a special interest attaches to the transaction for the reason it is the most important improvement ever undertaken in the extreme north end of the loop district and should not be without much effect in stimulating values in that part of the city.

A. H. Woods' Plans Recalled.

The theatrical end of the project has also a special interest, following so closely on the recently announced plans of A. H. Woods of New York for the construction of a theater at Randolph and Dearborn streets. The deal was negotiated by Albert L. Strauss, who, it will be recalled, sold the property to be occupied by the proposed building to the Marshall Field estate in 1912 for approximately $1,750,000. Mr. Strauss also negotiated the Woods deal.

The building, which is to cost $1,250,000, is to be erected by Martin Beck, the estate of Charles E. Kohl, Herman Fehr, and others owning and identified with the Palace and Majestic theaters, and will extend from Lake street to Couch place, with a frontage of 180 feet on State street and 163 feet on Lake street and Couch place. The store and office building will occupy the entire frontage on both State and Lake streets and will have a depth of fifty feet, thus affording a maximum of light. The top floor of the building will have two stages to be devoted to rehearsals and private theatrical undertakings. It is hoped to begin work on the new building by midsummer.

99 Year Ground Lease.

The ground was leased from the Marshall Field estate for ninety-nine years at an annual rental, it is understood, of $85,000 for the first ten years, $90,000 for the succeeding five, $95,000 for the next five, $100,000 for the following ten, $110,000 for the next twenty, and $120,000 for the remaining forty-nine years of the term.

The present improvements comprise four and six story buildings erected many years ago. Some of the tenants have been occupants of the building for many years, notably Cameron, Amberg & Co. and the Booth Fisheries, who have been there for over forty years.

The proposed theater will be of splendid proportions and in all of its appointments it will be one of the finest playhouses in the country.

Bell Company Transaction.

In another important deal in the downtown district the Chicago Telephone company has acquired by purchase and lease the property at 526-34 Federal street, seventy-five feet north of Harrison street, 100x100 feet, giving it a total of 203 feet frontage, the north seventy-eight feet of which is occupied by a seven story fireproof building in which are located the Harrison and Wabash exchanges. While no building plans are had regarding the property just acquired, it is understood it eventually will be improved with a building similar to the one on the north. Mark Levy & Bro. negotiated the purchase of one of the properties and aided in the acquirement of tne others.

Leased for 200 Years.

The property at 526-30 Federal street, being 50x100 feet, was leased from Thomas W. Magill for 200 years at a graded annual rental of $4,000 for five years, $4,500 for five years, $5,000 for forty years, $4,500 for the next fifty years, and $4,000 for the last 100 years. The average is $4,337, or 5 per cent on $2,213 a front foot and $22.13 a square foot. A building to cost not less than $75,000 is to be erected in twenty years.

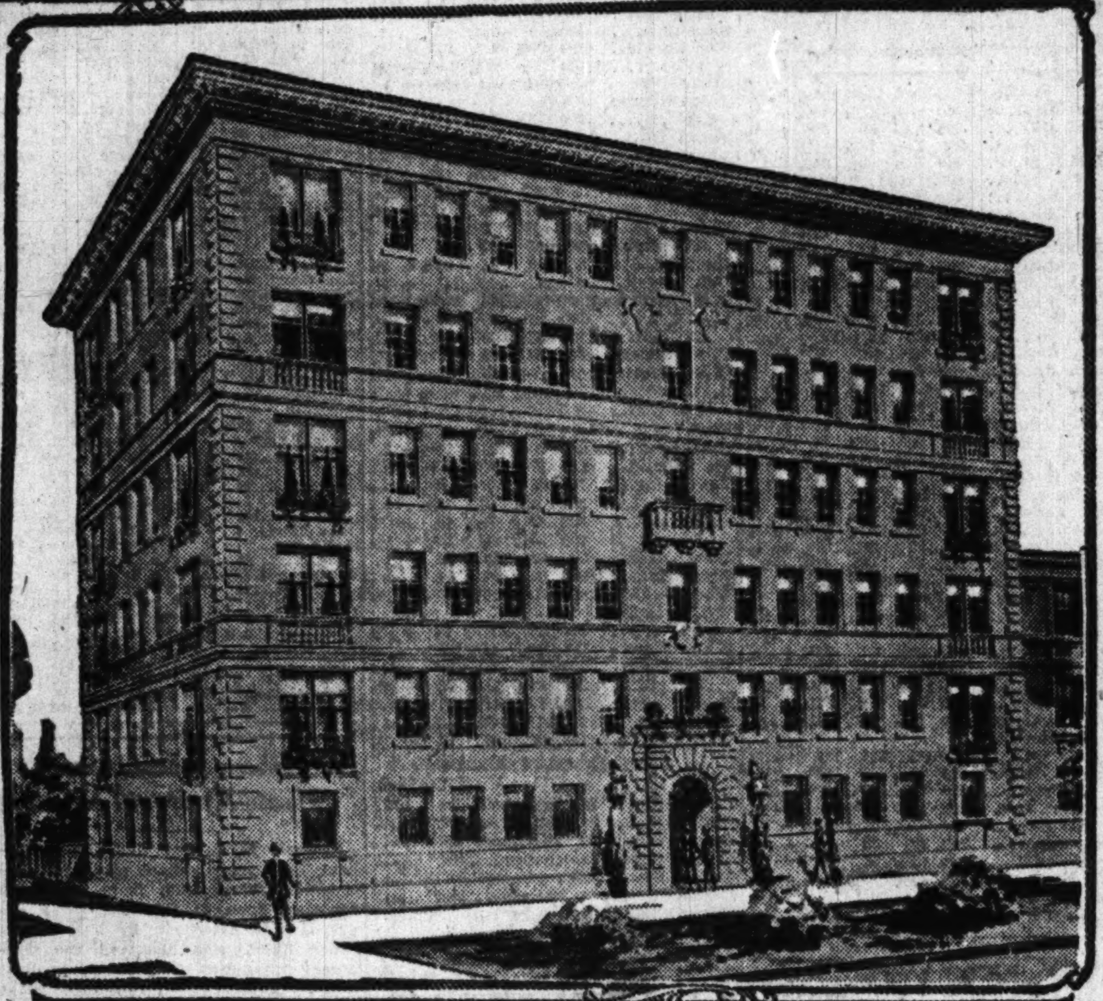
From Robert C. Gunning was acquired the building and leasehold at 532 Federal street, being 24.5x100 feet, for a stated consideration of $12,000, while the property at 534, 25x100 feet, was purchased from Ignatz Hirsch for $40,000, which is at the rate of $1,600 a front foot. Mr. Hirsch acquired the property through Levy & Bro. in 1913 for $30,000. L. J. Bliss of Levy & Bro. was associated in the deal, while J. W. Dickerson and Henry Russell Platt attended to the legal details.

Sale in Midway District.

The southwest corner of Woodlawn avenue and Fifty-seventh street, 50x180 feet, vacant, has been conveyed by Arthur J. Mason to Morton D. Hull for a reported consideration of $10,750. It is one of the choicest pieces of corner vacant in the University of Chicago district. The sale was negotiated by William A. Bond & Co.

IN THE BUILDING WORLD

Six Story Structure Being Erected by John Sexton & Co., and Apartment Building at Pearson and Seneca Streets.



AN important industrial development in the Kingsbury street district is the six story and basement heavy mill construction building now being erected by John Sexton & Co. at Illinois and Kingsbury streets. It will be one of the largest of its kind in the city, with ground dimensions of 420 by 100 feet. It will have a connection with the Illinois Tunnel company and will have a switch track of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road running into the building. The entire east section of the first floor will be used for shipping, with covered driveway at front and rear. The offices will be on the second floor and there will be special accommodations for the employés. It is being constructed under the supervision of Architect Alfred S. Alschuler and will cost $600,000.

An extra high grade five story and English basement fireproof ten apartment building is being erected at the northeast corner of Pearson and Seneca streets for George Campbell, after plans by Robert S. De Golyer. It will occupy 60x100 feet of ground and will represent an investment of $136,000. Each apartment is to have six rooms, reception room and two bathrooms and the main floor has in addition to the usual features a three room apartment and six servants' rooms. The Union Trust company has underwritten a bond issue on the property.

BROAD MARKET IN APARTMENTS; TRADING BRISK

Better Class of Properties Makes an Especially Good Showing.

In a broad market in which all classes of property were represented to a greater extent than for some time, apartment property made a good showing last week. There was, perhaps, not as free a movement of the medium and cheaper priced properties, as has been the case for several weeks, but there was much doing in the better class of properties.

In an interesting west side deal James E. and Jerushe M. Price of Kisbey, Saskatchewan, Canada, have purchased from F. E. Garn and F. E. Schantz the fifteen apartment building at the southeast corner of Franklin boulevard and Trumbull avenue, 52x150 feet, subject to $34,500 incumbrance; the Patricia, a twelve apartment building, southwest corner Kostner and Gladys avenues, 58x110 feet, subject to $26,500, and the Garn building of six apartments at 3147-49 Franklin boulevard, ninety-seven feet east of Kedzie avenue, 40x149 feet, subject to $16,500 incumbrance.

The total consideration of the three buildings is said to have been $150,000, the buyers conveying in part payment a 1,000 acre farm at Armilla, Sask., at the reported valuation of $85,000, subject to $14,000 incumbrance. Westvelt & Co. were the brokers and will have charge of the properties.

In Sixty-first Street.

Record was made of the transfer by C. A. Anderson to Albert B. Rutt of the property at the northwest corner of Sixty-first street and Ingleside avenue, lot 140x170 feet, improved with a building containing thirty-six apartments of three, four, five, and six rooms, with an annual rental of about $17,500. A nominal consideration is given, the transfer being subject to an incumbrance of $95,750. The building was erected by Mr. Anderson between two and three years ago.

The two twenty-four apartment buildings, each on lots 125 feet square, at the southeast and southwest corners respectively of Kedzie avenue and Argyle street, have been sold by Thomasson & White to Aaron B. Moe, the consideration being withheld, but is said to be $75,000, for each property, subject to $55,000 in each case. They are said to be the latest buildings to be erected in the Albany Park district, and are said to have a gross annual rental of $9,500 each.

In an interesting south side transfer made a matter of record James Innes has conveyed to James Innes, trustee for the Jensen Construction company, the new eighteen apartment building of two and three rooms, on 50x122 feet of ground, east front, in Kenwood avenue 166 feet north of Forty-eighth street, a nominal consideration being given, subject to an incumbrance of $48,000. The grantee company had the contract for the construction of the building.

B. LOWENMEYER BUYS 40 ACRES ON SOUTH SIDE

Subdivider Will Cut Tract in Three Hundred Lots.

There was only one important deal in acres, the purchase by Ben Lowenmeyer, a north side subdivider, from the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, of a tract of forty acres, lying between Ninety-third and Ninety-fifth streets, South Park and St. Lawrence avenues. A nominal consideration is given, but the sale is subject to an incumbrance of $51,440.

Cut Into 300 Lots.

The property, which is a part of the original Pullman tract, has been subdivided by Mr. Lowenmeyer into 300 lots, with frontages of thirty and thirty-five feet, with a depth of 125 feet. He will put in gas, water, sewers, and cement sidewalks and place the property on the market, the lots to sell at from $400 up. There will be forty business lots on Ninety-fifth street, the rest of the property to be for residence purposes.

Near Burnside Station.

The property is within two blocks of the Burnside station of the Illinois Central road. The sale was negotiated by F. M. Lowe. The property is said to have been held at $100,000, but the consideration is understood to have been under this figure.

A tract of forty-six lots between Crawford and Karlov avenues, West Fifty-eighth place and Fifty-ninth street, has been conveyed by C. M. Rogers to Elizabeth M. Robinson, a consideration of $10 being given in the transfer.

Realty Party Leaves to Attend Mardi Gras

Over 125 members of the Cook county real estate board, many accompanied by their friends, left over the Chicago and Eastern Illinois road Friday morning for New Orleans to attend the Mardi Gras festival. The party will arrive at Mobile at noon today and will be entertained by the Mobile real estate board and the Chamber of Commerce, arriving in New Orleans in the evening. On the return trip the party will visit Birmingham.

Renting Agents Meeting Call for Friday Night

A meeting of the Chicago Renting Agents' association has been called for Friday evening, Feb. 23, at the rooms of the Chicago real estate board, 26 North Dearborn street, at 7:30 p. m. It is said important business will come before the meeting.

OUTSIDE TRADES SHOW DECREASE; NO LARGE DEALS

Outside business property which has figured prominently in the market for several weeks made a poor showing last week, there having been no transactions of any real importance reported or made matters of record.

The most important was the transfer by A. B. Kirchoff et al. to Pierre Combes of the property at the northwest corner of Cottage Grove avenue and Forty-fifth street, the consideration being nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $30,000. The lot is 97 feet front, with a depth of 107 feet on the south line and 170 feet on the north line, and is improved with a four story building with stores on the ground floor and apartments above.

Record has been made of the purchase by Nathan Maltz from Samuel Lakowsky of the property at the southwest corner of Ridgeway avenue and Fifteenth street, lot 50x125 feet, with store and flat improvements, the consideration being nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $26,950.

Virginia Sporting Estate

OWNED BY C. K. G. BILLINGS

Known as

"Curles Neck Farm"

5,000 Acres on the James River

Of which

3,000 ACRES are in the highest possible state of cultivation.

1,000 ACRES are devoted to a well protected duck shooting preserve, one of the best in the country and in which is found a large variety of wild fowl.

1,000 ACRES of wood and timber land, on which there is an abundance of deer, wild turkey and other game.

The main dwelling, a Colonial house of stately dimension, 3 story brick and modernly built, has lately been entirely redecorated and beautifully furnished.

Besides using this property as his Southern home, Mr. Billings has devoted the place to the breeding and raising of his well known blooded horses and has spared no expense in order to make the property the best of its kind east of the Mississippi.

The outbuildings consist of superintendent's house, many new cottages for farm hands and help, dining hall, grist mill, barns, stables, garage and granary and numerous other farm buildings. There is a regulation size (one mile) clay race track, copied after the Lexington and Memphis courses; and one sod tryout track of the same size.

BIG MAIL ORDER HOUSE ADDITION OF $1,000,000

There were several important building projects announced during the week outside of the big downtown deal, the most notable being the $1,000,000 addition which Montgomery Ward & Co. is to make to its plant at Chicago avenue and the river.

The contract for the building has been let to the Wells Bros. Construction company and the ground will be broken as soon as the weather will permit. It will occupy 400x105 feet of ground, will be nine stories high, and will be of reinforced concrete, sprinkled construction, and will be strictly fireproof.

It was designed by the engineering department of Montgomery Ward & Co. and is expected to be ready for occupancy by the middle of next October. It will contain about 400,000 square feet of floor space. The addition was made necessary by the rapid increase in the company's business.

Transaction of $350,000.

In an important west side transaction, which involves an improvement to cost $350,000, Edward Browarsky purchased from Mrs. Anna Kubb, Mary Kuthen, and others the property at the northeast corner of West Twenty-sixth street and Crawford avenue, having a frontage of 266 feet on Twenty-sixth street, between Crawford and Harding avenues, with a depth of 157 feet. The price is said to have been $100,000.

It is stated that Mr. Browarsky is having plans prepared by Architect Henry L. Newhouse for a three story store, theater, office, and flat building. The theater, which will be one of the finest outside the loop, will have a seating capacity of 2,000, in addition to which there will be fifteen stores, thirty flats, offices, and lodge halls, work on the building to commence at once. Louis J. Krejci was the broker and will have charge of the proposed building.

On the South Side.

In an important south side transaction De Forrest A. Matteson has purchased from Maurice Rosenfeld the vacant property at 817-29 East Forty-sixth street, 125x283 feet, the consideration being withheld, but said to have been $40,000. It is announced that the purchaser will improve with a seventy-two court apartment building to cost in the neighborhood of $250,000. Sherman & Winefield represented both parties and will have charge of the building.

In another transaction Fred Becklenberg, the builder, has purchased from Jefferson Jackson the property at the southeast corner of Berwyn and Winthrop avenues, 100x150 feet, adjoining the Berwyn L station. While the consideration is not disclosed, it is said to have been in the neighborhood of $50,000.

Plans Business Building.

It is announced that Mr. Becklenberg will improve the property with a high grade business building of two stories containing twelve stores, five offices, and ten garages, at a reported cost in the neighborhood of $125,000. In connection with the construction of the building, Mr. Becklenberg has secured a loan of $60,000. J. M. Hammer of Spelz & Walson was the broker in connection with the purchase of the land.

W. D. Kerfoot & Co. have sold for Mrs. Jessie Case Wallace of Racine, Wis., to Jacob Grosby of Plotke & Grosby the 71x125 feet in Briar place, at the corner of the alley just east of Halsted street, the consideration being withheld. It is stated the purchaser will improve with an eighteen apartment building to cost $45,000.

Leases and Loans.

THERE was much doing again last week of an important character in the way of leases of business space both in the downtown district as well as outside.

The John R. Thompson company figured in an important lease at Michigan avenue and Twenty-second street, which is of special interest as marking the extension of its business into the well developed outlying districts. The company has leased from the First Trust and Savings bank, trustees of the estate of Otto Young, the Butterfield building at the southwest corner of the streets named, for a term of ten years at a gross term rent said to be $100,000. H. M. Henriksen represented the restaurant company in the transaction.

The building, which is a two story structure, fronts eighty-five feet on the avenue and sixty feet on Twenty-second street. The Thompson company will occupy the greater part of the ground floor, including the corner, and will expend about $20,000 in fitting up the premises. This will give the Thompson company thirty-eight restaurants in Chicago and a total of ninety-eight restaurants throughout the country.

In the downtown district E. F. Keebler & Co. leased for the John R. Thompson company to Samuel Caro the store and basement at 112 West Madison street for a term of years from May 1 next at an annual rental of $9,000. The store is located in the La Salle theater building and will be occupied as a retail diamond and jewelry shop, the rear of the store to be used for the lessee's mail order business.

The increased business of the Thompson company in this location necessitated larger quarters and a lease was made to the company of the entire ground floor and basement of the Advertising building for a term of fifteen years at a term rental of $240,000.

Keebler & Co. also have leased for H. N. Rose, representing Dr. George S. Isham, to the Standard Furnishing Goods company the store and basement at 308 South State street for five years from May 1 at a term rent of $75,000; also for John R. Thompson to John B. Warren the store and basement at 210 South State street at an annual rental of $12,000.

Charles Weeghman, restaurateur, has closed a lease for additional space at 335 South La Salle street, to connect with his present lunchroom at 120 West Van Buren street, which will give him an "L" shaped store containing approximately 3,100 square feet of floor space and a direct entrance into the Webster building. The lease is for a term of years and the combined rental will be $240,000.

It will have a seating capacity of 160 chairs and $20,000 will be expended in fitting up the place. Fred McGuire was the broker in the transaction, and it is the fourth lease he has closed in the Webster building since Feb. 1.

◆

Hool & Goodman have leased the bank floor in the Adams Express building to Carl Dernburg & Son for five years at a term rental of $15,000. They also have leased for D. F. Crilly to the José Fernandez company 1,400 square feet in the Northwestern building, at Lake street and Fifth avenue for a term rent of $2,000. Also for the Brochon Engraving company to the National Kellastone company 1,600 square feet on the thirteenth floor of the Mallers building, for five years at a term rent of $12,000; also for J. B. Moos to the Cohen, Friedlander & Martin company 900 square feet on the third floor of the Textile building for a term rent of $15,000.

◆

C. E. Hulbert & Co. have closed seven leases of loft space in the downtown district. The most important was the lease for Joseph P. Selah and Ellen S. Chamberlain to the Pitner Gasoline Lighting company, the third floor of the Chamberlain building, at 323-25 South Market street, at a term rent of $13,600; also for Julia F. Porter the fourth floor of the building at 312-14 West Madison street for a term rent of $9,000. They also leased for the Chamberlains to Frank Kaplan & Bros. the sixth floor of the Chamberlain building for a term rent of $8,800.

SHERIDAN ROAD M. E. CHURCH SELLS PROPERTY

Thomas S. Smith to Erect Hotel on Montrose Avenue Site.

An interesting north side transaction just closed covers the property of the Sheridan Road Methodist Episcopal church at the northeast corner of the road and Montrose avenue, which has been sold to Thomas S. Smith. The consideration is withheld, but it is said to have been in the neighborhood of $[illegible]000, the transfer being subject to an incumbrance of $30,000.

The improvements comprise a two story stone residence and a mission church on the rear of the lot, the residence being now occupied as a parsonage.

High Grade Hotel.

The lot fronts 124 feet on Sheridan road and 93 feet on Montrose avenue and it is stated that Mr. Smith plans to improve the Sheridan road corner with a high grade hotel and store building, although no definite plans have been decided upon.

The property formerly was owned and occupied by John N. Young, a prominent real estate operator and subdivider. It was purchased from him about seven years ago for $17,000 by the late Rev. James A. Rowe, superintendent of the City Missionary society, through whose foresight the church has made a handsome profit.

Purchase by Church.

In this connection the First Methodist Episcopal church trustees purchased from A. T. Galt the property at the southeast corner of Hazel and Sunnyside avenues, 120x125 feet, for a reported consideration of $20,500.

This purchase was made and held in trust for the Sheridan Road M. E. church, of which the Rev. J. L. Anderson is pastor, and is to be improved at once with a modern church and parsonage to cost about $50,000. [illegible] & Clasen represented the church trustees in the sale of both corners, while Harry Goldstine & Co. represented Mr. Smith.

Albert F. Martha Buys in Jackson Boulevard

The Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee, has conveyed to Albert F. Martha the property in Jackson boulevard 255 feet west of Morgan street, [illegible] feet, south front, with improvements, for an expressed consideration of $[illegible].

THE FATE OF SPIES—A Russian firing squad in the act of executing two spies who were disguised as peasants. Note the soldier who has bound them to the stakes hurrying out of the range of fire.

THE KING OF MONTENEGRO AND GEN. HAIG—King Nicholas I., the exiled king of the little "Black Mountain" kingdom, has been visiting the various war fronts. This photograph of the king and of the commander in chief of the British forces was taken in a town in France.

NEW HANDS FOR OLD—A French soldier whose hands have been shot off, and part of whose arms have been amputated, equipped with apparatus especially designed to enable handless men to earn their bread at manual labor. The various governments at war have adopted many new inventions to keep crippled soldiers from becoming burdens to the communities.

PEOPLE YOU MEET—Drawn by W. E. Hill—SUNDAY HOME

"THE TRIBUNE" presents herewith the first of a series of cartoons, "People You Meet," by W. E. Hill, a young American artist who uses a new and unique medium of artistic expression. In his gentle satire on modern human foibles—on the people you run across every day—he is comparable as an illustrator with O. Henry as an author. Mr. Hill's lines and shading are especially adapted for reproduction by the rotogravure process, which gives a finer tone to these sketches than would the customary zinc etching.

THE "WALL-EYED BOY" TODAY—Jesse Pomeroy, who for over forty-five years has been held in solitary confinement in the Massachusetts state prison at Charlestown, recently was granted permission to work and mingle with the other prisoners, which Pomeroy refused, declaring he preferred to remain in his lonely cell if full pardon was not granted him. When he was 14 years old Pomeroy began his crime career by denuding a small boy, tying him to a beam in a barn, and lashing him into unconsciousness with a rope. Five small boys later were found who had been Pomeroy's victims; all had been stripped naked, their bodies slashed with a pen knife, and pins and needles stuck into their flesh. The murder of 5 year old Horace Millen, whose body was found in a marsh with the throat slashed, led to the apprehension of Pomeroy, who confessed to the crimes. Two of his victims had described him as the "wall-eyed" boy and in that way he was singled out. He was convicted in 1876 and sentenced to be hanged, but his sentence was later commuted to life imprisonment at solitary confinement. During the forty-one years of his sentence he has not been out of his cell and has seen no visitors or fellow prisoners. During this time he has mastered seven foreign languages and has studied law and various branches of science.

There are two coronations of the ruler of Austria-Hungary, the second as Emperor of Austria coming later. The new emperor was garbed in the gala uniform of a Hungarian field marshal, a costume gorgeous in glittering jewels. The photograph was taken at the moment the young monarch pledged his word to defend the Catholic church and all the interests thereof against the enemy. [Photograph from Underwood & Underwood.]

Read These Letters from Happy Boys

I find your Machine to be what it is recommended. I believe if thousands of other boys had one they would enjoy life better. I don't think they could get any other thing that they would like so well. I would not take $30.00 for it. I have been offered almost that much. I thank you a thousand times.—Harry Crisp, Akin, Ill.

A Mother's Appreciation

Just a few lines to thank you for my little son's Moving Picture Machine that he received in perfect order and everything as you stated. I wish to tell you my little boy is so well pleased; we have operated it and had no trouble whatever and we had our cousins to see the pictures, and how the little ones did laugh and enjoy it.—Mrs. Fred Spriggs, R. F. D. 1, Chatham, N. J.

Sold His for $10.00 and Ordered Another

Some time ago I got one of your machines and I am very much pleased with it. After working it for about a month I sold it for $10.00 to a friend of mine. He has it and entertains his family nightly. I have now decided to get another one of your machines.—Michael Ehereth, Mandan, N. Dak.

Better Than a $12.00 Machine

I am slow about turning in my thanks to you, but my Moving Picture Machine is all right. I have had it a long time and it has not been broken yet. I have seen a $12.00 machine but would not swap mine for it.—Robert Lineberry, care Revolution Store, Greensboro, N. C.

Will Get Other Boys to Get

I received my Moving Picture Machine and I am more than pleased with it. I will try to get other boys to get one too. Thanking you very much for the machine, I am. Very truly yours, Mr. John Ebert, care Wm. Holz, 11712 Vincennes Rd., Morgan Park, Chicago, Ill.

Offered $60.00 for His Machine—Made $10.80 in One Night

I have received your Moving Picture Machine and it is a good one. One of the boys offered me $60.00 for it and I told him he could get one from you for nothing. I made $10.80 in one night with it.—Alamand Lippie, P. O. Box 223, Fonda, N. Y.

Shows Clear Pictures

I have been very slow in sending you an answer. I received my Moving Picture Machine a few weeks ago and I think it is a dandy, and it shows the pictures clear just as you said it would. I am very proud of it. I thank you very much for it and I am glad to have it. I gave an entertainment two days after I got it.—Leopold Lamontagne, 54 Summer Ave., Central Falls, R. I.

Wouldn't Take $50.00 for It

I received the Moving Picture Machine and it was just like you said it was and I am very much pleased with it. I received it some time ago. I wouldn't take $50.00 for it. I made $10.00 in one night.—Edwin English, Flint, Ala.

Very Proud

Dear Sir:—Have received one of your Moving Picture Machines some time ago and I am very proud of it. The machine was worth trying for.—Joe A. Heltsinger, 1218 Church Street, Reading, Pa.

Barrels of Fun

I have one of your Moving Picture Machines that I received from you some years back and I wish to tell you that it is as good as new. It is the best machine I ever saw. We have had barrels of fun with it.—Herman G. Niess, 2348 E. 77th St., Cleveland, Ohio.

REAL MOTION PICTURES

12,000,000 a Day Attend Movies

A canvass of the motion picture industry just completed, shows there are 15,000 "movie" theatres in the United States, with a daily attendance of 12,000,000. Approximately $225,000,000 is invested in the business. Salaries paid aggregate $1,500,000 a week, and the gross receipts of the houses displaying films are $1,200,000 daily.

A Box of Film With Your Machine

Make Money. Description of this New Model Motion Picture Machine

This Motion Picture Machine which I want to send you FREE, gives clear and life-like Motion Pictures as are shown at any regular Motion Picture show. It flashes motion pictures on the sheet before you. This Machine and Box of Film are FREE—absolutely free to every Boy in this land who wants to write for an outfit, free to Girls and free to older people. Read MY OFFER in the next column which shows you how to get this Marvelous Machine.

The Films are taken one after another, about 1-100 of a second apart, as the object is passing, and thus its every action is brought out clearly in the picture. They are exact reproductions of the films used by the standard machines in all the large Motion Picture Theaters. I will ship you a fine Machine all complete and ready to give a Motion Picture Show the minute you receive it. REMEMBER, THERE WILL BE NO DELAY.

A Real Motion Picture Show In Your Own Home

Remember, this is a genuine Motion Picture Machine and the motion pictures are clear, sharp and distinct.

The Motion Picture Machine is finely constructed and carefully put together by skilled workmen. It is made of Russian Metal, and is operated by a finely constructed mechanism, has a beautiful finish. The projecting lenses are carefully ground and adjusted, triple polished, standard double extra reflector, throwing a ray of light many feet. The light is produced by a safety carbide generator, such as is used on the largest automobiles. This throws a dazzling white light of 500 candle-power on the screen.

It is not a toy, it is a solidly constructed and durable Motion Picture Machine. The mechanism is exceedingly simple and is readily operated by the most inexperienced. The pictures shown by this marvelous Motion Picture Machine are not the common, crude and lifeless Magic Lantern variety, but are life-like photographic reproductions of actual scenes, places, and people, which never tire its audiences. This Motion Picture Machine has caused a rousing enthusiasm wherever it is used.

How You Can Get This Great Motion Picture Machine—Read! Read! Read!

Wouldn't Sell for $25.00.

I received your Moving Picture Machine O.K. about four days ago. I find it is just as you advertised it and I thank you very much. I wouldn't sell my machine for $25.00, as I couldn't get another like it.—Orin D. Hubbard, 515 So. Montana Street, Butte, Mont.

Worth Reading.

My big brother and I showed the Moving Pictures for the first time tonight. I think they are as good as the regular Moving Picture shows, and if more boys would take up your offer instead of paying five or ten cents at a theatre they could have them at their own home with less expense and more fun in running the machine themselves. The Outfit reached me in the same condition as your offer stated and perfectly satisfactory.—Paul Lyon, 1128 Springfield Ave., Irvington, N J

Parents Pleased.

I received the Moving Picture Machine all right and I am very much pleased with it. My parents are also very much pleased with the machine.—John H. Tyler, Jr., 444 6½ Street, Washington, D. C.

Pictures Show Very Clear

I received my Moving Picture Machine and it works fine. All my friends like it very much. I could not get another like it anywhere else. It shows the pictures very clear and some night I am going to give an entertainment. I would not part with it for any money. I am more than satisfied with it. All my friends like it and I asked them why they did not send for one.—James McCarthy, 4815 Dearborn Street, E.E., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Would Not Take $25.00.

I received your Great Moving Picture Machine and I think it is a nice Machine. I would not take $25.00 for it. I received it Tuesday and now I am writing to tell you how it is.—Joseph T. Dodd, 808 No. Spring St., Baltimore, Md.

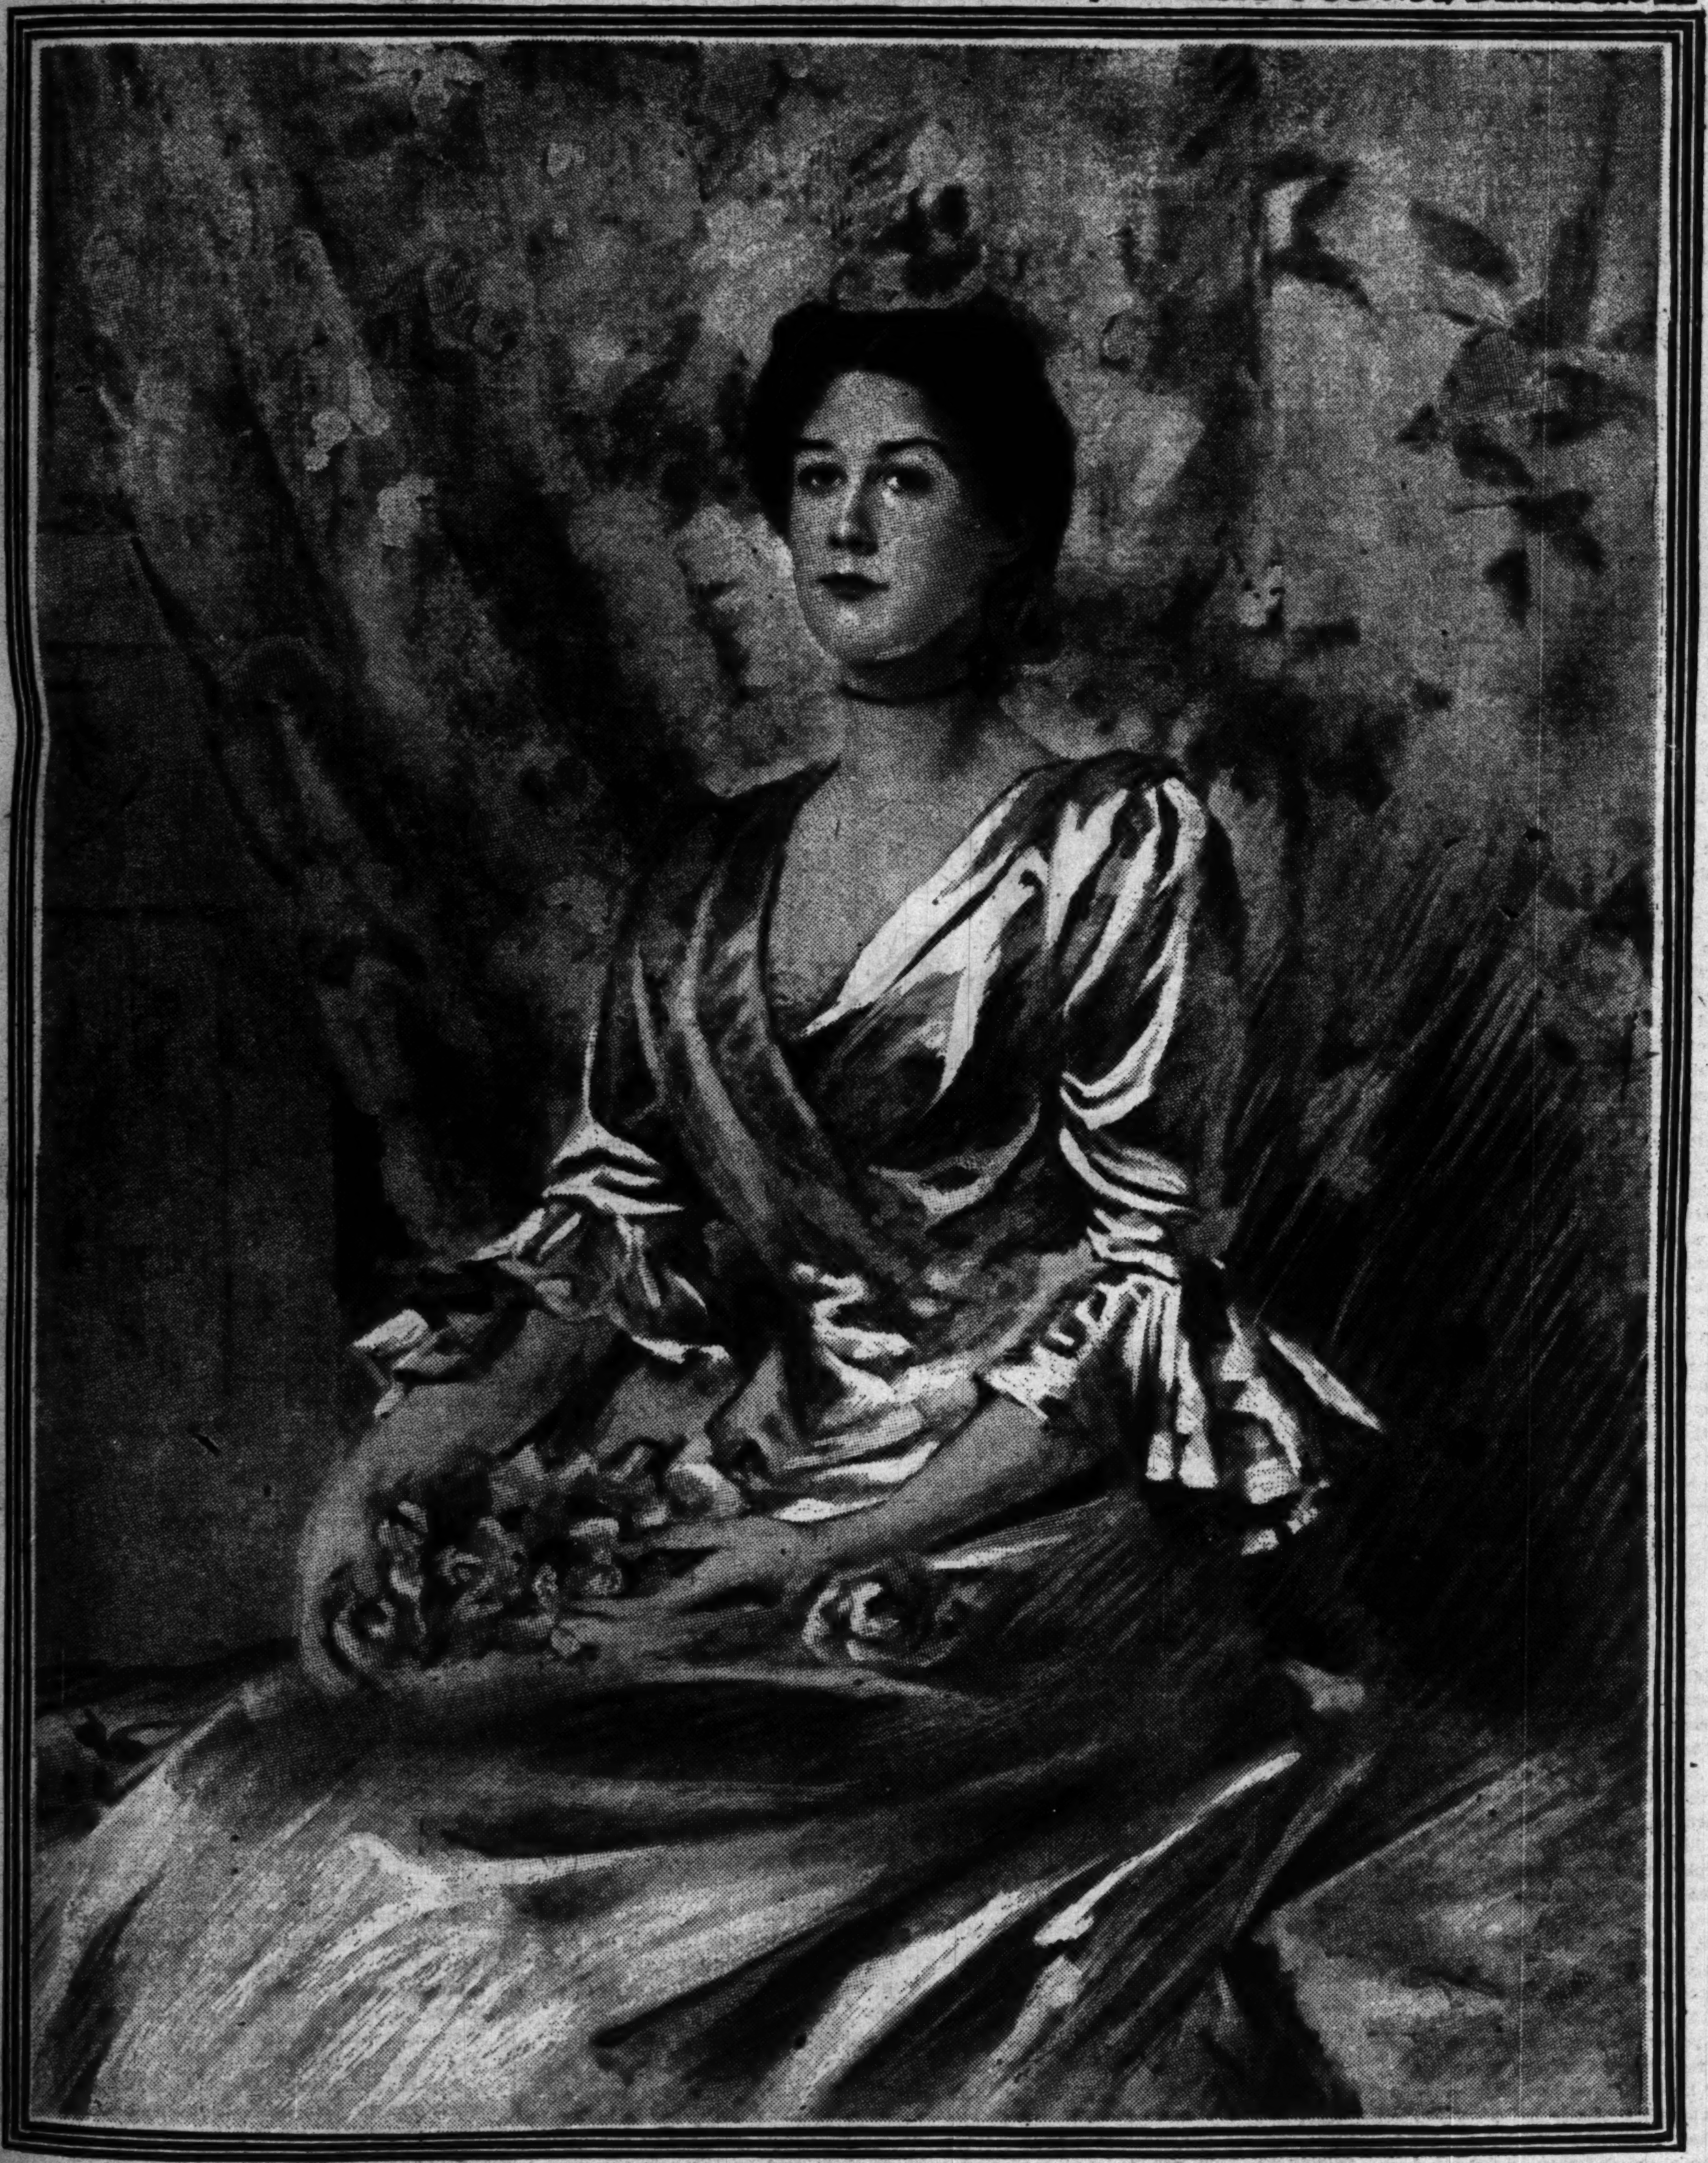
The PORTRAIT of a WOMAN : by James Jebusa Shannon



BY LOUISE JAMES BARGELT.

"The Portrait of a Woman," by James Jebusa Shannon, R. A., 1909; A. R. A., 1897; R. H. A. (1863—).

SINCE art's incipiency here in America there have always been a certain number of young American artists who, crossing the Atlantic for the purposes of study, became utterly enamored with the fog enshrouded British isle and made London the home of their artistic inspiration and successes. Benjamin West, Robert Leslie, and John Singer Sargent are some of the best known examples, and to their number may be added Shannon's name. Shannon was born in Auburn, just out of New York, but at 16 went to South Kensington, London, to complete his art education.

Shannon's successes commenced early. He first attracted notice by a portrait of one of the prettiest of Queen Victoria's maids of honor. Queen Victoria later ordered that the painting should be exhibited at the Royal academy, and from then on each year the young artist continued to exhibit his pictures at its annual exhibitions.

Shannon is primarily a portrait painter, and he has taken many gold medals at Paris, Berlin, Vienna, and Rome. He won a first medal at the Chicago exhibition for his full length portrait of Mrs. Charlesworth.

He has done a few pictures which appealed purely through their pictorial qualities and one well known painting called "La Guerre" is distinguished for its strong emotional note. But in the main he has conserved his energies for the purpose of portraits.

He was an original member of the new English Art club and is now president of the Society of Portrait Painters.

In the present painting there is a delightfully delicate touch in the deep pink of the roses against the pale cream shading of the rest of the canvas. She is charming, as are the majority of his women, and he has caught and held enchained a certain intangible depth of spirit and feeling in the depths of the darkly lashed eyes.

Another famous painting will be reproduced next Sunday.

PARTNERS for PROGRESS by Berton Braley

Which Only Goes to Show That You Can't Teach an Old Dog New Tricks.

OLD Mr. Lewis ran a gents' furnishing stôre on Halsted street. Or, to be more accurate, he kept such a store—"ran" is not the apt verb in this instance, because Old Mr. Lewis was too slow to run anything. It was a country store in the heart of the city, the sort of shop which urbanites laugh at in the rural districts, unaware how many there are in their huge and congested community.

In the windows—which had none of the clarity that comes from plate and much washing—were a few faded shirts, an open box of collars, some very tired looking hats, and half a dozen pairs of teamsters' gloves. A sign advertising overalls hung over the doorway, and the dog, whose iron grip on the pictured pair could not tear them, was about the only really active looking object about the place. Some enterprising collar company had sent Old Mr. Lewis one of these plate glass boxes in which collars are exhibited outside a store, but inasmuch as the old man hadn't changed the collars it contained for four years, they were both dingy and out of date.

When a customer lifted the funny old latch and pushed the door open, a bell tinkled in the back of the store, Old Mr. Lewis laid down his book with a sigh, struggled a little rheumatically to his feet from his old wooden rocker with the newspapers in the seat, and shuffled out of the warmth of the stove to greet the intruder.

"What is it, please?" Old Mr. Lewis would ask rather reproachfully, and when the customer stated his wants the aged merchant would sigh again and proceed mournfully to search for the desired articles.

When Henry Murphy strode into this store one afternoon in midwinter, the bell jangled with much more than its usual vigor, and there was something extremely vital and energetic in the way Henry stamped on the floor and slapped his hands against his sides as Old Mr. Lewis came out to meet him.

"What—" began the old man, but Henry didn't wait for him.

"Want a clerk?" he demanded. "I'm looking for a place. Been working in a meat market but got tired of the job. Always wanted to get into furnishings; and I know about 'em, too. Read the Haberdashers' Guide and everything. Might get a job in a big store but would rather start in a place like this and learn. Salary no object to start. What do you say?"

"No-n-no-no," stammered Old Mr. Lewis, nearly overwhelmed, unaggressive little soul, by the tremendous nerve of the young chap; "no-no, I do not want a clerk."

Henry Murphy looked about the dusty shop. He grinned.

"Pop," he said, "you're wrong. You do need a clerk, and I'm him. I'll only charge you five bones a week if you'll give me 20 per cent on the extra profit I bring you. Whaddy yuh say?"

"I—I—I don't know. I think I'll—"

"All right, it's all settled, I'll start right now," Henry Murphy decided, and throwing off his coat and hat he plunged into a welter of boxes which was piled every which way on one of the counters, and began opening them up, noting their contents, and piling them in more orderly fashion. The vigor of his attack raised a cloud of dust, and Murphy, grabbing a sample shirt that hung from the wall and that was yellowed with time, started dusting.

Old Mr. Lewis gazed at him for a few moments open mouthed, and was about to shuffle back resignedly to his chair and his book, with the thought that perhaps, after all, this young man would give him more time to read, when Murphy spoke up.

"Pop," he said, "you just stand here and tell me what this junk is and when you got it and what it cost and we'll get some order out of the chaos and may be we can have a sale and clear out the stuff that's been here too long. Whaddyuhsay?"

Inasmuch as Murphy followed this question by bombarding the old man with dozens of others as he went through the stock like a hurricane, there was no chance for protest. Old Mr. Lewis stood meekly by and gave his new clerk—who had evidently hired himself—what information he could.

In the midst of the unaccustomed activity the door tinkled and in came a rosy cheeked and blue eyed girl of 19 or so.

Murphy dropped a box he was lifting and wiping his dusty hands hastily on the faded shirt, came forward with a smile.

"How do you do," he said, "what can I sell you today?"

"Not a thing," the young lady replied. "I just dropped in for a few minutes to say 'hello' to uncle. How did you ever persuade him to hire you? I've been trying for the longest time to get him to get a clerk. I've even offered to clerk evenings myself when I'm not at the office. But he always said there wasn't enough business to pay a clerk and he wouldn't let me help unless I took pay."

"Well, maybe there isn't business enough now," admitted Henry, "but there will be. Pop and I are going to turn this place into a regular hive of industry, ain't we, Pop?"

The old man blinked a little and then stammered:

"I—I guess so." But his eyes strayed longingly back to where his precious book lay open on the chair arm.

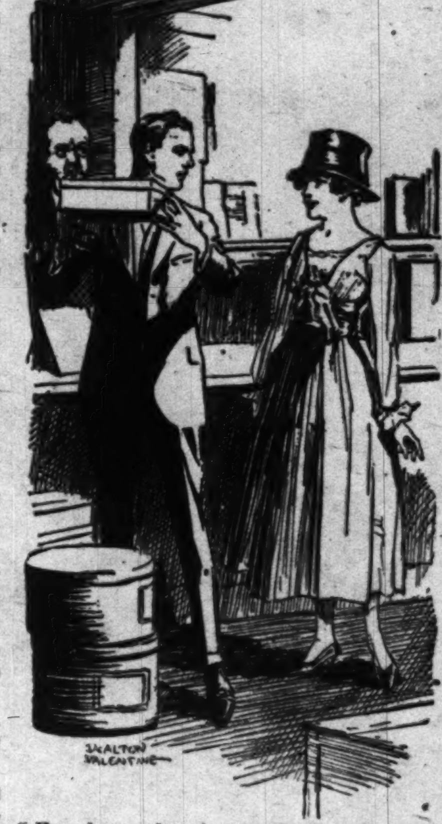
"I'm glad," said the girl, "it would be fun to see you make a real store of this, uncle, instead of just a place to stick around in."

"If that spare evenings offer of yours still holds good," ventured Murphy, "I'd like to date you up for a few of them here at the store. Pop's got some stuff for women here and you'd be a lot of help in arranging stock and suggesting things. Will you come?"

"Do you mind, uncle?" asked the girl, her face flushing pink at the eagerness in the young man's voice.

"N-no," Old Mr. Lewis conceded, "if Mr.——"

"Murphy," supplied the clerk, "Henry Murphy."



"How do you do, what can I sell you today?"

"If Mr. Murphy thinks it would be wise. P-perhaps I've been a little unprogressive. A—a man gets old, Mary."

"Pooh, you're not old, uncle," said Mary; "you just think you are. You wait till Mr. Murphy and I get this stock fixed up—the way I've been asking you to do all this time. You'll have things so up to date you'll feel like a 2 year old."

Old Mr. Lewis was a slow reader. Yet he didn't care for literature that was brief. Or perhaps it is better to say that he never had time for reading of that sort. For the reason that he read books in sets. Twenty years or so before this tale opens a book agent had entered the shop and sold Old Mr. Lewis a set of twenty volumes called the "World's Greatest Orations." Old Mr. Lewis didn't want it, but he bought it, exactly as he bought a good deal of stock that he didn't want. Then, being a thrifty, though unprogressive soul, he decided that to get his money's worth out of the set he had to read it. Therefore he started volume I. and read all the way through. It took him two years, but he finished. During the period he was plodding through the "Orations" no agent could interest him in any other reading, but the man who was lucky enough to reach him just as he concluded them sold him a ten volume set of something else.

And so it had gone through the years. The old man had absorbed half a dozen subscription sets from page 1 to page 19500, and in the thick of these tremendous reading tasks had no time to bother with lighter or snappier stuff. Also he had grown, after the second set, rather to enjoy his reading, and at the time Henry Murphy broke in upon his solitude he was on volume II. of another monumental work. And he was trying to make a new record for himself on the perusal.

But the advent of Henry seemed likely to interfere with this ambition. Henry was efficient, Henry was industrious, but Henry would insist on discussing business, and suggesting improvements, and asking information—and occasionally advice—until it seemed a body couldn't get to read at all, scarcely. So thought Old Mr. Lewis.

Still, when the old man surveyed his store's record after the first month of Henry Murphy—assisted an indefinite number of evenings by Mary—his eyes couldn't help growing. He found that he had made exactly 50 per cent more than in any similar period before, and was on the way to double that the coming month. And he found, therefore, that Henry Murphy meant not an expense but an income.

"Well, Pop," said Henry, as the old man pored over the statement. "Pretty nice, hey? O, I tell you, Mary and me and you are some little partnership when we get started. And we've just begun. Next month we'll throw out a lot of these junk showcases and get some new ones. I know how you can buy them on payments and we sure need 'em. And say, Pop, let's can the tinkle-tinkle bell. It's all right for the backwoods, but this is the big town and it don't sound good. Looks too much as if we weren't doing any business. And I move we take down the overall sign outside. There ain't much money in overalls, anyway, and it makes us look like a hick store.

Old Mr. Lewis demurred, but the bell and the signs came down. And in due course of events the new counters and cases arrived and were filled with fresh stock selected by Henry Murphy. The business grew, and though Murphy waited on as many customers as he could, Old Mr. Lewis found he had less and less time for reading or rumination, because there was too much patronage for one man to handle. Thus it happened that the old man acquired a tremulous sort of briskness in pale imitation of his clerk, and though the stock had been so rearranged and altered that he had to ask Murphy the location of nearly everything, he managed to sell a goodly amount of stock himself.

"Pop," declared Murphy one day, "you need a vacash. So suppose you run out to Mary's father's place for three or four days and I'll handle the store until you get back. Whaddyuhsay?"

Old Mr. Lewis, after the first few struggles against Murphy's schemes, had learned that he might as well give in early while the giving in was good. So he went to visit his brother for the first time in twenty years.

When he walked into his store on his return he rubbed his old eyes. Changes enough there had been, but none so radical as this. The old stove was hidden back of a grilled steel screen. In the five days of his absence everything in the store but the stock had had several coats of paint. And in the place where his old arm chair used to sit there stood a brilliantly polished glass and oak cashier's kiosk, with Mary Lewis smiling through the grillwork at him, as she made change from a glittering cash register.

"Well, Pop, whaddyuhsay?" queried Henry Murphy.

"I—I don't know I——"

"Class, class," said Henry. "I've persuaded Mary to join us in giving modernness and distinction to this emporium. Aren't you glad to welcome her to the flossiest little store on Halsted street?"

Old Mr. Lewis nodded mutely. Henry Murphy always had that effect upon him. He was even more mute when Henry drew from under a counter a new suit of clothes which he made Old Mr. Lewis put on, and when the shabby old $11 garb was thrown into the discard by Henry and the old man surveyed himself in the new pierglass he scarcely recognized the natty figure in the reflection which faced him.

Old Mr. Lewis had misgivings when Henry persuaded him to write many checks for the remodeling and rejuvenating of his store. But as he watched the profit sheet take care of these expenditures and provide for others, month after month, he ceased to groan. He became alert, well groomed, seemingly twenty years younger, he played up to the part his increasing business thrust upon him, and the subscription set gathered dust in his two rooms back of the store, from which even Henry could not persuade him to move.

It was after about six months or more had passed that Henry Murphy exploded his little bomb under Old Mr. Lewis.

"Pop," he said, "Mary and I"—he patted the cashier with his big hand—"are going to be married. And we've about decided that it's time you retired. You need the rest. Now that doesn't mean you're going to be thrown out or anything like that—we'll pay you your share of what the firm makes, and it won't be a small share, either. The way things are going now you'll have enough to join a golf club and play golf with John D. Rockefeller and Andy Carnegie. You can look in now and then and see how business is going, but there's no use wearing yourself out here when a good live clerk can do your work and let you out of it. Whaddyuhsay?"

Old Mr. Lewis blinked uncertainly for a moment. Then he said:

"I—I'd rather you'd buy me out. I'll sell for 20 per cent over my original investment before you came in."

"But that's foolish, uncle," protested Mary. "Henry and I would be unfair if we paid you as little as that. Keep your interest in the firm and Henry and I—"

"No—no, thank you," said Old Mr. Lewis. "I—I'd rather sell out. I—I have a little plan—"

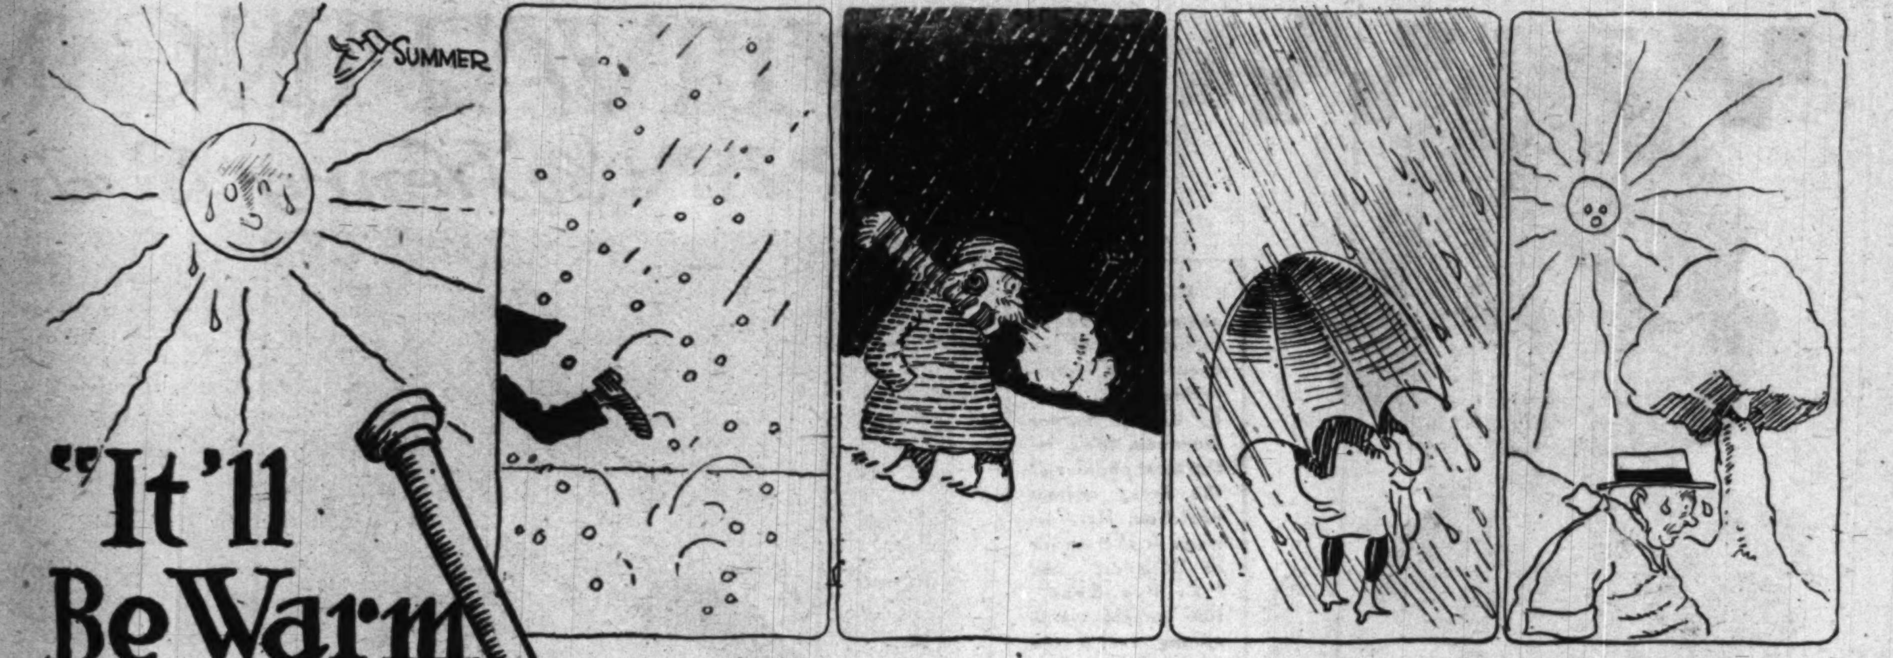
"Just as you say, Pop!" agreed Henry Murphy, "just as you say. I can raise the money to buy you out in a week and I'll do it."

Henry Murphy, Incorporated, does a flourishing business and Henry and his clever wife now own three stores on Halsted street. They are very happy, but probably no more so than Old Mr. Lewis, who took the money Henry Murphy paid him and bought out a little store a few blocks further down the street.

In the windows—which have none of the clarity that comes from plate and much washing—are a few faded shirts, an open box of collars, some tired looking hats, and half a dozen pairs of teamster's gloves. Outside is a sign advertising overalls. When a customer enters a bell tinkles in the rear, Old Mr. Lewis rises a little rheumatically to his feet from the old wooden rocker with the newspapers in the seat, and shuffles out from the warmth of the stove to greet the intruder.

"What is it, please?" Old Mr. Lewis asks, rather reproachfully, and sighs when the customer states his wants. And when he is through searching the jumbled stock mournfully, and has handed the patron his change from an old fashioned till, Old Mr. Lewis shuffles back to his place by the stove, and settles comfortably into the chair and resumes his book.

For though Henry Murphy and his wife point out to him that the acceptance of their proposition would have given him a chance to read all the time, Old Mr. Lewis knows that it's the occasional interruptions which render the reading enjoyable. Besides, it's his own place, and when he unlocks the front door in the morning and locks it at night he reads anew the sign on the glass, "No Help Wanted," and chuckles contentedly. Which he has every right to do, considering that his trade pays the rent, supplies all an old bachelor needs to eat, and meets the installments on the encyclopedia—in the perusal of which Old Mr. Lewis has now reached volume VIII—Eva to Fra."



"It'll Be Warm Again Next Summer"

Predicts Oney Fred Sweet After a Brief Occupation of the Weather Man's Chair

SOME day when you are passing the postoffice building look up and notice where the windows in the dome are round. That's where the weather man hangs out. In order to reach him I had to take two elevators and go as high as what in other buildings would be the fourteenth floor.

When I saw the weather man I couldn't believe I was really in his presence. He let me come over and sit in his chair at his desk and look out the windows on to the snow covered roofs below.

"Yes, I'm the weather man all right," insisted Mr. Cox. "What did you expect—an old fellow with whiskers and horn rimmed glasses looking through a big telescope?"

"O, I knew you didn't actually make the storms up here or anything like that," I hastened. "I don't know what I really did expect, but I'm here now and I'll be only too glad to coöperate with you in every way. If I get stuck on any of these weather problems, you help me out; if you get stuck I'll help you. That's fair, isn't it?"

"Look here," said Mr. Cox, "I've been a weather man ever since 1885. What do you know about the game?"

"Well," I says,

"'Evening red and morning gray
Will set the traveler on his way;
But evening gray and morning red
Will bring down rain upon his head.'"

"I see," mused Mr. Cox. "So that's your qualification?"

"Nope," I retorted. "Here's another one:

"'When the wind is in the north
The skillful fisher goes not forth;
When the wind is in the east
'Tis good for either man or beast;
When the wind is in the south
It blows the flies in the fish's mouth;
When the wind is in the west,
There it is the very best.'"

"My, my!" exclaimed the veteran weather man; "you are just full of those old saws, aren't you? Well, surely you would be a most valuable assistant. You think you would be interested in the work?"

"What is of more interest than weather?" I philosophized. "Isn't it the first subject people talk about when they meet? What is there of more importance to comfort, health, prosperity, and even life itself? Hasn't it always been a subject for prophecy? Didn't Matthew say in the Bible: 'When it is evening, ye say, It will be fair weather, for the sky is red; and in the morning, It will be foul weather tomorrow, for the sky is red and lowering?' Shakespeare, too, was a weather man. Don't you remember: 'For raging winds blow up incessant showers; and when the rage allays, the rain begins'? And, coming on down to Longfellow's time, there is the line in 'Evangeline': 'Cold would the weather be, for thick was the fur of the foxes.' Of course, in those days forecasting wasn't down to the exact science it is today."

"It's not an exact science today," corrected Mr. Cox. "It's empirical. There are so many elements which take part in results. Our observations are made almost entirely near the surface of the earth and not up where the storms brew. We have kite stations in Nebraska now and we will have more. Progress, of course, has been wonderful. We are constantly experimenting, constantly discovering something new. The territory for which we forecast here is a big one, you realize—extending, as it does, from the lakes on west to Montana and Wyoming."

A Just Cause for Suicide

"And you don't count much on the 'old saws' nor put much faith in the prediction of old women who know it is going to rain because they feel their rheumatism?"

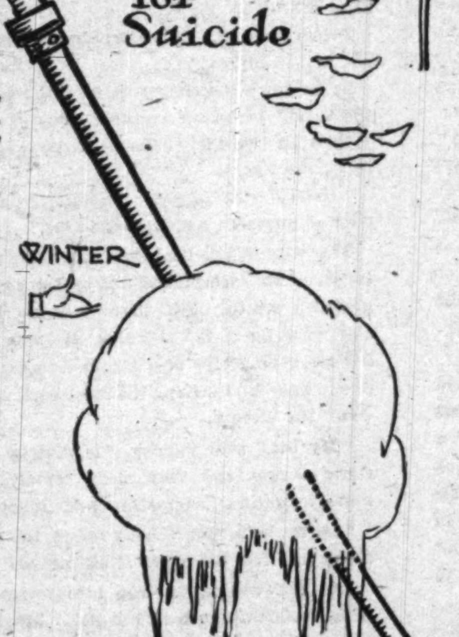
"Many of the 'old saws' are based upon observation," said Mr. Cox, "and as for the old woman with rheumatism, well of course rain mostly accompanies areas of low barometer. There is air in a diseased organism, and the least pressure from outside causes a response on the part of the air in the blood in these organisms. But the old woman's aches are not infallible. Sometimes we have falling pressure and don't get rain. However, it's my lunch time now; I'll leave you to take care of the office while I'm gone."

There are several offices in the weather bureau quarters—fifteen employés in all who were working away on charts and things the meanings of which were difficult for me to grasp. Leaning back in Prof. Cox's office chair, I looked out of one of the round windows and thought about all the poetic lines and epigrams that had to do with the weather business: "Every cloud has a silver lining," and "Into each life some rain must fall," and "Wait 'til the sun shines, Nellie." All of a sudden the telephone rang.

"What is it?" I asked, regulating my voice into what I figured was a weather man pitch.

It was some one calling up from a saloon miles away out on the south side. "I want you to decide a bet," said the voice. "There's a hundred dollars up on it. Does wind affect a thermometer?"

"Which side are you betting on?" I answered back, stalling for time. There was something the matter with the phone.



"It Was a Dark and Stormy Night"

"Which side are you on?" I repeated, in louder tones.

"What did you say?" came the voice, impatiently.

"I'll tell you," I answered. "The regular Weather Man is out. A hundred dollars is too much money to bet on a thing like that, anyway. Call up in half an hour."

I suppose I might have explained that I was just working in the office temporarily in order to secure data for a technical scientific article, but it was too much trouble explaining over the phone. I went over to the bookcase and took down one of the books.

There were pages and pages in the book that were awful dry reading, but I came to a place in it which explained in a way why novelists always start a chapter about murder with the description, "'Twas a dark and stormy night." "Atmospheric conditions," said the book, "which are registered by a low barometer are productive of the various manifestations of active disorder tabulated under the heads of crime and disorder. Suicide is very excessive during atmospheric pressure somewhat below the normal. On the other hand, drunkenness is less prevalent under such conditions, and attention, as indicated by perfection of mental computations, is either more perfect or greater precaution is taken to guard against error."

Touching further on the effect of weather influences, the book went on to say that on days when the weather in London was particularly depressing, in the Bank of England certain sets of books an error in which would be cumulative and produce disastrous results later on were locked up and the clerks set at tasks less intricate and important in character. Experience had taught those in charge that the percentage of errors increased under such climatic conditions and that it was a saving of money to yield to them.

Mr. Cox returned before I had gotten any farther in the book. He said I had better hurry back from lunch as it was probable he would have to do some testifying in a court case that afternoon.

"Whadda ya mean, testify in court?" I asked, in surprise.

"Is it possible," inquired Mr. Cox, "you do not realize that evidence as to the weather is a factor in a great variety of cases, both civil and criminal? The civil cases are largely personal injury, damage to perishable goods by freezing or rain, and loss by fire. The criminal cases are usually confined to murder trials.

"Our records have probably been used in the Chicago courts 400 times within the last ten years," continued Mr. Cox. "For instance, not long ago a woman alleged that she had been pitched through the open window of a car. It was claimed that on account of the cold, raw weather the woman was endeavoring to shut a window as the car reached a curve and she was suddenly thrown headlong into the street. The railway asked for the weather records, which showed that the day in question was warm, sunny, and pleasant, and that there was no occasion for shutting a window.

"Weather bureau records have figured in some of the most notable murder trials. I was called once by the defense in a well known Chicago murder trial in order to show that the night the victim disappeared was dark and threatening. It was expected that this evidence would contradict that given by two witnesses for the prosecution who testified that they, although distant several hundred feet, saw the accused take the victim into a factory. In fact, I refer to the Luetgert trial. In another murder trial evidence as to temperature only was introduced by the prosecution. It was desired to show that it was possible to keep the body of the murdered man for a month in midwinter without attracting attention. It was shown that the weather certainly was cold enough, as the temperature was near zero during the entire period."

Mr. Cox at this juncture told me it was my lunch time and I took the elevator down to the street, my mind engrossed with the new work. When I returned I guess the weather man noticed I had lost a good deal of my morning's enthusiasm.

"What's wrong?" asked Mr. Cox, glancing up from a report which showed it was 70 below in Alaska. "Out with it—why the long face?"

"The work is all right," I answered. "Your laboratory is the whole out of doors and it's all interesting, but I like to relax when I leave an office."

"Well?" encouraged Mr. Cox, with rising inflection.

"Well," I explained, "while I was out this noon I met three acquaintances. One of them greeted me with 'Nice day, ain't it?' The second one said, 'Little warmer today, eh?' and the third one remarked, 'It ain't so cold as it is, was it?' You realize yourself that it would be that way right along, and if there's anything I hate, outside of work hours, it is to 'talk shop.'"

CAPTIVATING MARY

By Henry Sydnor Harri

Herewith is presented the third installment of an absorbingly interesting new serial by Henry Sydnor Harrison, one of the most popular of the living writers of fiction. Mr. Harrison is the author of "Queed" and "V. V.'s Eyes," two novels which sprang into the lead of the best sellers at the time of their publication and held that lead for a long period. It has a more ingenious plot than any of his other novels; it is written with that easy grace which has made the author famous; and it will hold your attenton to the end of the last installment.

SYNOPSIS.

Aged Elbert Carstairs, capitalist, enstranged from his wife in his old age, longs for the companionship of his daughter Mary, who lives with Mrs. Carstairs at Hunston-on-the-Hudson. The child refuses to come and visit him. Mrs. Carstairs refuses to force her to do so, and hence old Carstairs engages Larry Varney to take the Carstairs yacht up the Hudson and kidnap Mary, who Varney believes is but 12. Varney gets the help of Peter Maginnis in the venture. Three days later the start is made. On the way up the river the name of the yacht, Cypriani, is erased to throw reporters off the track. Just opposite Hunston the adventurers discover a young man, apparently dead, floating down stream in a boat. They find he is not dead, however.

Politics and Other Matters.

"BUT God save us!" murmured the young man. "Can't a man die these days without a yacht full of anxious persons steaming up and clamping a light against his eyeball?"

"But can't we do something for you?" asked Varney. "That's what we are here for."

The young man lay still and thought a moment, which he appeared to do with some difficulty.

"To be frank," his voice came out of the dark, rather clearer now, "you can. Give me a match, will you?"

Varney laughed; he produced and handed over a little box of them. Lying flat on his back in the boat, the young man fished a cigaret out of his pocket hurriedly and stuck it between his lips. The next minute the spurt of a match cut the air. The two in the ship's boat caught a brief, flashing glimpse of him—thin white hands raised to thin white face.

"Something of a poseur, aren't you?" suggested Peter pleasantly. "What's your rôle tonight?"

There followed a fractional pause.

"That of a vagrant student of manners and customs," answered the colorless voice. "Therefore, to imitate your frankness, you interest me greatly."

"Those who study manners," said Peter, "should learn them after a while. Why didn't you sing out, when you saw us hustling to get out a boat, and tell us not to bother, as you were only playing dead for the lark of the thing?"

"Singing, whether out or in, is an art at which I can claim small proficiency. But tell me the time, will you? I seem to have hocked my watch."

Peter laughed a little ruefully. "It's seven thirty-six—no more and no less."

The young man sat up with an effort and uncertainly gathered up his oars.

"You'll excuse me, then?" he said. "I have an engagement at seven thirty, and, as you see, there is little time to make it."

"We gave you a fight," said Peter. "Why not reciprocate? Who the devil are you?"

"I am a part of all that I have met," said the stranger, pulling off. "I am wily, wandering Ulysses. I am——"

"That will do," said Peter sharply. He bowed gravely and rowed away. Peter looked after him for some time in rather impressive silence.

"What d'you suppose was the matter with the beggar, anyway? He wasn't drunk."

"Didn't you notice his wrists when he held them up to light his cigaret? Full of little scars."

Peter whistled. "So morphine is his trouble, is it? Listen!"

From down the river rose a faint roar, like the sound of many voices a long way off. While the two men listened it subsided and then rose again.

"Hello!" said Varney. "Look at your student of manners and customs now."

The man in the boat was still plainly discernible, his face picked out by the moon in greenish white. But there was no longer any lethargy in his manner. He was bending his back to his best stroke—an excellent one it was—and driving his light bark rapidly down the stream.

"My bet," said Varney, "is that he hears those shouts, and they mean something to him—something interesting and important."

"Larry, be a sport! Let's follow this thing along and find out what it all means."

"O, I'm willing to drop into town for a little reconnaissance if you like. Maybe we can pick up something that will help us in our business."

"Spoken like a scholar and a gentleman. One minute while I get on my clothes. O, by the way! Er—this new—robe of mine doesn't look like a Mother Hubbard, does it?"

"In my opinion," said Varney, "two things could not well be more utterly unlike."

Peter was back in five minutes, clothed and in his right mind. His falling foot hit the center line of the gig with a thump and they shot away toward the town wharf.

They bade the boat wait their signal in the shadows a little upstream and jumped out upon the old and rotting landing. A street ran straight before them up a steep hill and into the heart of the town, and they took it, guided by a burst of still distant laughter and hoarse shouts. Toiling up the evil sidewalk, they looked curiously at the town which was to engage their attention for the next day or so. Over everything hung that vague air of dejection and moral decay which is so hard to define and so easy to detect. The street was lit with feeble electric lights which did little more than nullify the moon. Grass grew at its pleasure through the broken brick pavement, and even in that dimness it was evident that the white wing department had been taking a long vacation.

Varney's eye took in everything. It occurred to him that this was a most extraordinary place for the family of the exquisite and well fixed Elbert Carstairs to live. Hard on the heels of that came another thought, and he stopped.

"What's the matter?" said Peter.

"We simply mustn't get mixed up in any doings here, you know. Can't afford it. Whatever is going on, our rôle must be that of quiet onlookers only. Remember that."

"Quiet onlookers it is. Hello! Did you see that?"

"What?"

"Old duck in a felt hat walking behind us a good distance off—I'd heard him for some time. He stopped when we stopped, and when I turned then I was just in time to see him go skipping up the side street."

"Well, what of it?"

"Not a thing. I'm interested in the sights of the town, that's all. Listen to those hoodlums, will you?"

In the middle of that block rose a great public building of florid and hideous architecture, absurdly expensive for so small a town, and running fast to seed. On the corner ahead, at the crest of the slope, stood the handsomest and most prosperous looking building they had yet seen. Its long side was cut by many windows, all brilliantly lit up, and above the lower tier ran the gold lettered legend: "Wines and Liquors. The Ottoman. D. Ryan."

A roar of laughter, mingled with various derisive cries, broke out just then, now from very near. The next minute the two men reached the brow of the hill and both stopped involuntarily, arrested by the tableau which met their gaze beyond.

They stood on the upper side of a little rectangular "square" at the lower edge of which, some fifty yards away, were gathered possibly thirty or forty jostling and noisy men. Facing them, standing on a carriage block at the curb, stood a cool little man obviously engaged in making a speech. The commonness of the men and the rough joviality of their mood were the more accentuated by the supreme dignity of the orator. He was a small man with pink cheeks and eyeglasses, beautifully made and still more beautifully dressed; and for all their boisterous "jollying" his auditors appeared rather to like him than the contrary.

The men from the Cypriani crossed the square and came up with the merrymaking Hunstonians. Varney's gaze went round the circle of faces and saw inefficiency, shiftlessness, and failure everywhere stamped upon them. Suddenly his wandering eye was arrested by a face of quite a different sort. Directly opposite stood the eccentric young man of the rowboat, watching the show out of listless eyes whose expression never changed.

"On that horse block," said Peter, raising his voice to carry above an outburst of catcalls and allegedly humorous comment, "stands the Hunston reform movement. Giving 'em a ripping talk, too—all out of Bryce, Mill, and the other fellows."

But at that moment, as luck had it, the oratory came to a sudden end. A sporting bull pup, malevolently released by some one in the crowd, danced up to the horse block, barking joyfully, and made a lightning dive for the spellbinder's legs. The spellbinder dexterously sidestepped; the dog's aim was diverted from that fleshy portion of the thigh which his fancy had selected; but his snapping teeth closed firmly in the tail of the pretty light gray coat, which the little man wore rather long according to the mode of the day. And there he swung, kicking and snarling, squirming and grunting, in the liveliest fashion imaginable.

Merry pandemonium broke out among the onlookers; they howled with shameless delight. It was hardly a pleasant scene to witness, though redeemed by the little orator's gameness. His face, when he took in what had happened to him, slowly turned the color of a sheet of white paper. With indescribable dignity he descended from his rostrum, carrying the dog along, and walked out into the ring. In front of a tall, loose jointed, scraggly mustached fellow he paused and stared him in the eye with steady fixity.

"T-t-take your d-d-damned d-dog off me, Hackley," he said, stuttering badly, but cool.

But Hackley backed away, shaking his head and bellowing with laughter. In an ecstasy of delight the onlookers began pressing more closely about the men, narrowing the circle. And then it was that Peter, quite forgetting his rôle of quiet onlooker and unable for his life to restrain himself longer, put his shoulder to the ring and broke a vigorous way through. He touched the little orator on the arm.

"No need to trouble the gentleman," Varney heard him say pleasantly. "Just hold the position a moment, please." And, so saying, he swung back his foot.

It landed with an impact that was loud and not agreeable to the ear. The dog dropped with a frightful howl and, yelping madly, fled. Simultaneously cries arose about the ringside, and the dog's owner, an alcoholic blaze in his eye, spat bitterly into his two palms and headed straight for Peter.

"What in the blank-blank d'yer mean by kickin' my blank dog, you blank-blankety-blank, you?" he inquired.

"I meant that he was behaving as no dog should," explained Peter, "and the same remark applies to you."

He was not without skill at fisticuff, was Hackley. With the speed of a tiger he let out first his left fist, then his right, at Peter Maginnis' head. But instead of arriving there they collided with a forearm which had about the resiliency of a two foot stone wall. Simultaneously Peter released his famous left hook—had of the Bronx Barman at $10 a lesson—and the fight was over.

Mr. Hackley's head struck first, and struck passionately; men picked him up and bore him limply from the field. And Peter, a tiny spot of red in the corner of his right eye, spoke thus to the horseshoe of watching faces:

"You're a devil of a fine gang of redhot sports, aren't you, boys? A whole regiment of you with no more decency than to pick on one man like this. I come from a white man's country where this kind of thing doesn't go—thank God! And any man who has formed a bad opinion of my manners and my general style of conversation can just step out into the ring and let me explain my system to him."

But nobody accepted that invitation. Possibly the rub was that no one cared to see that left hook work again, at his own expense, or to encourage any trouble to come athwart his quiet career. At any rate there were a few mutterings here and there, and then some one sang out:

"None for mine, mister! I ain't took out my life insurance yet."

There was a general laugh at this, and with that laugh Peter knew that all hope of more fighting was gone. He bade them a sardonic good night, hooked his arm through the orator's (who actually showed signs of an intention to resume his speech), and bore him off down the street.

The three men walked half a block in silence, and then the little stranger stopped short.

"I say," he said in a faintly unsteady voice, "I want to thank you for taking that confounded dog off me. In another minute he might have torn my coat, don't you know?"

"O, that's all right," said Peter, repressing a smile. "Kicking dogs is rather a specialty of mine, and it isn't often I get the chance to attend to two of them in one evening. I wouldn't give the episode another thought."

The little man gave a sudden fierce laugh. "O, certainly not! It's a mere bagatelle for a candidate for mayor to get a hand out like that from a gathering of voters!"

"Mayor! I beg your pardon! Of course, I didn't quite understand!"

Whereupon Peter begged to introduce himself as an ardent amateur statesman, a student of good government from New Hampshire to New Zealand and from Plato to Lincoln Steffens, who had—er—come to Hunston hoping to see something of the fight for reform. The candidate, in turn, produced cards. It became apparent that he bore the name of J. Pinkney Hare. And the upshot of the colloquy was that the two young men presently found themselves invited to call upon Candidate Hare next morning, and learn something of the situation.

"I'll be delighted," accepted Peter promptly—"delighted."

"That's settled then. Good night—and thanks awf'ly for your assistance."

He pivoted on his trim heels abruptly, and went away up the side street.

Peter turned to Varney with a faint grin. "That chap gets his first lesson in the art of being a reformer tomorrow. Curious, wasn't it?—stumbling right into the heart of the agitation an hour after we hit the town."

Varney, who had followed Peter's activities of the last five minutes with considerable disapproval, did not answer his smile.

"Give me a hasty sketch of your conception of a quiet onlooker, will you, Peter?"

"Tush!" said Peter. "Why, can't you see that this sort of thing will make the finest kind of blind? St! Here's our little friend coming back again."

"I say," called the voice of J. Pinkney Hare out of the gloom.

"Yes?" said Peter.

The candidate drew nearer.

"Our city is not plentifully supplied with amusements," he began in his somewhat pompous manner. "It just occurred to me that, in lieu of anything better, you gentlemen might care to go home with me now. I should be happy to have you—and to reciprocate your courtesy in any way within my power."

Peter, doubtless remembering the slow time he had been having on the yacht, brightened instantly and visibly.

"Why, thanks. I'll be awfully glad to come. I—er—I'm tremendously interested in your situation here, I assure you."

Then, catching a warning glance from Varney, who politely declined the invitation, he apologized to the candidate and drew his captain briefly aside.

"I'll pick up all the information I can—understand?" he murmured hurriedly. "And don't you worry. A little flurry in politics will make the best sort of a cover for you while you sneak around after Mary."

On that the two friends parted. Peter hurried on after the little reformer, and Varney, turning, continued his way down Main street toward the river and the Cypriani, not entirely displeased, after all, that Peter had found some congenial diversion for the evening.

The street was almost a desert. If the unmistakable sounds of revelry by night meant anything, nearly the whole population was behind him in the Ottoman bar. But in the middle of the next block two ragged men, standing idly and talking together, turned at the sounds of the young man's steps. One of them, revealed by a a near-by shop light, had straggly gray whiskers, vacant eyes, and a bad, foolish mouth. Both of them stared at Varney with marked intentness. He had to go quite out of his way to get round them.

"They don't see strangers every day, I take it," he thought absently, and suddenly he cast an inquiring eye at the heavens.

The night, so shining half an hour before, was becoming heavily overcast. Clouds had rolled up from nowhere and blotted out the moon. About him the night breeze was freshening with a certain significance, and now unexpectedly there fell upon his ear the faint far rumble of thunder. Decidedly, there would be rain, and that right soon. Varney quickened his pace.

At the end of that quiet block he came upon a crimson cheeked lady, somewhat past her first youth and overplump for beauty, who was engaged in putting up the shutters at her mother's grocery establishment. Glancing around casually at his approach, her glance became transfixed into a stare.

"Well!" she exclaimed in surprise and not without coquettishness—"if it ain't Mr. Ferris!"

"If it ain't Mr. Ferris—what then?" asked Varney. "For, madam, I assure you that it ain't."

The woman, taken aback by this denial, only stared and had no reply ready. But the young man, walking on, was set to thinking by this second encounter, and presently he mused: "I'm somebody's blooming double, that's what. I wonder whose."

And on that word, as though to get an answer to his speculation, he suddenly halted and turned.

He had now progressed nearly a block from the buxom young woman of the grocery. For some time, even before that meeting, he had been aware of light, steady footsteps behind him on the dark street, gaining on him. By this time they had come very near, and now as he wheeled sharply, with a vague anticipation of Peter's "old duck in a felt hat," he found himself face to face with quite a different figure—that of a thin young man whom he recognized.

"Bless us!" said Varney urbanely. "It's the student of manners again."

THE MEN OF FORTY-MILE

The late Jack London is considered by many critics the greatest writer of tales of sea and frontier life that this country has produced. His stories of Alaskan mining camps, lumberjacks, and hardy seamen are classics. This is the second of a new series of short stories by Jack London to be published by "The Tribune," one story appearing every Sunday. The series comprise the best stories London ever wrote; they are virile, red-blooded tales with the tang of sea salt in them, the icy breath of the Yukon about them, and living men and women as part and parcel of them.

WHEN Big Jim Belden ventured the apparently innocuous proposition that mush ice was "rather pecoo-liar" he little dreamed of what it would lead to. Neither did Lon McFane when he affirmed that anchor ice was even more so; nor did Bettles as he instantly disagreed, declaring the very existence of such a form to be a bugaboo.

"An' ye'd be tellin' me this," cried Lon, "after the years ye've spint in the land! An' we atin' out the same pot this many's the day!"

"But the thing's agin reason," insisted Bettles. "Look you, water's warmer than ice"—

"An' little the difference, once ye break through."

"Still it's warmer, because it ain't froze. An' you say it freezes on the bottom?"

"Only the anchor ice, David, only the anchor ice. An' have ye niver drifted along, the water clear as glass, whin suddin, belike a cloud over the sun, the mushy ice comes bubblin' up an' up, till from bank to bank an' bind to bind it's drapin' the river like a first snowfall?"

"Unh hunh! more'n once when I took a doze at the steering oar. But it allus come out the nighest side channel, an' not bubblin' up an' up."

"But with niver a wink at the helm?"

"No; nor you. It's agin reason. I'll leave it to any man!"

Bettles appealed to the circle about the stove, but the fight was on between himself and Lon McFane.

"Reason or no reason, it's the truth I'm tellin' ye. Last fall, a year gone, 't was Sitka Charley and meself saw the sight, droppin' down the riffle ye'll remember below Fort Reliance. An' regular fall weather it was—the glint o' the sun on the golden larch an' the quakin' aspens; an' the glister of light on ivery ripple; an' beyand, the winter an' the blue haze of the north comin' down hand in hand. It's well ye know the same, with a fringe to the river 'an the ice formin' thick in the eddies—an' a snap an' sparkle to the air, an' ye a-feelin' it through all yer blood, a-takin' new lease of live with ivery suck of it. 'T is then, me boy, the world grows small an' the wandther-lust lays ye by the heels.

"But it's meself as wandthers. As I was sayin', we a-paddlin', with niver a sign of ice, barrin' that by the eddies, when the Injin lifts his paddle an' sings out, 'Lon McFane! Look ye below!' So have I heard, but niver thought to see!' As ye know, Sitka Charley, like meself, niver drew first breath in the land; so the sight was new. Then we drifted, with a head over ayther side, peerin' down through the sparkly water. For the world like the days I spint with the pearlers, watchin' the coral banks a-growin' the same as so many gardens under the sea. There it was, the anchor ice, clingin' an' clusterin' to ivery rock, after the manner of the white coral.

U

"But the best of the sight was to come. Just after clearin' the tail of the riffle, the water turns quick the color of milk, an' the top of it in wee circles, as when the graylin' rise in the spring or there's a splatter of wet from the sky. 'T was the anchor ice comin' up. To the right, to the lift, as far as iver a man cud see, the water was covered with the same. An' like so much porridge it was, slickin' along the bark of the canoe, stickin' like glue to the paddles. It's many's the time I shot the selfsame riffle before, and it's many's the time after, but niver a wink of the same have I seen. 'T was the sight of a lifetime."

"Do tell!" dryly commented Bettles. "D' ye think I'd b'lieve such a yarn? I'd ruther say the glister of light 'd gone to your eyes and the snap of the air to your tongue."

"'T was me own eyes that beheld it, an' if Sitka Charley was here he'd be the lad to back me."

"But facts is facts, an' they ain't no gittin' round 'em. It ain't in the nature of things for the water furtherest away from the air to freeze first."

"But me own eyes"—

"Don't git het up over it," admonished Bettles, as the quick Celtic anger began to mount.

"Then yer not after belavin' me?"

"Sence you're so blamed forehanded about it, no; I'd b'lieve nature first, and facts."

"Is it the lie ye'd be givin' me?" threatened Lon. "Ye'd better be askin' that Siwash wife of yours. I'll lave it to her, for the truth I spake."

Bettles flared up in sudden wrath. The Irishman had unwittingly wounded him; for his wife was the half breed daughter of a Russian fur trader, married to him in the Greek mission of Nulato, a thousand miles or so down the Yukon, thus being of much higher caste than the common Siwash, or native, wife. It was a mere northland nuance, which none but the northland adventurer may understand.

"I reckon you kin take it that way," was his deliberate affirmation.

The next instant Lon McFane had stretched him on the floor, the circle was broken up, and half a dozen men had stepped between.

Bettles came to his feet, wiping the blood from his mouth. "It hain't new, this takin' and payin' of blows, and don't you never think but that this will be squared."

"An' niver in me life did I take the lie from mortal man," was the retort courteous. waitin' an willin' to help ye lift yer debts, barrin' no manner of way."

"Still got that 38-55?"

Lon nodded.

"But you'd better git a more likely caliber. Mine 'll rip holes through you the size of walnuts."

"Niver fear; it's me own slugs smell their way with soft noses, an' they'll spread like flapjacks against the coming out beyand. An', when 'll I have the pleasure of waitin' on ye? The water hole's a strikin' locality."

"'T ain't bad. Jest be theer in an hour, and you won't set long on my coming."

"An' it's an evil day I'll not be to hand,

Both men mittened and left the post, their ears closed to the remonstrances of their comrades. It was such a little thing; yet with such men little things, nourished by quick tempers and stubborn natures, soon blossomed into big things. Besides, the art of burning to bed rock still lay in the womb of the future, and the men of Forty Mile, shut in by the long Arctic winter, grew high stomached with overeating and enforced idleness and became as irritable as do the bees in the fall of the year when the hives are overstocked with honey.

There was no law in the land. The mounted police was also a thing of the future. Each man measured an offense and meted out the punishment inasmuch as it affected himself. Rarely had combined action been necessary, and never in all the dreary history of the camp had the eighth article of the decalogue been violated.

Big Jim Belden called an impromptu meeting. Scruff Mackenzie was placed as temporary chairman, and a messenger dispatched to solicit Father Roubeau's good offices. Their position was paradoxical, and they knew it. By the right of might could they interfere to prevent the duel; yet such action, while in direct line with their wishes, went counter to their opinions. While their rough hewn, obsolete ethics recognized the individual prerogative of wiping out blow with blow, they could not bear to think of two good comrades, such as Bettles and McFane, meeting in deadly battle. Deeming the man who would not fight on provocation a dastard, when brought to the test it seemed wrong that he should fight.

But a scurry of moccasins and loud cries, rounded off with a pistol shot, interrupted the discussion. Then the storm doors opened and Malemute Kid entered, a smoking Colt's in his hand and a merry light in his eye.

"I got him." He replaced the empty shell and added, "Your dog, Scruff."

"Yellow Fang?" Mackenzie asked.

"No; the lop eared one."

"Come out and take a look."

"That's all right, after all. Guess he's got 'em too. Yellow Fang came back this morning and took a chunk out of him and came near to making a widower of me. Made a rush for Zarinska, but she whisked her skirts in his face and escaped with the loss of the same and a good roll in the snow. Then he took to the woods again. Hope he don't come back. Lost any yourself?"

"One—the best one of the pack—Shookum. Started amuck this morning, but didn't get very far. Ran foul of Sitka Charley's team and they scattered him all over the street. And now two of them are loose and raging mad; so you see he got his work in. The dog census will be small in the spring if we don't do something."

"And the man census, too."

"How's that? Whose in trouble now?"

"O, Bettles and Lon McFane had an argument and they'll be down by the water hole in a few minutes to settle it."

The incident was repeated for his benefit, and Malemute Kid, accustomed to an obedience which his fellow men never failed to render, took charge of the affair. His quickly formulated plan was explained, and they promised to follow his lead implicitly.

"So you see," he concluded, "we do not actually take away their privilege of fighting, and yet I don't believe they'll fight when they see the beauty of the scheme. Life's a game, and men the gamblers. They'll stake their whole pile on the one chance in a thousand. Take away that one chance and —they won't play."

He turned to the man in charge of the post. "Storekeeper, weigh out three fathoms of your best half inch manila."

"We'll establish a precedent which will last the men of Forty Mile to the end of time," he prophesied. Then he coiled the rope about his arm and led his followers out of doors, just in time to meet the principals.

"What danged right 'd he to fetch my wife in?" thundered Bettles to the soothing overtures of a friend. "'Twa'n't called

by JACK LONDON

for," he concluded decisively. "'T wa'n't called for," he reiterated again and again, pacing up and down and waiting for Lon McFane.

And Lon McFane—his face was hot and tongue rapid as he flaunted insurrection in the face of the church. "Then, father," he cried, "it 's with an aisy heart I'll roll in me flamy blankets, the broad of me back on a bed of coals. Niver shall it be said Lon McFane took a lie 'twixt the teeth without iver liftin' a hand! And I'll not ask a blessin'. The years have been wild, but it's the heart was in the right place."

"But it's not the heart," Lon," interposed Father Roubeau; "it's pride that bids you forth to slay your fellow man."

"Yer Frinch," Lon replied. And then, turning to leave him, "An' will ye say a mass if the luck is against me?"

But the priest smiled, thrust his moccasined feet to the fore, and went out upon the white breast of the silent river. A packed trail, the width of a sixteen inch sled, led out to the water hole. On either side lay the deep, soft snow. The men trod in single file, without conversation, and the black stoled priest in their midst gave to the function the solemn aspect of a funeral. It was a warm winter's day for Forty Mile—a day in which the sky, filled with heaviness, drew closer to the earth, and the mercury sought the unwonted level of 20 below. But there was no cheer in the warmth. There was little air in the upper strata, and the clouds hung motionless, giving sullen promise of an early snowfall. And the earth, unresponsive, made no preparation, content in its hibernation.

When the water hole was reached Bettles, having evidently reviewed the quarrel during the silent walk, burst out in a final "'T wa'n't called for," while Lon McFane kept grim silence. Indignation so choked him that he could not speak.

Yet deep down, whenever their own wrongs were not uppermost, both men wondered at their comrades. They had expected opposition, and this tacit acquiescence hurt them. It seemed more was due them from the men they had been so close with, and they felt a vague sense of wrong, rebelling at the thought of so many of their brothers coming out, as on a gala occasion, without one word of protest, to see them shoot each other down. It appeared their worth had diminished in the eyes of the community. The proceedings puzzled them.

"Back to back, David. An' will it be fifty paces to the man or double the quantity?"

"Fifty," was the sanguinary reply, grunted out, yet sharply cut.

But the new manila, not prominently displayed but casually coiled about Malemute Kid's arm, caught the quick eye of the Irishman and thrilled him with a suspicious fear.

"An' what are ye doin' with the rope?"

"Hurry up!" Malemute Kid glanced at his watch. "I've a batch of bread in the cabin and I don't want it to fall. Besides, my feet are getting cold."

The rest of the men manifested their impatience in various suggestive ways.

"But the rope, Kid? It's bran' new, an' sure yer bread 's not that heavy it needs raisin' with the like of that?"

Bettles by this time had faced around. Father Roubeau, the humor of the situation just dawning on him, hid a smile behind his mittened hand.

"No, Lon; this rope was made for a man." Malemute Kid could be very impressive on occasion.

"What man?" Bettles was becoming aware of a personal interest.

"The other man."

"An' which is the one ye'd mane by that?"

"Listen, Lon—and you, too, Bettles! We've been talking this little trouble of yours over and we've come to one conclusion. We know we have no right to stop your fighting"—

"True for ye, me lad!"

"And we're not going to. But this much we can do, and shall do—make this the only duel in the history of Forty Mile, set an example for every che-cha-qua that comes up or down the Yukon. The man who escapes killing shall be hanged to the nearest tree. Now, go ahead!"

Lon smiled dubiously, then his face lighted up. "Pace her off, David—fifty paces, wheel, an' niver a cease firin' till a lad's down for good. 'T is their hearts 'll niver let them do the deed, an' it 's well ye should know it for a true Yankee bluff."

He started off with a pleased grin on his face, but Malemute Kid halted him.

"Lon! It's a long while since you first knew me?"

"Many's the day."

"And you, Bettles?"

"Five year next June high water."

"And have you once, in all that time, known me to break my word? Or heard of me breaking it?"

Both men shook their heads, striving to fathom what lay beyond.

"Well, then, what do you think of a promise made by me?"

"As good as your bond," from Bettles.

"Listen! I, Malemute Kid, give you my word—and you know what that means—that the man who is not shot stretches rope within ten minutes after the shooting." He stepped back as Pilate might have done after washing his hands.

A pause and a silence came over the men of Forty Mile. The sky drew still closer, sending down a crystal light of frost—little geometric designs, perfect, evanescent as a breath, yet destined to exist till the returning sun had covered half its northern journey. Both men had led forlorn hopes in their time—led, with a curse or a jest on their tongues, and in their souls an unswerving faith in the god of chance. But that merciful deity had been shut out from the present deal. They studied the face of Malemtue Kid, but they studied as one might the Sphinx. As the quiet minutes passed a feeling that speech was incumbent on them began to grow. At last the howl of a wolf dog cracked the silence from the direction of Forty Mile. The weird sound swelled with all the pathos of a breaking heart, then died away in a long drawn sob.

"Well I be danged!" Bettles turned up the collar of his mackinaw jacket and stared about him helplessly.

"It's a gloryus game yer runnin', Kid," cried Lon McFane. "All the percentage to the house an' niver a bit to the man that's buckin'. The devil himself 'd niver tackle such a cinch—and damned if I do."

There were chuckles, throttled in gurgling throats and winks brushed away with the frost which rimmed the eyelashes as the men climbed the ice notched bank and started across the street to the post. But the long howl had drawn nearer, invested with a new note of menace. A woman screamed round the corner. There was a cry of "Here he comes!" Then an Indian boy, at the head of half a dozen frightened dogs, racing with death, dashed into the crowd. And behind, came Yellow Fang, a bristle of hair and a flash of gray. Everybody but the Yankee fled. The Indian boy had tripped and fallen. Bettles stopped long enough to grip him by the slack of his furs, then headed for a pile of cordwood already occupied by a number of his comrades. Yellow Fang, doubling after one of the dogs, came leaping back. The fleeing animal, free of the rabies but crazed with fright, whipped Bettles off his feet and flashed on up the street. Malemute Kid took a flying shot at Yellow Fan. The mad dog whirled a half airspring, came down on his back, then, with a single leap, covered half the distance between himself and Bettles.

But the fatal spring was intercepted. Lon McFane leaped from the woodpile, countering him in midair. Over they rolled, Lon holding him by the throat at arm's length, blinking under the fetid slaver which sprayed his face. Then Bettles, revolver in hand and coolly waiting a chance, settled the combat.

"'Twas a square game, Kid," Lon remarked, rising to his feet and shaking the snow from out of his sleeves; "with a fair percentage to meself that bucked it."

That night, while Lon McFane sought the forgiving arms of the church in the direction of Father Roubeau's cabin, Malemute Kid and Scruff Mackenzie talked long to little purpose.

"But would you," persisted Mackenzie, "supposing they had fought?"

"Have I ever broken my word?"

"No, but that isn't the point. Answer the question. Would you?"

Malemute Kid straightened up. "Scruff, I've been asking myself that question ever since, and"—

"Well?"

"Well, as yet, I haven't found the answer."

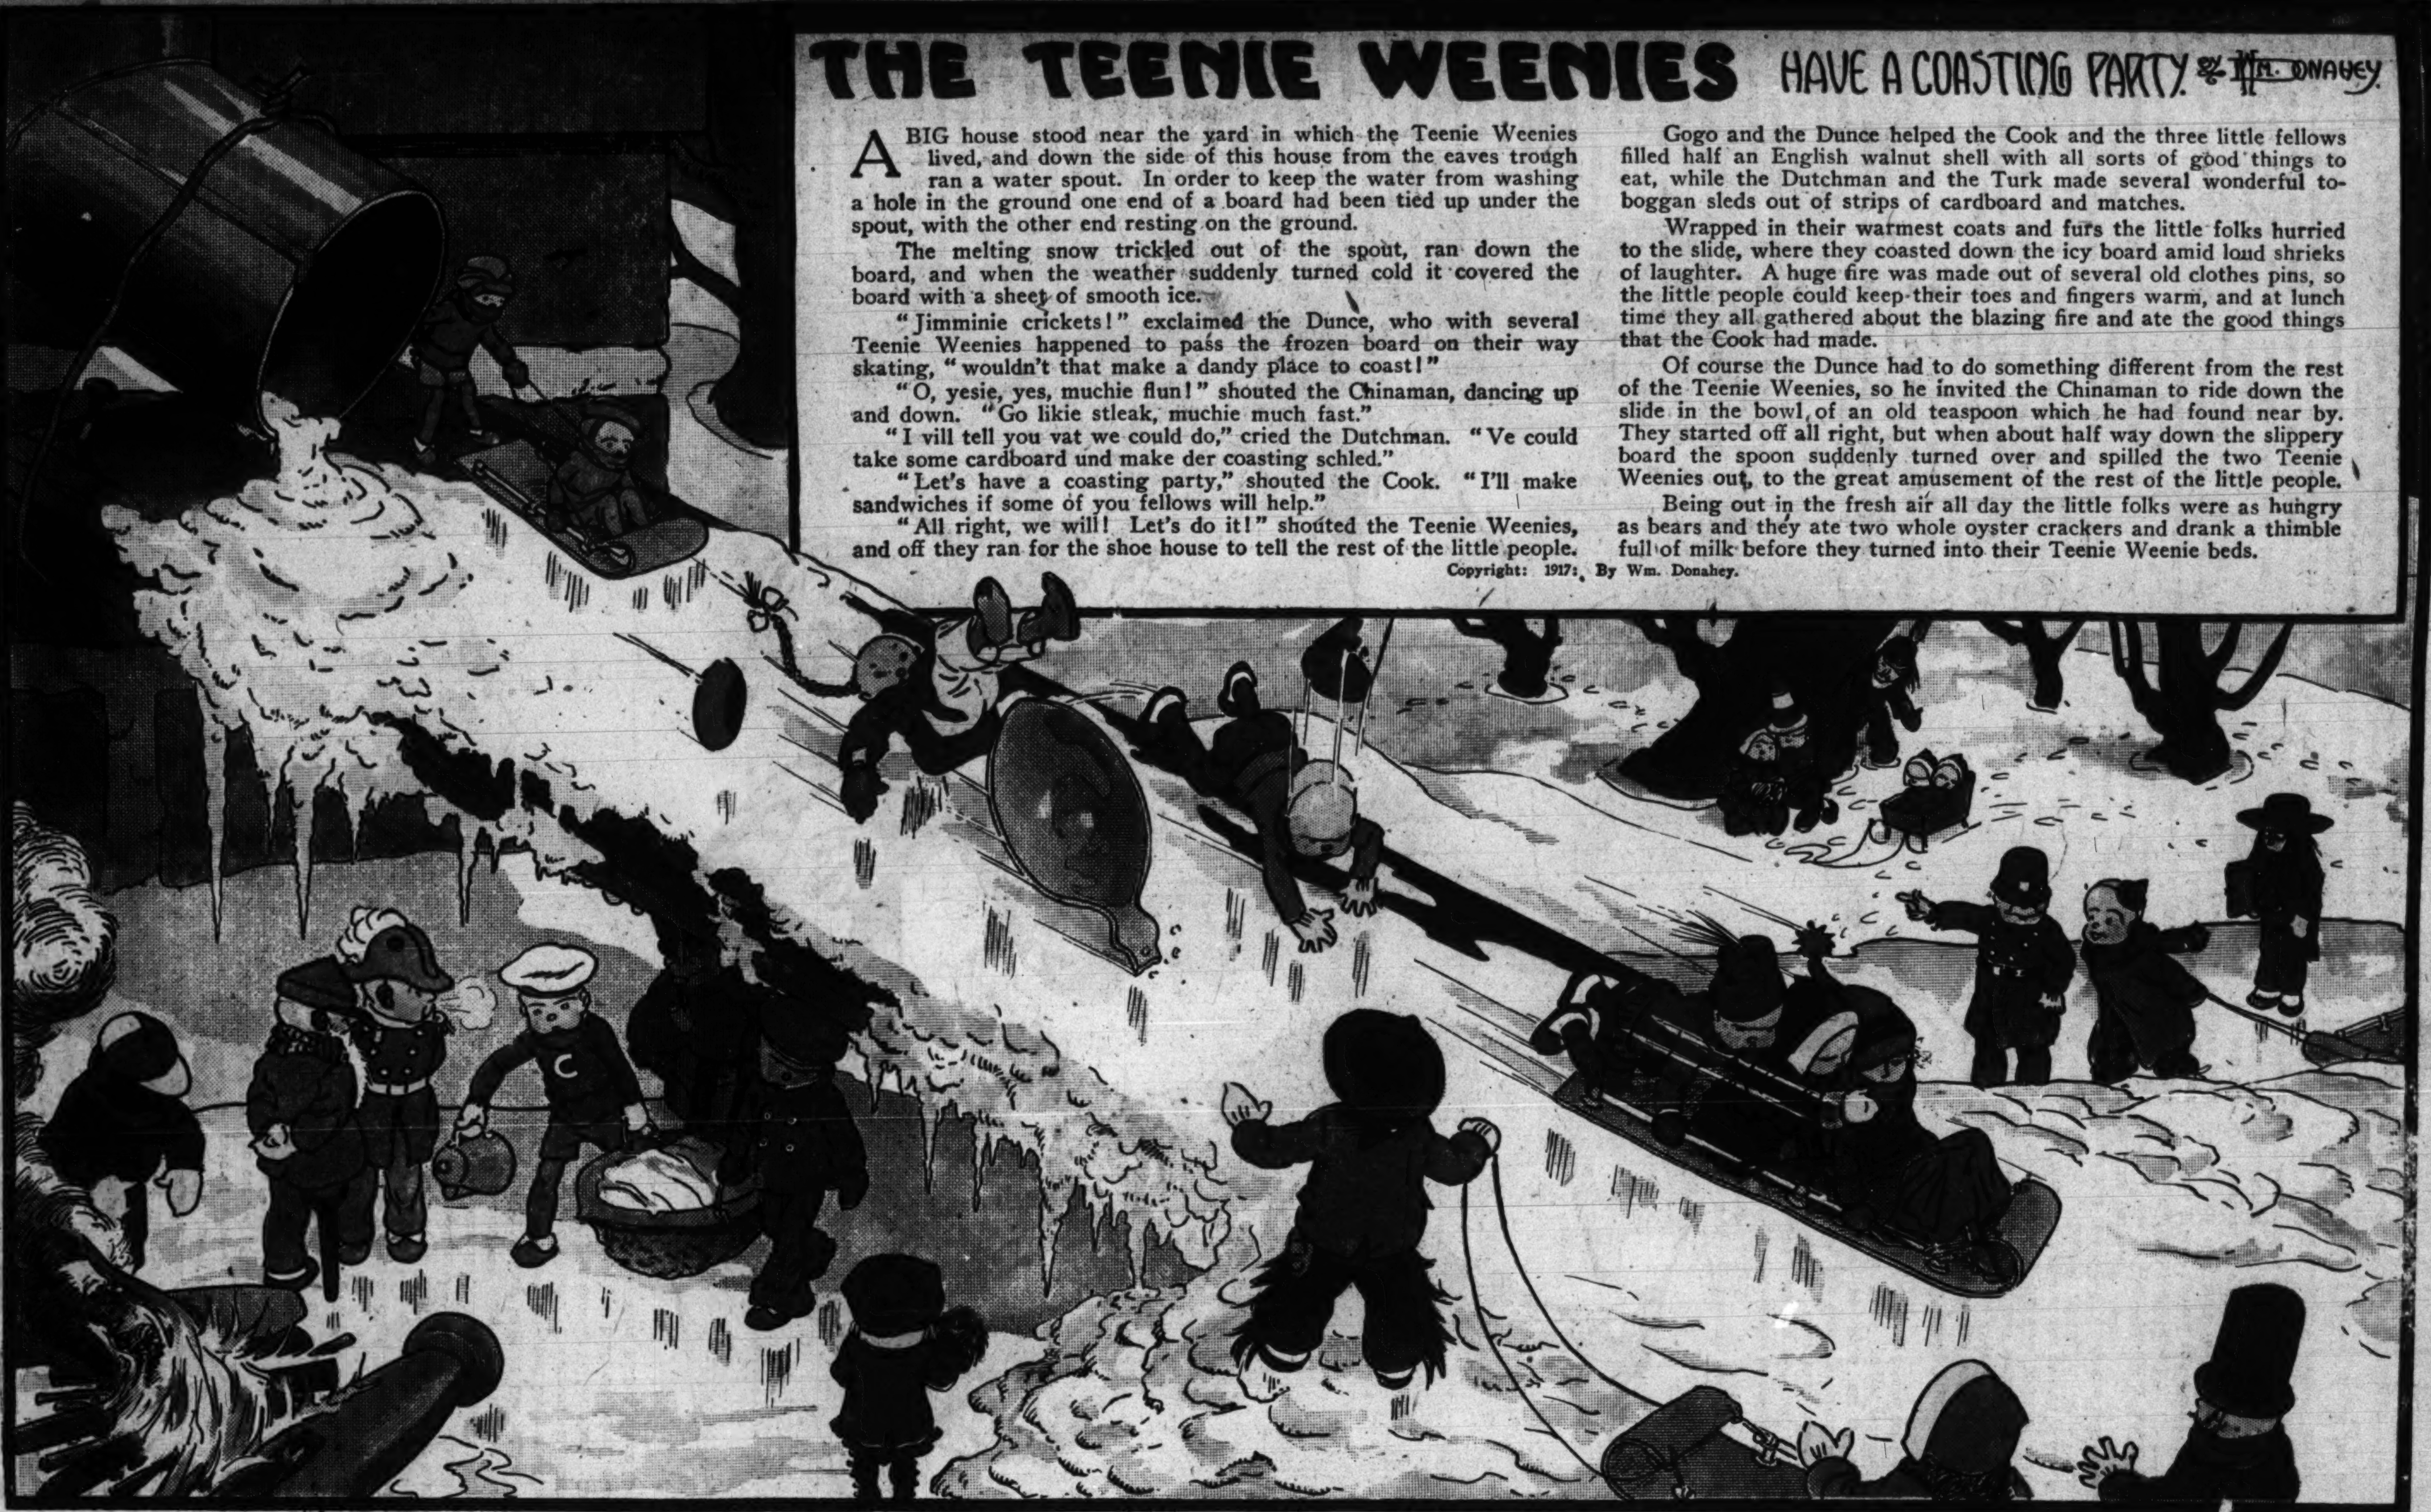
THE TEENIE WEENIES HAVE A COASTING PARTY. BY WM. DONAHEY.



A BIG house stood near the yard in which the Teenie Weenies lived, and down the side of this house from the eaves trough ran a water spout. In order to keep the water from washing a hole in the ground one end of a board had been tied up under the spout, with the other end resting on the ground.

The melting snow trickled out of the spout, ran down the board, and when the weather suddenly turned cold it covered the board with a sheet of smooth ice.

"Jimminie crickets!" exclaimed the Dunce, who with several Teenie Weenies happened to pass the frozen board on their way skating, "wouldn't that make a dandy place to coast!"

"O, yesie, yes, muchie flun!" shouted the Chinaman, dancing up and down. "Go likie stleak, muchie much fast."

"I vill tell you vat we could do," cried the Dutchman. "Ve could take some cardboard und make der coasting schled."

"Let's have a coasting party," shouted the Cook. "I'll make sandwiches if some of you fellows will help."

"All right, we will! Let's do it!" shouted the Teenie Weenies, and off they ran for the shoe house to tell the rest of the little people.

Gogo and the Dunce helped the Cook and the three little fellows filled half an English walnut shell with all sorts of good things to eat, while the Dutchman and the Turk made several wonderful toboggan sleds out of strips of cardboard and matches.

Wrapped in their warmest coats and furs the little folks hurried to the slide, where they coasted down the icy board amid loud shrieks of laughter. A huge fire was made out of several old clothes pins, so the little people could keep their toes and fingers warm, and at lunch time they all gathered about the blazing fire and ate the good things that the Cook had made.

Of course the Dunce had to do something different from the rest of the Teenie Weenies, so he invited the Chinaman to ride down the slide in the bowl of an old teaspoon which he had found near by. They started off all right, but when about half way down the slippery board the spoon suddenly turned over and spilled the two Teenie Weenies out, to the great amusement of the rest of the little people.

Being out in the fresh air all day the little folks were as hungry as bears and they ate two whole oyster crackers and drank a thimble full of milk before they turned into their Teenie Weenie beds.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Clothes may be divided into two classes, those that every woman wears and those that the occasional woman wears. The latter are fascinating for every woman to look at. We may peer at them through the windows—those tactful and sumptuous creations—as we hurry down town o' mornings to Ogre Typewriter or we may read about them in the evening while we consider whether we ought to stop Mary's music lessons in order to get a new rug for the dining room.

But we don't wear them, you see. They really don't affect our own lives any more than the paper dolls of our childhood. Just nice to look at and play with, but of absolutely no practical benefit.

Yet every year the occasional woman's clothes grow more elaborate and bewildering. Remember that tired business man who picked up out of curiosity his wife's fashion magazine? This is something like what he read: "A costume of beige djersarube with girdle of ribbon lace, accompanied by cloche of mousse straw with——" Here the man stopped. His look of teasing condescension changed to haggard bewilderment. "Gee," he remarked, "I want some light reading," and he took up his own engineering textbooks.

In these days of harassing technicalities there are, however, a few straightforward garments, clothes of simple materials and simple cut, in which poor Everywoman may pursue a serene and yet fashionable path. To this fact some of the frocks gotten out by our own American designers bear witness. It is four of these costumes which are illustrated today.

The one to the extreme left is a coat dress of an armure silk which illustrates the resources of these heavy striped materials of this spring. The ground of the silk is chartreuse, that shade of green which we experience on the second day out. Chartreuse is more becoming to the average woman's shoes than it is to her face, and the chief concern of the designers seems to be to get some other shade near the facial coast line. Here in this frock the stripe of dark—almost black—blue forms a sailor collar which takes the unbecoming sting from the chartreuse green.

Stripes are otherwise utilized in the girdle, sleeves, and hem, and they form side panels of the skirt. The buttons are covered with the blue silk of the stripe. No other trimming, you see! This little frock points, in fact, to a fable. The dashing striped material of today is both frock and ornament.

The same straight up and down lines with the lowered waist are observed in the next frock, one of oyster colored tussah with lovely sea green embroidered motifs. In this frock one observes a telling combination favored this spring. The sleeves are of white chiffon, and only the great cavalier cuffs are permitted to bear tidings of the embroidered tussah. This same chiffon forms a top collar lying over the suspender collar of the dress material. For the rest, there is a charming girdle formed of sea green enamel joined by silver chains.

Brown as a muffin is the next girl, whose attire embraces, by the way, some of the newest of style features. First of all, there is her peplum blouse of natural colored shantung trimmed with brown soutache braid. Now, if there is one thing these days more popular than the ukulele, it is soutache braid; and if there is something else even more popular than that, shantung is the logical answer. This material has been achieving, in fact, some of the loveliest blouses and frocks that have come to us from the other side. For sports wear it is the material par excellence.

The round, low collar of this present example is seen on many of the new blouses. This particular collar is close fitting, but there are some which stand out like a hedge about the neck, reminiscent of that "saucer collar" which we witnessed some years ago. These two types, together with the ever present sailor model, offer a choice, supplemented, of course, by a hundred other variations.

An effective way of breaking blouse monotony is found here in the simple trick of slipping brown satin ribbon through the soutache braiding. This brown satin is repeated on the skirt, a copy of one sent us by a famous French designer. Silk jersey is one of the fabrics which does not "barrel" successfully, and so here we find the accordion plaited, two flounce skirt which is so becoming to the slim figure. Of light brown jersey, each flounce is trimmed with bands of dark brown satin.

The complete "browniness" of this maiden is brought to a climax in the hat of plaited crêpe de chine with figures of red and green and with straw underbrim. A novel feature of this hat is that it sets up in the back on a bandeau.

The last of the group is one of those serviceable pongee one piece frocks which form the background of every woman's summer wardrobe. As a rule these frocks are trimmed with either soutache in some harmonizing tint or with the bright colored embroideries which go so effectively with this neutral shade. Here the embroidery is introduced in great pockets, and a bright tassel of silk hangs from the girdle. The collar buttons down with silk covered buttons of red, and the back is formed by a long, shield shaped piece of the pongee which extends below the natural waist line.

As a summary of these frocks we might say: Long waist line, skirts two inches longer than during the winter, and long, straight lines.

MEN AND WOMEN

At a Lincoln and labor meeting of the Women's Trade Union league the principal speaker, William H. Holly, attempted to dynamite the long cherished maxim that toil and hardship have an affinity for great men.

"Genius never was the offspring of poverty," he said. "Character never was developed by long hours and a meager cupboard. Those who point to the early hardships of Abraham Lincoln as being responsible for his presence in the White House might as well say that he was president because of the illiteracy of his father. Lincoln merely rose above his difficulties because he was a born genius. Luxury and the chance to labor eight hours a day would have made him greater."

Genius and Poverty.

It is as erroneous a statement to make, that genius never was the offspring of poverty, as it would be to claim luxury its only parent. Genius is no respecter of persons or ranks. It is born, with a fine indiscriminateness, in the hovel and in the palace. The reason genius and great leadership is produced in from five to ten times as great a number from the ranks of the masses as from the more exalted ranks is solved by the same process of reasoning as was that old mathematical nursery riddle: "Why do the white sheep eat more grass than the black?" Because there are more of them!

"Burning the midnight candle won't make a genius of a man who wasn't born one," says Woods Hutchinson. "The genius, the exceptional man, is the creation of his race and of his time."

It would be folly to believe that Lincoln would have been as great a genius had he not burned the midnight oil. Without the ideals, the discipline of endurance, the character building thus accomplished, he never would have proved the exceptional man for his cause and his particular era. Had Lincoln been born in luxury and his labor hours been eight a day his sympathies could not have been as keen for the slave. Only by personal experiences of privation, of excessive toil, and hardships can one appreciate the sufferings of those like afflicted. So that the early hardships of Lincoln may rightfully be claimed as greatly responsible for his presence in the White House.

A man might be a genius born and die in his garret unknown because he lacked the qualities acquired only by discipline and hard labor. Without the endurance and the sense of self-direction that close application and successive surmounting of obstacles breed, no genius born, rich or poor, ever could be one of the two or four out of a million to have his name written in the hall of fame.

The moral effects of poverty present a curious problem. On the one hand it spurs men to rise high above it; it demoralizes others by fear; it poisons, and, again, it is of highest medicinal value. But the same ruling applies to children born into ease: it demoralizes in some cases, and, again, it inspires men to retain a high place in community into which they were born.

* *

We Are One People.

A chauffeur, a maid, and the washerwoman who had served a Chicago woman for years were discharged by their employer for no other reason than their German blood. The woman, two generations removed from a nation of the entente allies, was so imbued with German hatred that her irresponsible act of discharging faithful employés was done unhesitatingly.

Fortunately, not many such hostile and unneutral actions have come to light. But there is reason to believe that if war prove an early issue there will be many like occurrences.

The German-Americans are quite as loyal in their devotion as any other people of foreign extraction. They have expressed themselves by thousands and tens of thousands to the effect that their loyalty in a crisis would be to America; their slogan, America first. Undoubtedly there will be a few of German blood who in the heat and excitement of a war declaration on their fatherland will lose their normally level headed reasoning and become forgetful of what they owe their adopted land. To such just punishment will be meted out, and it will bear the indorsement of the millions of citizens of German extraction who recognize America above their emperor.

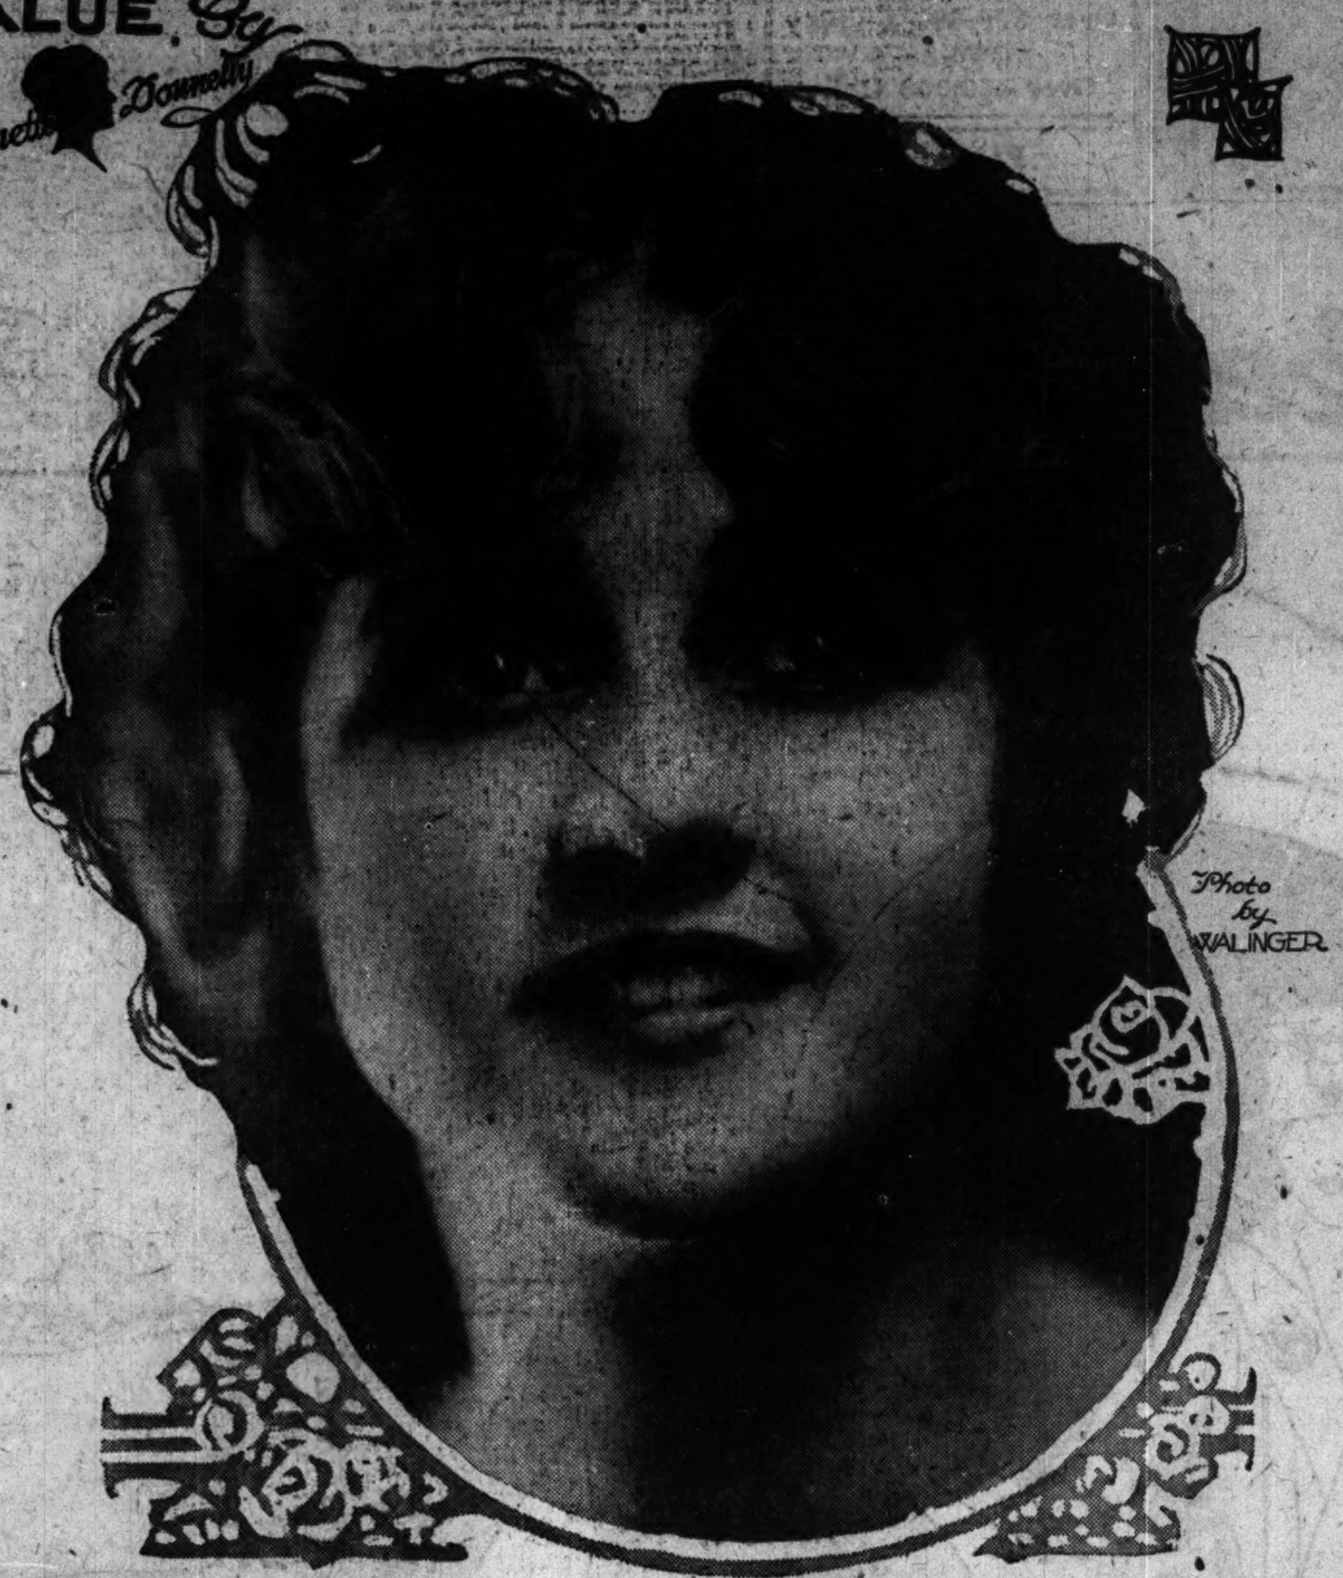
Every American, in the threatened or the probable real crisis, should feel himself a host or hostess who has extended an invitation and a hand of welcome to the foreign born, and it now behooves him to practice his duty as host by refraining from unkind words or deeds that would cause the guest discomfort or egg him on to bitterness or hatred.

The German-Americans have proved themselves thrifty, prudent, law abiding citizens. The political life of our country has profited by these citizens. Our commercial advancement has been accomplished with great assistance from them. German culture has done much for the advancement of the arts in this country. They have been builders, collectively and as units, working not for the advancement of Germany but for the advancement and progress of America. Why, all of a sudden, then, should we feel unkindly toward them because of the turn of events the war god has made? Why visit the sins of a militaristic father upon an innocent children? Why forget our motto: We are one people?

ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

HOW A FACE UPON WHICH MILLIONS HAVE BEEN SPENT KEEPS ITS FACE VALUE.

By Antoinette Donnelly



This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

If anybody is nursing the old fashioned idea that beauty doesn't pay, let him consider the case of Mae Burns, model of exceptional beauty. Her face has cost advertisers more than $5,000,000, and it is earning her a highly profitable living while it serves to grace and increase the selling quality of ads. You've probably seen her face many times. It has appeared a million times or more in catalogues, on post cards, and on calendars and magazines. Outside of movie stars the distinction is claimed for Miss Burns that she has the most photographed face in America, if not in the entire world.

Perhaps you bought a hat on the compulsory evidence of its beauty because Mae Burns' face was underneath its advertised brim. Or maybe you were separated painlessly and harmoniously from a loose dollar or two fo a tooth or complexion aid on the conviction presented by the unblemished skin of this pretty model's face or the evenly matched pearls in her charmingly bowed mouth. Or maybe she corralled you for her advertisers with a smile and a bottle of perfume. I'm sure she got you somehow. For that's her business and she does it well. Such is the value of beauty to her!

Miss Burns was "discovered" by a commerical photographer about four years ago, when she was just 16. Struck by the possibilities of her girlish beauty, he persuaded her to pose for a series of photographic studies. Reproduction rights to three of these pictures were sold to a big calendar concern for a record price and incidentally created a demand for the services of the model.

Although a native of Chicago, Miss Burns has posed for leading photographers from New York to San Francisco. Her services are in constant demand and she receives big fees.

Miss Burns is unreservedly beautiful. To begin with, she is young and slender, and she has the natural gift for graceful posing. She is a 34 size. Her eyes are violet with long sweeping lashes. Her hair is light brown. Her head is beautifully shaped and poised on a neck of especial beauty, white, graceful, and slender.

The outline of head and profile are clearly defined and classically beautiful. Her mouth is perfect. In looking about for the happiest illustration for a beauty story on the best reasons for keeping the corners of the mouth up I discovered after a wide search the answer in the face of Miss Mae Burns. She has the most exquisite little "turn-up" to the corners of her mouth and a bewitchingly bowed thing is the rest of this feature.

And there is expression in her face. To this she owes the greater part of her success. Where would a face perfect in feature and detail get her in model work if there were no expression? Nowhere! The reason Miss Burns' beauty is the sought after thing it is is because of her versatility of expression—and her intelligence in the use of it. A certain vivacity of "silent movement" distinguishes her model work. When facing one she seems to be walking directly out of the picture. She is convincing. That's her trick of expression that gives distinction and worth to the advertisement which advertisers recognize and to which they are willing to pay homage in millions of dollars.

It has been rightfully stated that the life of the average model is one of short duration. Like stage beauties, models appear and disappear. Every season produces a new crop. Some of the select specimens, to be sure, outlast their first season and even reappear as apparent perennials for two or three years. But always the fresh discoveries are the most interesting for the moment.

Not so in Miss Burns' case. More lovely by far than she was in her first year of professional modeling she is today. And because of the value she herself puts upon her beauty many profitable years are ahead of this favored young woman. Not that she is vainglorious. On the contrary she is modest about her looks, which adds a charm to her beauty, of course. But she realizes the value of beauty sufficiently to understand that it is a gift to be cared for and nurtured and perfected in every way, instead of neglected and abused.

A commercial photographer who had a life of experience with girl models told me: "For twenty years I've seen them come and go. They've got to have a head on them in order to survive the flattery and the offerings of gay life that are put up to them. The temptations follow as surely as day follows night. Drink has knocked out many a beauty before her time. I don't mean drunkenness in the sordid sense of the word—I mean the dining and wining of the café life. It gets their eyes. It begets a heaviness under the chin and all over, in fact."

Miss Mae Burns is a teetotaler. She appreciates the dangers that lie in the bubbled waters.

She walks every day—not less than four miles.

"I never neglect that walk," she told me. "I've got to keep my weight exactly where it is."

"What other exercise do you work at?" I asked her.

"Dancing and skating," she answered. "I love both of these pastimes and I avail myself of them at every possible opportunity."

"I don't eat much candy, although I have loads of it given to me, because I won't get fat," she added determinedly.

Morning and night Miss Mae massages the skin of her pretty face. That's part of her daily ritual. Her teeth are never neglected morning and night and after each meal, no matter how pressed for time she is. In her pretty head there is gray matter in plenty and she knows what good teeth are in the sum total of beauty, Her nails are given daily care, as the pink shelled tips plainly avow. Care and personal hygiene stamp Miss Burns with their indelible mark. Her face is her fortune and no small detail is going to lose that fortune for her.

REAL LOVE STORIES

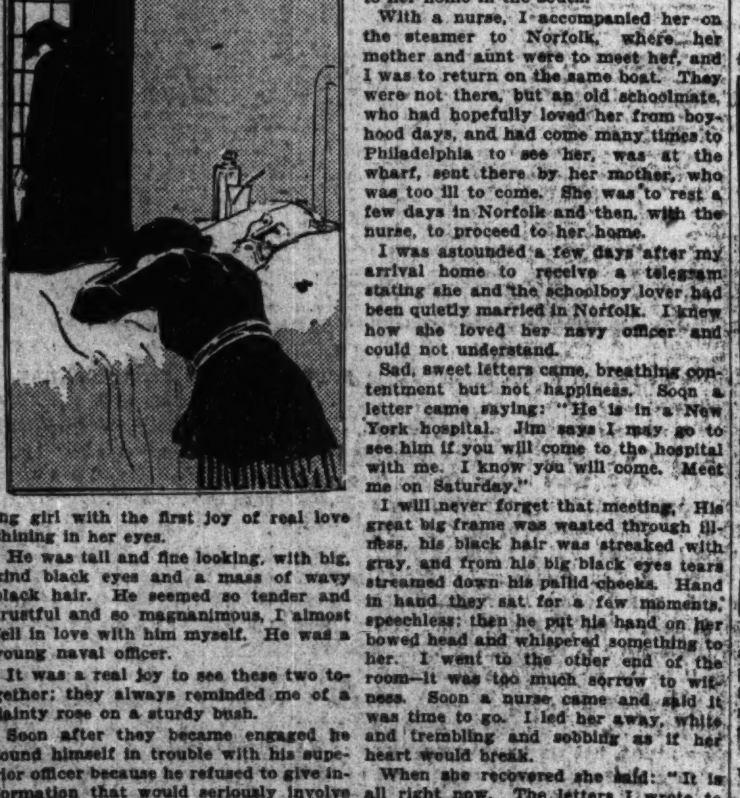
This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

> Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction! It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. Manuscripts will not be returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

TRUE TO HIS FRIEND.

She was my chum, and I lived through this story with her. She came to Philadelphia from the south. When I first met her I was attracted by her sunny disposition and her lovable character, not the type a critic would call pretty, yet there was something so fascinating about her slender, girlish figure and her gentle, sweet face every one seemed to turn and take a second look as she passed along.

I knew she was in love; most any one can tell that when they meet a charming girl with the first joy of real love shining in her eyes.



He was tall and fine looking, with big, kind black eyes and a mass of wavy black hair. He seemed so tender and trustful and so magnanimous, I almost fell in love with him myself. He was a young naval officer.

It was a real joy to see these two together; they always reminded me of a dainty rose on a sturdy bush.

Soon after they became engaged he found himself in trouble with his superior officer because he refused to give information that would seriously involve a brother officer, an old time chum and classmate at Annapolis. The matter was placed before the authorities in Washington. Still true to his friend, he was deprived of ten merits and ordered to the Philippines. Without a word of protest he was obliged to leave immediately—no explanation, no farewell.

She understood and waited patiently for the letter explaining, that she might assure him of her love and loyalty and tell him of her sympathy. The letter never came. Frantically she wrote again and again, directing them to the Army and Navy club to make sure he would receive them. Finally she broke down under the strain of grief and disappointment. She was so ill the doctor in attendance ordered that she be taken to her home in the south.

With a nurse, I accompanied her on the steamer to Norfolk, where her mother and aunt were to meet her, and I was to return on the same boat. They were not there, but an old schoolmate, who had hopefully loved her from boyhood days, and had come many times to Philadelphia to see her, was at the wharf, sent there by her mother, who was too ill to come. She was to rest a few days in Norfolk and then, with the nurse, to proceed to her home.

I was astounded a few days after my arrival home to receive a telegram stating she and the schoolboy lover had been quietly married in Norfolk. I knew how she loved her navy officer and could not understand.

Sad, sweet letters came, breathing contentment but not happiness. Soon a letter came saying: "He is in a New York hospital. Jim says I may go to see him if you will come to the hospital with me. I know you will come. Meet me on Saturday."

I will never forget that meeting. His great big frame was wasted through illness, his black hair was streaked with gray, and from his big black eyes tears streamed down his pallid cheeks. Hand in hand they sat for a few moments, speechless; then he put his hand on her bowed head and whispered something to her. I went to the other end of the room—it was too much sorrow to witness. Soon a nurse came and said it was time to go. I led her away, white and trembling and sobbing as if her heart would break.

When she recovered she said: "It is all right now. The letters I wrote to him and the letters he wrote to me were handed to him just before he left for New York. No correspondence was part of his punishment. He understands. My God, it is dreadful! He is a man; he will soon forget. I—well, dear, I am a woman. I will go back to Jim; he is good and kind, and he understands, too."

Bright Sayings of Children

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Harriet was watching his grandfather, a traveling salesman, pack his grip preparatory to a trip, and the grandfather found it necessary to insist rather frequently that she should not touch anything.

All at once she said: "We're both working hard, aren't we, grandpa?"

"Well," said he, "I am, but I'm not so sure about you."

"Yes, grandpa," said she, "it's hard work to look and not touch."

Jim is fond of his sister, Helen, who is 1 year old. One evening he heard his parents telling some friends how slow Helen was in cutting her teeth. When the company had gone Jim said: "Mother, you shouldn't be worried about Helen's teeth. I'm 6 years old, and mine aren't all developed yet."

Charley was very fond of running in to visit with a neighboring woman and when there enjoyed helping so as to save her many steps. One day after several trips upstairs she thanked him and added: "You are a mighty fine little fellow." "Don't you know," he replied, looking up at her, "you are the only lady I ever made a hit with."

In our family until recently there have been five girls and three boys. Whenever plans of a social nature arose the girls were able to have their way by reason of superior numbers. When our youngest son received the news of a new baby brother he rushed to his father and shouted in great glee: "We're gaining on 'em, dad."

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are

Apt to Worry.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

If your birthday falls during the week beginning today, you are of the genus Pisces, meaning the Fishes, which sign begins on the 18th and continues until March 20. Up until Feb. 21 you are on what is called the cusp, partaking equally of the preceding and the new sign. Your chief characteristics are perception, emotion, and silence; your tribe means "Wrestlings," which is supposed to fit your anxious, lifelong struggle with circumstances.

In business you are the soul of careful attention—if anything, you give more than you are expected to—but in your social affairs you are good naturedly careless. For a while you will endure overwork uncomplainingly, but if the "boss" continues to impose upon you, some morning he won't find you there.

Yours is a deep love nature, so that you easily win the tender regard of others, in spite of the fact that you constantly worry over trifles. You are noble, self-sacrificing, and generous in the extreme, generally honest and sincere. If your generosity is too often betrayed, as you grow older, you withdraw into a shell of indifference, and then it is that you get the name of being "cold blooded fish," like your prototype.

No sign appreciates more the advantages of a liberal education, so it is that you never consider your education finished; but are always striving to improve both mind and body. You build far better than you realize, because in your overanxiety to do things just right you are exceedingly thorough. Sometimes you try to hide your own lack of self-confidence by putting on a bold, determined manner, and thereby hurt the feelings of others in your efforts to save your own.

"Slow to wrath," but O, my, what a towering, one minute affair it is when once it hits you! If you're just getting ready for bed you will probably jerk your shoestrings all to pieces in your efforts to get them off, realizing full well that you haven't others within miles. But next morning all will be calm and you will patiently tie the pieces together. Ordinarily, the greater the heat of the argument the more calm you become.

Nature is your best medicine and a constant source of delight to you. And, too, you love harmonious and elegant surroundings, and are never happier than when beautifying a home. Your perceptive faculties are unusually keen, a mistake or defect never escaping you. In fact, you seem to take everything in at a glance. This accuracy of yours is the admiration of all those who know you.

As a mechanic, sculptor, in art of all kinds; as a superintendent, and as a teacher you may find your particular "forte." Your conjugal mate you will find in Cancer, June 23 to July 22; in Virgo, Aug. 24 to Sept. 23; in Taurus, April 21 to May 21, or in Capricorn, Dec. 23 to Jan. 20. Your fortunate weeks are those beginning Nov. 12 and Aug. 5. Your colors are emerald green, pink, white, and black; birthstones, chrysolite and moonstone.

Golden Rule Won't Do.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am in love with a girl who often tells me that she loves me. Still, when we are talking to some of her friends, she tells them of the boy friends she has. I often think she is just to get me jealous. Don't you think so? What would you advise me to do?

I would advise you not to pay any attention to the remarks she makes because that has ever been the way of woman. You might try getting even by talking of your girl friends because in a matter of love affairs the golden rule doesn't always seem to prove effective.

* *

'Twas Ever Thus.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a boy of 17, a junior in high school. Lots of the girls like me, but I am crazy about a girl of 16, who goes with an older fellow and doesn't like me. I have asked her for several dates and I sent her candy on Xmas, but "nothing doing." What shall I do? GEORGE."

Isn't it always the way—to like somebody who doesn't like you? But I believe, George, that if you just let her absolutely alone and give her to understand that you have gotten over liking her, that some day you'll get a telephone call to come over. Try it and see if I am not right.

My Most Embarrassing Moment.

Sir Walter Outdone.

One Saturday evening as I stepped from a street car I noticed that it was slippery, and, without looking, I turned around to help my mother to alight. Can you imagine how embarrassed I was when I discovered that I had helped a young man down? And the worst of it all was that he began running after he got down, while the crowds stood around laughing.

A POOR WAY TO ECONOMIZE.

Trying to solve the problem of the increased cost of living has brought trouble and added expense to the writer of the following letter. As salaries have not increased in the last few years in proportion to the increase in the cost of nearly every necessary commodity, the business girl has to do some close figuring to make her weekly wage balance with her increasing expense account.

WATCH YOUR WRAPS

It is wiser for her, however, to cut off some amusement from her debit column, or to look for greater bargains in clothes than to try to economize by lessening the quantity and quality of her meals. That is a false economy.

This girl writes:

"Dear Miss King: Two years ago I was suddenly faced with the necessity of earning my own living. I came to the city and started to work for a modest salary. I had to adjust myself to a new way of living, and it was terribly hard for me to give up some of the luxuries I had been accustomed to. I lived in a cheap, furnished room and tried not to be extravagant about my clothes, but no matter how closely I figured, nearly all my salary was spent on my wardrobe.

"The only amusement I allowed myself was an occasional Saturday matinée. In order to do that I had to skimp and scrape on my meals, so that my luncheons consisted or no more than a cup of chocolate or a glass of milk. For dinner I had something more substantial, but not as nourishing or as wholesome as the milk or chocolate. I am fond of sweets and I was beginning to foolishly economize on meat and vegetables by making a meal of soup, dessert and coffee.

"About a year ago I caught a cold, which lasted for nine weeks. In that time I lost what little appetite I had, lessened my weight by twelve pounds, and had scarcely enough energy to do the day's work.

"At the suggestion of the woman under whose direction I worked, I consulted a doctor and learned to my horror that I was on the verge of consumption, which condition was brought about by lack of nourishment.

"The firm where I was employed gave me a leave of absence for a month, and placing myself under the doctor's care and following attentively his instructions, at the end of that time I was able to start back to work. By living carefully, eating only wholesome and substantial food, and by resting as much as I possibly could I was back to normal in six months.

"I have been forced to economize in many ways since my illness to pay off the debts I incurred at the time, but I will never again commit the folly of trying to economize at the expense of my health. I am not the only working girl who has been tempted to gain little luxuries for herself at the sacrifice of her meals; that is what prompts me to write this letter. L. A. R."

Many of the younger girls in business fail to realize that good health is their strongest asset to success; otherwise, they would take greater care not to jeopardize their chances by careless living; they would give a little thought to the value and substance of their food, take some exercise every day, and not spend all their evenings dancing.

A friend of mine has recently been appointed to an important position, never before filled by a woman, and she told me that since the day she started to work (a little over nine years ago) she has never been absent a day from her desk. She has given a little time each day to physical exercise and a little thought toward planning wholesome meals, but has been amply repaid for spending the time and thought by gaining health, happiness and prosperity.

How to Order Your Clotilde Pattern.

In ordering a waist the size should be determined by the bust measure. Give the bust measure. In ordering a skirt the size of the hip is more important than the size of the waist, but give both the hip and the waist measure. Ten cents for each waist, coat, or skirt.

In ordering misses' patterns the age should be stated—12, 14, 16, or 18 years. Ten cents for each waist, coat, skirt, or dress.

In ordering children's regular patterns order them by the age of the child. Ten cents each.

Clotilde's patterns are made in New York exclusively for "The Chicago Sunday Tribune" and may be obtained through no other service. A Chicago distribution office has been opened, and following this announcement orders will be filled on the day of receipt. An extra 2 cent stamp will allow for letter postage and will thereby hasten delivery. Patrons are requested to send stamps instead of dimes, as money is frequently lost in the mails.

LEAVING CALLING CARDS.

THESE few simple rules may be of use to those making formal calls and uncertain as to how many cards to leave on a household.

A married woman leaves one of her cards and one of her husband's for each of the women of the family, and in addition one of her husband's cards for the man of the family. An unmarried woman or a widow leaves her card in the same manner as the married woman—that is, on each of the women of the family. It is not necessary to write a message on a calling card inclosed with a wedding present.

* *

A. A. A.: There are few words in our language more misused than "awfully." If you will look it up in some good dictionary you will find that it is not a synonym for "very," and that while you may say "very pretty" or "very nice," it is incorrect to say "awfully pretty" or "awfully nice."

* *

F. M. C.: It is permissible for a girl of 18 years or younger to omit the "Miss" on her calling cards, but after that age she might possibly regret using her name with no prefix. If she is to use the same plate for an indefinite length of time she must consider the future and remember that with the advancing years an unprefixed name lacks dignity.

* *

READER: You should call on the people in question and leave your cards. If a married woman is calling on an unmarried woman or a widow she leaves one of her cards and one of her husband's. If a married woman, she leaves two of her husband's cards and one of her own.

* *

MRS. H. D.: It is wiser not to allow your daughter to go to the theater with a young man unchaperoned when she is only 18 years old. Going to the "movies" unchaperoned is permissible.

* *

H. H.: At an afternoon wedding a bride may wear a veil if she likes. Her gown may be of any soft, white material. The bridegroom should wear a morning coat, gray striped trousers, gray gloves, ties and socks and a gray waistcoat. The marriage announcements should be sent out by the first mail possible after the ceremony.

Making the Fur Fly.

A friend of mine thought he had married a good cook. A couple of weeks after they were married he sent home a rabbit for dinner. When he came home himself he was amazed to find his wife sitting on the back porch picking the fur off the rabbit. A. C.

No Room to Be Proud.

Before I was married my husband promised me he'd always buy me a Christmas present after we were married and I'd have room to be proud of each present. He has kept his promise, but I'm not proud of them. One Christmas he bought me a copper wash boiler, another year a good wringer, last year a washing machine, and now he says I can wash and buy my own presents. G. C.

PANCAKES.

TABITHA TICKLETOOTH, in her renowned cook book, "The Dinner Question," says: "A frying pan stands first on the list of essentials for housekeeping. The young lady whose marriage portion consisted of one, and a cradle, had by no means a bad idea of the articles most likely to be wanted in her new condition. The frying pan is perhaps the most useful, though often the worst used, implement in the kitchen."

Poor cooks use the frying pan too much. Fine cooks find it indispensable. In some families it is not used at all because it has unjustly been given a bad reputation. The upper part of a chafing dish is a frying pan. It is frequently used without the water pan. With the water pan it makes the right kind of a double boiler, the most economical because broad and shallow instead of narrow and high. It is not likely to have waste space to waste heat when cooking is done in it.

The frying pan is indispensable in all field and camp cookery. Not only can bacon and other meat, fish, eggs, potatoes, and other vegetables be fried in it, but in it soup may be made, a piece of meat baked, an omelet or scrambled eggs cooked, eggs poached, a porridge cooked, canned vegetables or soup heated up, a soft custard made for those who like sweets or some other sauce, rice boiled and various pancakes or even biscuit be baked in it, and coffee made.

This enumeration, while not complete, surely suggests that the frying pan, intelligently used, is undoubtedly the one most valuable kitchen utensil. It is always to be found in the modern soldier's kit and of the most economical—that is, straight sided shape. Because broader than high it is the most economical utensil for cooking over coals or a flaring shallow heat like gas. I have recently seen a hotel sauce pan, or handled boiler, of this flat bottomed shape containing seven gallons, which was less than a hand high.

A frying pan can be used for baking griddle cakes, although the true griddle is in the shape of a plate without sides. The two utensils are not confused, but there is confusion concerning the thin cakes baked in the frying pan, and the thicker cakes baked on a griddle, which is often an inch thick piece of soapstone or iron. A griddle cake may be one of batter or one that has been kneaded, while the frying pan cake is usually of a thin batter. The thinnest and most aristocratic form of pancake is the French crêpe, which can easily be rolled, small. The typical griddle cakes are the English muffins, the Irish crumpet, the Welsh pikelet (if I remember rightly, that is the name), and numerous Scotch bread cakes. These are as truly baked as though cooked in the oven, and the Italians do bake similar cake on the bottom of the public ovens.

The oldest name for the pancake, seemingly, is flapjack, a name brought to America by the Puritans, and still used in New England. It was flapped or tossed after it had cooked on one side. This tossing requires no great skill, and tossing pancakes became part of the ancient celebrations of Shrove Tuesday, the day before Lent, also the day of highest festival even now where Mardigras is celebrated. "Mardi" means Tuesday and "gras," fat, though it has come to mean simply the last day of carnival. Several hundred years ago the celebration was of the type that led to its being called "Pancake day." Even today mothers of some families bake for their children pancakes containing a piece of money to signify prosperity to the one getting it, and the thimble, ring and button with their common cake significance.

In the old Westminster school in London if a boy could catch a flapjack which a cook tossed high in the air and carry it unbroken to the deanery he won a guinea, or over $5, a big prize which was probably seldom won. At other English schools of that day boys ran races for pancakes and the morning bell calling the devout to service was called the pancake bell.

We may go back to Tabitha Tickletooth for an anecdote about tossing, which she gives in connection with her pancake recipe recommending that "the slice" be used for turning the cake, as the "toss" is a maneuver requiring great experience. Her note reads:

"Apropos of amateur 'tossing,' the following anecdote of Napoleon's failure in giving the artistic twist may be appropriately quoted: 'The Empress Josephine was amusing herself one day with her ladies of honor with the manufacture of an omelet, and at the most critical moment of the operation Napoleon entered unexpectedly. Seeing the embarrassment the empress experienced in turning the omelet he took the pan from her hand, saying, "I will show you, ma bonne amie, how to turn an omelet; this is the bivouac method," and at the same time he gave the pan that little twist so well known to all cooks, but the disobedient omelet, instead of returning to the frying pan, fell right into the fire, to the great delight of Josephine, who, turning to her august spouse, said to him, with a charming smile: "Your majesty is not at the bivouac now; you understand much better how to gain battles than to turn omelets."'"

By the way, there are numerous stories of a similar sort about Napoleon and his thwarted ambitions as a cook.

The Simplest Pancake.

One egg, one cup of milk, one cup of flour, pinch of salt, one teaspoon of baking powder if sweet milk is used, one teaspoon of soda if sour milk is used. Sour milk undoubtedly makes the nicer pancake, one less likely to be soggy, less tough, etc. The cup of flour must be scanted if sour milk is used. The quickest way to make the batter is to beat the whole egg, but the white may be saved out and added last if one is not experienced in getting light batters by skilled manipulation—something that counts a good deal, of course. It is the quick, light, and wholly effective stirring and beating that constitutes such skill, and nothing can take its place. Sour milk needs to be well broken up, too. A light cake may be made by beating egg first, then adding the cup of sour milk and beating them together with the turbine beater, which does not spatter. The baking soda must be mashed with the knife and then measured and added to the milk and egg, and the flour sifted from one to three times, added a little at a time, and stirred in. The batter should be smooth and pour easily.

Buttermilk Pancakes.

Two years ago a correspondent, Mrs. P. n. B., postscripted her letter thus: "I donate a good pancake recipe which I evolved from several."

A good many people think it necessary to add a little shortening to their cakes, while buttermilk is likely to contain enough butter fat to make tender cakes. A little sour cream beaten together with clabbered milk does the same. Breaking them up by whipping gives something which is equivalent to buttermilk. Mrs. B.'s recipe:

"Two cups of flour, one-half teaspoon of salt, one teaspoon of soda sifted together, two cups of buttermilk or sour milk stirred in half at a time, two beaten eggs added last. Fry on hot greased griddle and serve with soft butter and brown sugar."

Next to pure maple sirup it seems to me that white sugar is one of the nicest things on pancakes, but the French serve all sorts of things with crêpes, and in high society a few winters since we were told that the favorite pancake accompaniment was caviar, butter, and whipped cream.

Baking the Pancake.

It is essential in all baking over the fire that the utensil, whether it be griddle, waffle iron, or thick bottomed frying pan, should be heated slowly and not greased until just before the batter is added. If this grease smokes it is probably a little too hot, if reasonable care has been given, but of course the batter cools it and the fire may be just right for the quick baking. Pour the batter into the pan and then give it a rolling motion so that the bottom is completely covered. The time depends somewhat on the thickness of the cake cooked. With a sour milk batter more air bubbles are likely to rise and break, so making a light cake, and one can tell by the character of these bubbles when to turn the cake. Once learn to regulate your fire, which is usually learning to cook without waste of heat, and you can never burn a pancake.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING-HAND

by MARION HARLAND

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

When an address or other information is wanted by mail a stamped envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to the newspaper office.

An Aid to Hearing.

"I HAVE often been tempted to write to the Helping Hand to ascertain if some kindly inclined person has anything in the line of an aid to the hearing. My hearing is failing fast, but I am positively unable to supply myself with a hearing device. Anything of that kind would be acceptable and would seem like a gift direct from God. I am 59 years old and afflicted with a leaking heart and also with a crippled foot, and now that my hearing is impaired my life is much saddened. You will see that I am thus a partial shut-in. I am exceedingly fond of reading. MRS. V. V. R."

Appliances of all sorts for aiding the hearing are always much in demand, and I am not very sanguine about securing one. Still nearly always some one has seen such an appeal as this and responded to it, and I hope this may be the way in this instance. As a matter of course, the best help to any deaf person is to learn lip reading, but until that is acquired—and it is for some persons difficult to master—an ear trumpet or any other help of this sort is an untold boon to the sufferer from impaired hearing. I shall be glad to give the address of this Cornerite on receipt of request.

Magazines to Donate.

"I will be glad to send magazines to any one who wishes them. Reading is such a comfort when one is shut in during the winter. Your talk on economy interests me so much! Indeed, I find all those on economy in the kitchen especially helpful. The present high cost of food supplies has taught me to learn what I should have already known and practiced and now I am almost shocked as I realize my former wastefulness and see how wicked it is to waste. I would like to receive some quilt pieces, which would help to employ me during the lonely days of the winter. MRS. H. O. S."

Perhaps some one who wishes the magazines may have quilt pieces to bestow or there may be others with more of such pieces than they need which they would be glad to send to this correspondent. I shall be happy to furnish her address on receipt of request.

* *

For Invalids Who Sew.

"Will you please publish my request in the Corner in the hope that Mrs. G. M. will see this? I am anxious to correspondent with her in regard to the English mat work. Can you give me the names and addresses of a few old women who are invalids and shut-ins and who need scraps of silk, cotton, and wool? I have quantities of these to give away. MRS R. B. L."

Your first communication addressed to Mrs. G. M. was published a long time ago and from our not having heard from her I fear that the letter did not meet her eye. I hope this request may be more fortunate and if we hear from her your address shall at once be given to her. Thank you for the offer of the pieces. There is no doubt they will be welcome to many and I foresee numerous requests for your name and address. I hope those who write to you will inclose postage for the mailing of the prices you stand ready to give so generously.

Roses to Exchange.

"For two years the first page I have looked at in the paper has been the Helping Hand. I have saved the patterns during that time; would any one like them? I have some beautiful roses; I would like to exchange six of them for a yellow canary singer. The roses are a year and a half old; some of them cost 75 cents apiece. I also have some music for some one. MRS. I. E."

Who would like these patterns and is there any one who wishes to take advantage of the offer of the roses and to give such a canary as is asked for in return?

* *

Wants Some Letter Friends.

"Please enroll me in the Correspondence club. I am living alone in the woods, six miles from the settlement and two miles from my nearest neighbor. You can judge what the evenings are like. I am not a good mixer, so I left few friends behind when I came here. Some have lost touch—as some will—leaving a small minority of regular correspondents. I'd be pleased as Punch to get in touch with some of the young men and women who go to you in search of letter friends. Pray don't think that I'm working you as a matrimonial agent. Even if I had the wherewithal, I wouldn't ask the kind of woman I want to share the life I must lead for the next five years. What I'm after is some means of filling the frightfully long evenings. I've a few interesting yarns of tropical life, crocodile hunting, etc., to spin, and if you'll help me find an audience I'll do my best to be entertaining. I'm sorry I can get no stamps here. I'd gladly send them if I could. R. C. J."

This should be a delightful correspondent, and I am sure some one will hail the chance of getting letters written by a man of such evident education and of interesting experiences.

Brimstone for Bedbugs.

"I always read the Corner and when I see mentioned the dreadful bedbug I wish the troubled ones only knew of brimstone, which I found long ago to be the best and surest cure. But up to now good intentions have never brought me to the point of telling the Helping Hand of it. First, close all doors and windows of the infested room, but leave some of them so that they can be quickly opened. Place in the center of the room a kettle containing ashes with live coal on top. Having a towel bound over the nose and mouth, sift on the coals one or two tablespoons of powdered brimstone and leave the room at once, closing the door. After two hours, with the breath again protected, open and air the room thoroughly. Drawers, trunk, etc., may have been opened, as in two hours no fabric can have been injured by the fumes. One treatment has never failed. It is better than corrosive sublimate, kerosene, and all others. I have also tried it for moths in a large storeroom. MRS. L. E. S."

Remedies of this sort are always in demand and I have no doubt this new treatment will supply a long felt want. I hope it may be successful. I have myself tried burning what are known as sulphur candles, but without conspicuous success. It is worth while to recollect that the fumes of sulphur or brimstone are likely to blacken or discolor such metals as brass, copper, nickel, etc., and to remove any article made of these or with metal trimmings from the room before lighting the sulphur.

Childhood Ambition Contest.

Did you ever have a childhood ambition—a humorous one? Of course you did. And what you did wasn't anything like what you dreamed. Tell us what your great ambition was—and then tell us how far short you fell. Do it in 250 words, on one side of the paper, and address manuscripts to Childhood Ambition Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune. For each story printed $1 will be paid. No manuscripts returned.

Only Scales She Knows.

When a young child my father took me to a concert, where the star performer was a harpist. She was a beautifully gowned lady, with jeweled fingers, and she captivated my young heart immediately.

Then and there I decided to devote my life to trotting around the country strumming the strings of a harp and melting my audience into ears with my delicious melody.

Now, at the age of 30, the only scales I have learned are those used in weighing out spuds and beans in dad's grocery store. MISS C. E. C.

LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE IF SICK, CROSS, FEVERISH

Give "California Syrup of Figs" at once if bilious or constipated.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach ache, sore throat, diarrhœa, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative"; they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.—Advertisement.

'TIZ' FOR TIRED AND SORE FEET

Use "Tiz" for puffed-up, burning, aching, calloused feet and corns.

"Happy! Happy! Use 'TIZ'"

Why go limping around with aching, puffed-up feet—feet so tired, chafed, sore and swollen you can hardly get your shoes on or off? Why don't you get a 25-cent box of "Tiz" from the drug store now and gladden your tortured feet?

"Tiz" makes your feet glow with comfort; takes down swellings and draws the soreness and misery right out of feet that chafe, smart and burn. "Tiz" instantly stops pain in corns, callouses and bunions. "Tiz" is glorious for tired, aching, sore feet. No more shoe tightness—no more foot troubles.

An Awful Sight With Itching Pimples On Face. Healed By Cuticura Costing 75c.

"One morning I noticed a pimple on my face at the corner of my mouth. It itched and I scratched it so that in a few days pimples were all over my chin and neck. They festered and when I scratched water would come out and they were in blotches as big as a dime. I lost sleep over them, for when my face touched the pillow, the pimples smarted something terrible. My face was an awful-looking sight.

"I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. After the first application I noticed that my face did not itch so, I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and a box of Cuticura Ointment and they were not quite used when the pimples were healed." (Signed) Mrs. L. Goneau, 325 W. 8th St., Superior, Wis., Oct. 19, 1916.

Having obtained a clear healthy skin by the use of Cuticura, keep it clear by using the Soap for all toilet purposes assisted by touches of Ointment as needed. Cuticura Soap is ideal for the complexion because so mild, so delicate and so creamy.

For Free Sample Each by Return Mail address post-card: "Cuticura, Dept. H, Boston." Sold everywhere.

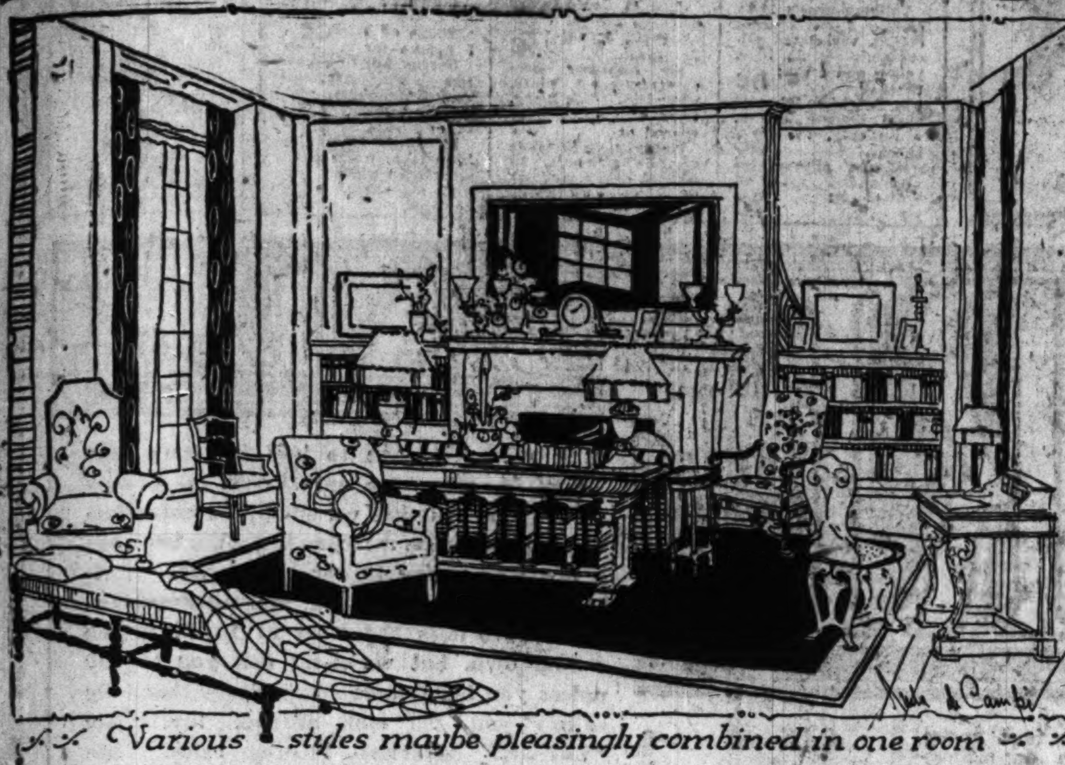
The Home Harmonious

Varying Styles Pleasingly Combined

Anita de Campi



Various styles maybe pleasingly combined in one room

> Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

It is interesting to notice how distinctly different general effects may be made in a number of living rooms without varying the inventory. The list usually comprises a lounge of some sort, reading table, writing desk, two or three easy chairs, two or three small easily portable chairs, one or two "occasional tables," a stool or a bench, and a bookcase.

Descriptions of some of these rooms will adequately demonstrate the extreme variety of styles that is now being employed, all of which are entirely up to date. The main idea is to express character, but the sort of character that is to be expressed is left to the taste of the individual.

Period furnishing is no longer esteemed solely in regard to its historical value. It must breathe the spirit of its time—it must be typical of the emotional tendency of its day. The Gothic is supposed to represent religious fervor, self-denial is depicted in the Cromwellian, abandoned sensuousness is clearly the feeling of the Louis XIV., and light, girlish frivolity, as symbolized in the lovers' knots, the garlands and bows and quivers of the ill fated Marie Antoinette, has left its mark on the Louis XVI. furniture.

Altogether we grow rather weary of the complexity of motives and motifs of period furniture, and are glad that the tendency now is to break away from purity of style and to allow today's dominant characteristic to be one of ordinary comfort.

For general use furniture rather light in scale is most desirable. This bars consistent furnishing throughout in the Jacobean style, which if correct is always too cumbersome for use in rooms that are not of palatial proportions. Anachronisms are wittingly indulged in and nobody cares.

That varying, even incongruous, styles in library or living room furniture may be pleasingly combined is exemplified in the living room illustrated here. The room is in oyster green oddly contrasted with mulberry carpet and wistaria and green figured velour draperies. Touches of scarlet are seen in the book bindings of the open shelf library.

At the right is a desk copied from a piece of the Italian renaissance. The curved front legs are carved by hand. The wood employed is brown mahogany. The large center table is a Flemish piece also heavily carved and made of brown mahogany. The chair in front of the desk completes the group of Italian pieces. It is of carved brown mahogany and being made of solid wood has on its seat a thin loose cushion of Burgundy velvet.

Near the bookcase at the right is a great Queen Anne arm chair, with a fifty inch high back. It is covered with exquisite tapestry and the finely curved arms and legs and understretchers are of walnut. In the foreground is a Jacobean bench covered with old fashioned English silk brocade in two tones of wistaria. A Chippendale arm chair near the bench is covered with diapered needlework in gray green shading to olive. In the midst of all this is a thoroughly modern easy chair upholstered in oyster green velours.

The sofa, in the Chesterfield style, with triple loose cushions of down, is covered with striped satin damask. It is sketched as it was seen drawn up before the fire, though it must be noted that this arrangement does not obtain this year as it did last. The popular placing of the sofa, in spite of all the preaching we hear about placing the furniture according to the structural lines of the room, is with one end near the fireplace and the other slanting away from it. This allows one to sit near the fire without inhospitably turning her back to the rest of the room.

The "ocasional tables" (this is the season's name for all small tables upon which a lamp, a book, or tray may be placed) seen at the sofa ends are made with a gate leg and folded double top.

Out of range of the sketch are a real Jacobean gate leg table with two drop flaps, a Queen Anne stool, and a Sheraton arm chair. The latter is done in deep crimson silk.

Another room, with old ivory paneled walls, presents a medley of exquisite coloring in the rugs and upholstery. The furniture, which has walnut frames, has low French legs in the gracefully curved Louis XV. style.

Pulled diagonally out from the wall near one end of the room is a Chesterfield sofa nearly eight feet long. This is upholstered in beautiful material that merits description. It is woven in wide stripes, first a stripe of satin damask in tobacco brown, and then one of brocade in floral design carried out in full colors—rose, blue, yellow, and dull green, on a parchment colored ground.

Three large fitted cushions filled with down are on the upholstered seat and three are stood upright at the back. At each end is a bolster shaped velvet cushion, trimmed with gilt lace and heavy gilt tassels, and thrown on top of these are two full round cloth of gold cushions veiled with rose colored gauze and trimmed with rose taffeta quillings. Have you kept count of the cushions? Ten in all.

Over the mantel is an old family portrait framed in dull gold and hung to the molding by two heavy brown silk cords and tassels. A candlestick at either end of the mantel is fitted with electric lights, and these take the place of side wall lights. No other ornaments are on the mantel.

Several standard lamps are in the room, and several small table lamps, but a notable decorative feature is the absence of fixed side wall and ceiling lights. Electric sockets are placed at convenient points in the floor and baseboard. A tea table beside a chaise longue gives an intimate touch. Some old silver placed on this table catches the glow from the pink shaded candles. A crimson carpet covers the floor.

In place of a sofa an upholstered day bed is used, and at each end of it is a perfectly square huge feather pillow covered with blue and yellow damask in stripes ten inches wide. They are bound with silk cord and trimmed at the corners with extravagant tassels.

Now I must try to describe the window draperies, made of this same striped stuff. Flat lambrequins are used with the stripes running up and down. The lower edge of the lambrequin is made uneven in this way. The yellow stripes are cut straight across; the blue stripes are left longer than the yellow ones and are trimmed into points with a big tassel hanging from each point.

A walnut corner cabinet contains an assortment of Chinese blue ware, and the tediousness of the dull blue and yellow is relieved by a little nest of emerald green lacquered tables and a breadth of ornamental Chinese embroidery framed upon the side wall with a band of dull red Chinese brocade woven with a barely perceptible pattern in gilt thread.

Does it sound awful—red and green and yellow and blue? But it is not awful at all. It is all so carefully modulated that it is lovely. The secret of its beauty lies in its yellowish tinge. If cerise had been introduced instead of the yellowish Chinese red the effect would have been indescribably hideous. The portieres as well as the inside window curtains were made of the striped material, matching the lambrequins.

Answers to Inquiries.

MRS. W. H. B.: Why not use inside draperies to soften the effect of your "too much curtaining"? Chintz would be lovely for this purpose and it is not expensive. If you wish to do away with the roller shades, let your curtains be on rods and brass rings, so they can easily slide back and forth. Suppose you insert a strip of rose silk in the net that you use for your French doors.

* *

MRS. M. W.: It would be impossible for me to pass upon your vase without having seen it.

* *

MRS. G. W. E.: With everything as plain in design as your letter indicates your whole interior to be, I believe that oriental rugs would be preferable to self-colored ones. No, I would not advise a plate rail in the dining room, but do approve of the all white kitchen. Why not cover your leather furniture with chintz? Side lights are more popular than center lights.

* *

MRS. W. McK.: Use a light shade of old blue in your living room. Either all blue or blue and taupe would be nice for the upholstery and let the frames of the furniture be in American walnut.

* *

MRS. E. P. C.: Yes, it is quite correct to have a desk in the living room in addition to the writing table. If your desk is one of the old fashioned slanting drop front, you can improve its appearance by putting a small book shelf on top of it.

* *

MISS L. B.: I don't believe that a rocking chair is a good resting chair. To me it always suggests so much muscular exercise. Much more restful is a large, round, low backed upholstered chair. When you sit down in this chair you are not exercising. Satin brocade is about the best material to use for gilded chairs. I must say, however, that gilded chairs are not at present in favor. The general blend of good taste is toward simpler things. Try Du Barry pink for your inside draperies. Sunfast is about the most practical material. For the sun parlor doors use plain ecru net.

* *

MRS. W. B.: I like your idea of the green and white window blinds. Old Dutch blue is a popular color for painting shutters just at present, but I think with your dull red exterior the green and white would perhaps be better. I think you would be better pleased with light putty colored tinting for your side walls. Green has lost some of its favor. Yes, green draperies would look well with tan walls, provided you trim them with tan. I would suggest green velour on one side and green and tan stripe on the other. Sunfast is good material and is popular, not pure white, but ecru. Yes, it would be well to furnish the two rooms much alike. I think your idea for the guest room is pretty. Use chintz for your curtains and colonial furniture. In the bathroom use white curtains and wash rugs. Use white curtains for your kitchen—have a pair of curtains on the lower and upper sash so they will go up and down with the windows. Let the woodwork in the bedroom be old ivory.

Weight Reducing Contest.

> Did you try my method for reducing as outlined for Mrs. Eva Lane, who lost thirty-six pounds in six weeks? How much did you lose? Did you stick to it or not? I want to hear your experiences, whether you were successful or not in reducing. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published. Your chance for earning the dollar will be as good if you slumped on the reducing job as if you stuck until you got rid of pounds of flesh. Your name will not be printed. Address Antoinette Donnelly, "The Chicago Tribune."

Now for a Complete Hug.

I was one of the good natured fatties and had joked about my rotundity as much as had any of my friends. However, I was aware that while my male acquaintances joked and laughed with me I was shy of a steady like the other girls had.

Then the man came to town and in short order we found out that we were meant for each other. When he waxed caressing for the first time and tried to put his arm around me, he laughingly said: "Guess I'll have to chalk mark where my arms reach and then hug the rest of you at a second try."

Say, the Mrs. Lane dope looked good to me. I would have been willing to have taken a strict diet of lemons had it been ordered. No flunking of the treatment on my part and I've lost over twenty pounds in weight. I'm going to get a complete hug at one try. M. C. R.

How I Won My Mate.

> How did you win the love of your mate? What measures, if any, did you adopt? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "How I Won My Mate." Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

A Lucky Tomboy.

Among my friends I was known as the luckless tomboy, and I suppose that was why I won my future husband in the way I did.

My home was two dark blocks from the street car line and I knew I was being followed by a man who had tried to flirt with me on the car. He had almost caught up with me when I saw an automobile coming down the street. I started as if to cross the street and just as the machine came in front of me I gave one leap and rode away on the running board.

Needless to say, the young man was quite surprised to find he had a passenger and laughed outrageously when I said: "Let me off at the next corner, please."

We are engaged now and I thank my lucky stars that I am a tomboy. R. S.

Suitors' Mistakes Contest.

> Did you make a mistake that cost you the one you wanted to win more than any other? Was it an unkind remark, a selfish deed, a mean or careless one, an error or tendency of your past come to light? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Mistake That Cost Me the One I Wanted Most to Win." Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Tribune."

Monday Was Wash Day.

As a certain favored suitor often had expressed his admiration for feminine daintiness I took particular pains to make a nice appearance for him, especially one week end, when he visited in our lakeside cottage.

Figuring that I could keep it up about three days, for his delectation I sported in crisp sport skirts and spotless "middies," never worn more than once, danced in ruffled frocks over lacy petticoats, added a pale colored sweater for the somewhat oily launch, and motored in a white coat which had then to be sent to the cleaner's.

When Monday came, unspeakably hot, and in a creaseless linen suit I had waved good-by to him, I turned back to the cottage relieved, and in twenty minutes was enjoying solid comfort, relaxing in the hammock in a torn and faded bathing suit, my hair coming down, and my shoes and stockings elsewhere.

Suddenly the fastidious suitor appeared on the scene. He had merely lost his train; I lost him. I. B.

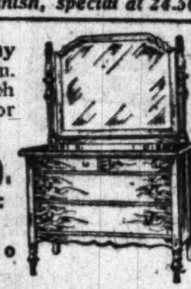
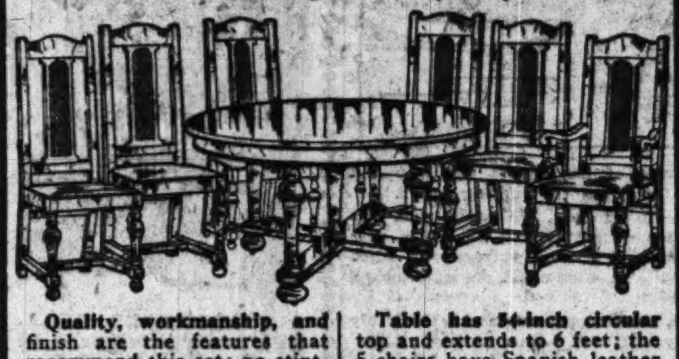
Solid mahogany dresser, 22x45 in. top, 28x34 French plate mirror. For this sale, 39.50.

Chiffonier to match at 37.50.

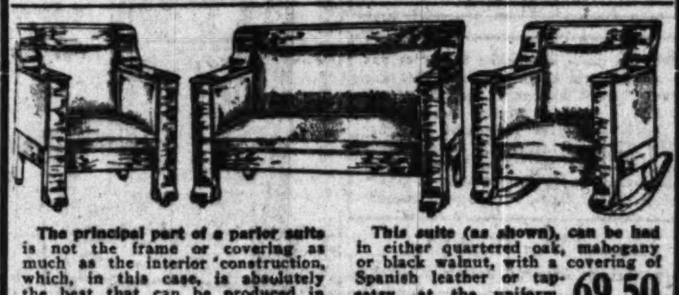


7-Piece Dining Set (as shown), 44.50



Quality, workmanship, and finish are the features that recommend this set; no stinting or abridging of detail work necessary to produce a reliable piece of furniture. 44.50

Table has 54-inch circular top and extends to 6 feet; the 5 chairs have Spanish leather slip seat on full box construction; armchair is full size and matches chairs.



The principal part of a parlor suite is not the frame or covering as much as the interior construction, which, in this case, is absolutely the best that can be produced in furniture of this grade.

This suite (as shown), can be had in either quartered oak, mahogany or black walnut, with a covering of Spanish leather or tapestry, at the uniform price of 69.50

All Cotton Mattresses

5.50

This low price is the result of a good contract made some time ago, enabling the maker to use up the last lots of a discontinued pattern of art ticking; only about 350 mattresses in this lot, in the various sizes; all deeply tufted, with Imperial roll edges; full size weighs 50 pounds; any size, special Monday at 5.50

This is a good example of what we justly term our "Quality" furniture, made with special care from excellent materials, finished in a thorough, workmanlike manner. 49.50

The chairs have Spanish leather seat over full box construction. Table has 54-inch top, extends to 6 feet, and is equipped with patent slide locks. A bargain.

WE ask no one to buy furniture here merely upon our say-so. It is only natural that we should be enthusiastic about our own merchandise. We have had it made according to our own order—selecting our own styles, finish, and workmanship. We believe it is the kind of furniture you should own, but we don't ask you to buy unless you have made comparisons that fully satisfy you. So look around. Investigate "VALUES" advertised in other sales. Then come to The Fair—and you'll buy instantly.

Suffrage Leaders Planning to Help if Nation Calls

By Mme. X.

EVERY night as we go to bed we say, "What is happening on the high seas?" Every morning our first thought is, "Has it come?" And yet, with that extraordinary power of adaptability characteristic of us Americans, we are getting used to this state of tension and are in danger of thinking that our Damocles' sword is made of pasteboard and hangs by a rope. Not all of us, however, are satisfied with this comfortable point of view, and among the women of the nation, as among the men, there is a growing movement to prepare for the possibilities of the unknown future.

In line with this tendency is the council of suffrage leaders from all over the country, called by the president of the National Suffrage association, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, to meet at Washington on the 22d of this month to discuss the question of offering the entire personnel and equipment of this big organization to the government to use in whatever direction the government sees fit. As the organization represents half a million of active workers and a "plant" of hundreds of thousands of dollars in equipment, it is a very tangible offer of help which will be tendered the administration.

The idea is to consult with the government as to the direction in which the energies of the association can be most useful and for it to take entire charge of some department of service.

* *

English Women in Relief Work.

In the event of our being drawn into the war all suffrage work will stop, as was the case in England, where the nonmilitant suffragists, under Mrs. Edgar Fawcett, were the only completely organized numerically and financially powerful body of women able to take instant hold of the relief work.

They organized hospitals, ambulance corps, social service workers, women for work in munitions factories, and many other branches of war relief. On the other hand, curiously enough, the militant suffragists' organization went all to pieces. Mrs. Pankhurst and her daughter, Chrystabel, in the employ of the British government, are now using their oratorical powers to promote recruiting.

Mrs. Tiffany Blake, Miss Suzette Ryerson, and one or two other officials high in the councils of the Chicago Equal Suffrage association, are among others going to the Washington meeting on Thursday. The powwow winds up with a big massmeeting next Sunday, when Secretary of War Baker will make the chief address.

Already women are taking part in conferences looking toward the defense of the nation. Mrs. Hugh Scott of Washington, wife of Gen. Scott; Mrs. Willis Martin of Philadelphia, and Miss Grace Parker of New York are members of a national defense board which includes in its membership several cabinet officers. All of which indicates the increasingly important rôle women are playing in public affairs.

* *

Many Leading Aimless Lives.

In spite of these widening horizons there seem to be just as many women whose entire program seems to consist in spending their days in the shopping district, going from counter to counter, pricing and handling goods they seldom buy. They eat more or less unnourishing luncheons at noon. They sit in the various rest rooms for hours at a time gazing vacantly into space or looking over samples, and only go home when counters are being draped with night time covers and clerks are putting their wares away. Dreary, unprofitable existences, born of a nation's unhealthy prosperity!

Happily not all my kind are of this class. But the proportion of those who are leading active, useful, stimulating, more or less altruistic lives, is small.

Arthur Aldis, one of our most public spirited citizens, made the statement some time ago that out of our population of over 2,500,000 there were only about 3,000 who ever gave to any philanthropic cause whatever, and that out of this 3,000 there were less than a hundred who could be counted on to give rapidly and generously to any well vouched for cause presented to their attention.

* *

A Call on a Banker.

Apropos of this, that it takes a stout heart to work for a good cause is evidenced by the experience of two prominent Chicago women, members of some of our oldest, best known, and most highly esteemed families. They were making a personal campaign to collect funds for a most admirable and appealing charity. They went to see the president of one of our greatest banks in his office. They sent in their cards and, after being kept waiting in his anteroom some time, they were ushered into his sanctum sanctorum. He looked up from his desk—not stood up—and asked:

"What can I do for you, ladies?"

They explained their errand carefully. At the end of their discourse he scrutinized them cautiously and then what do you think he said to two of the most charming, admirable, altogether lovely and lovable women in Chicago? He responded in this wise:

"Come now, tell me what there is in it for you two."

The younger and less experienced of the women began to explain the utter lack of any ulterior motive in their mission, but the other interrupted her to say, with much dignity: "We've evidently made a great mistake in coming here," and the two departed to tell their story to an old friend of theirs, that most sympathetic, understanding, and generous of men, John J. Mitchell. He quickly called up his brother banker and showed him the error of his ways, but a lifetime of expiation on the part of the latter will hardly wipe out the memory of that morning call.

* *

A Bit of Real Charity.

One of the finest examples of real, personal philanthropy was the offer made last week by Mrs. Arthur Ryerson to the woman's board of the Children's Memorial hospital of the use of her new and beautiful house at 2700 Lake View avenue for convalescent children who have been discharged by the hospital and are yet too frail for normal life.

This interval of convalescence is particularly dangerous for those suffering from heart troubles, so twelve of these youngsters will be domiciled in the two lower floors of the Ryerson mansion, with two nurses and a social service worker to look after them. Mrs. Ryerson will provide cots for them and wheel chairs for those that are not strong enough to run or walk into the park in front of the house.

Mrs. Mason Bross, whose grandmother, Mrs. Nancy Foster, founded the hospital, has given this same summer establishment for convalescents the use of her electric automobile for the season, and the women's board of the hospital has set aside a sum to run it.

The idea is such a fine one that it ought to inspire to similar action other owners of lovely homes on parks and boulevards who consign these abodes to empty, silent darkness during the long, hot months of the summer, while an overcrowded city lies stifling, noisy, and noisome behind them.

Mrs. Nelson Aldrich of New York is the only other woman I know of who does a similar bit of real charity. Every summer she turns her attractive home on Riverside drive to this same kind of service. She is one of the well known Chanler family, a sister of Robert Chanler (the erratic artist), of Winthrop Chanler (New York state's lieutenant governor), of "Archie" Chanler, of "Jack" Chanler (of "whose looney now?" fame), and of Mrs. "Jack" Chapman.

It is a curious fact that, while most women appreciate the beauty and value of Mrs. Ryerson's act of farsighted benevolence, many men regard it as quixotic, impractical, and not to be made into a general custom. Can you think of any easily achieved thing which would accomplish so wide a diffusion of the sense of the universal brotherhood of man as the opening to sick or ailing children of the lower floors of all the houses on the Lake Shore drive and our many parks during the summer months when the families to whom these homes belong are away enjoying the beauties and freshness of the country?

* *

Sponsor for Italian Sculptor.

Meanwhile Mrs. Ryerson's new house is growing daily more attractive, more completely a part of and a background for the unusual family it shelters. Its latest acquisition is a charming portrait bust in bronze of Mrs. Ryerson's youngest daughter, Miss Ellen Ryerson.

This is the work of a young Italian sculptor who has been much taken up in New York this winter, a romantic looking individual with a romantic sounding name, Aroldo du Chene de Vere, called by his friends simply Du Chene. He is a youth of great talent and much personal charm and is now quite the vogue in Gotham. He has an order from the Knickerbocker club to make some fountains for it and to do this under perfect conditions he is going to Cuba to get the "feeling for fountains" you best achieve in a tropical or semi-tropical country. He is also doing some things for Ernesto Fabbri's new house in New York.

Mrs. Benjamin Guinness of New York is a friend of his and has done much to make him and his work known there, while Chicago sponsors are, besides Mrs. Ryerson, Mrs. John Carpenter and Robert Allerton.

The latter has been disporting himself in Honolulu this winter, where, garlanded with—what do the Hawaiians call their flowery trimmings? Obis?—he has been enjoying all the delights of that land of lotus eaters.

News from Wandering Chicagoans.

From faraway Ecuador comes news of the Carter Harrisons, who seem to have wandered well off the beaten line of travel, while from even more remote Java comes word from the Joseph Adamses that sounds as if written by wayfarers on another planet, so removed do they seem from the absorbing events of today in this country.

From still another direction the mail brings news of not so happy a tone. Although it is now several years since Dr. Walther Wever was German consul general in Chicago, there are still many here who will remember him and his wife and their friendly home in Dearborn avenue. Their only son, Ernst, at the outbreak of the war enlisted in the German cavalry, but later was transferred to the aerial service, where after thorough training he was given a "battle flyer." He was killed in an air fight in November with two English aeroplanes and now lies buried at St. Quentin, France.

The Wevers' only other child, a daughter, Anne Marie, was married this winter to a Munich civil engineer, Wilhelm Durand.

The vice consul in Dr. Wever's time, Auguste Schillinger, is fighting on the German west front. Guido Sabetta, who was Italian consul here at the same epoch, is fighting among the Italian troops on the Isonzo. He was among the first to cross that now historic stream and was wounded, invalided home, and returned cured to the front. So are dispersed a little group of foreigners who once played quite a part on our social stage.

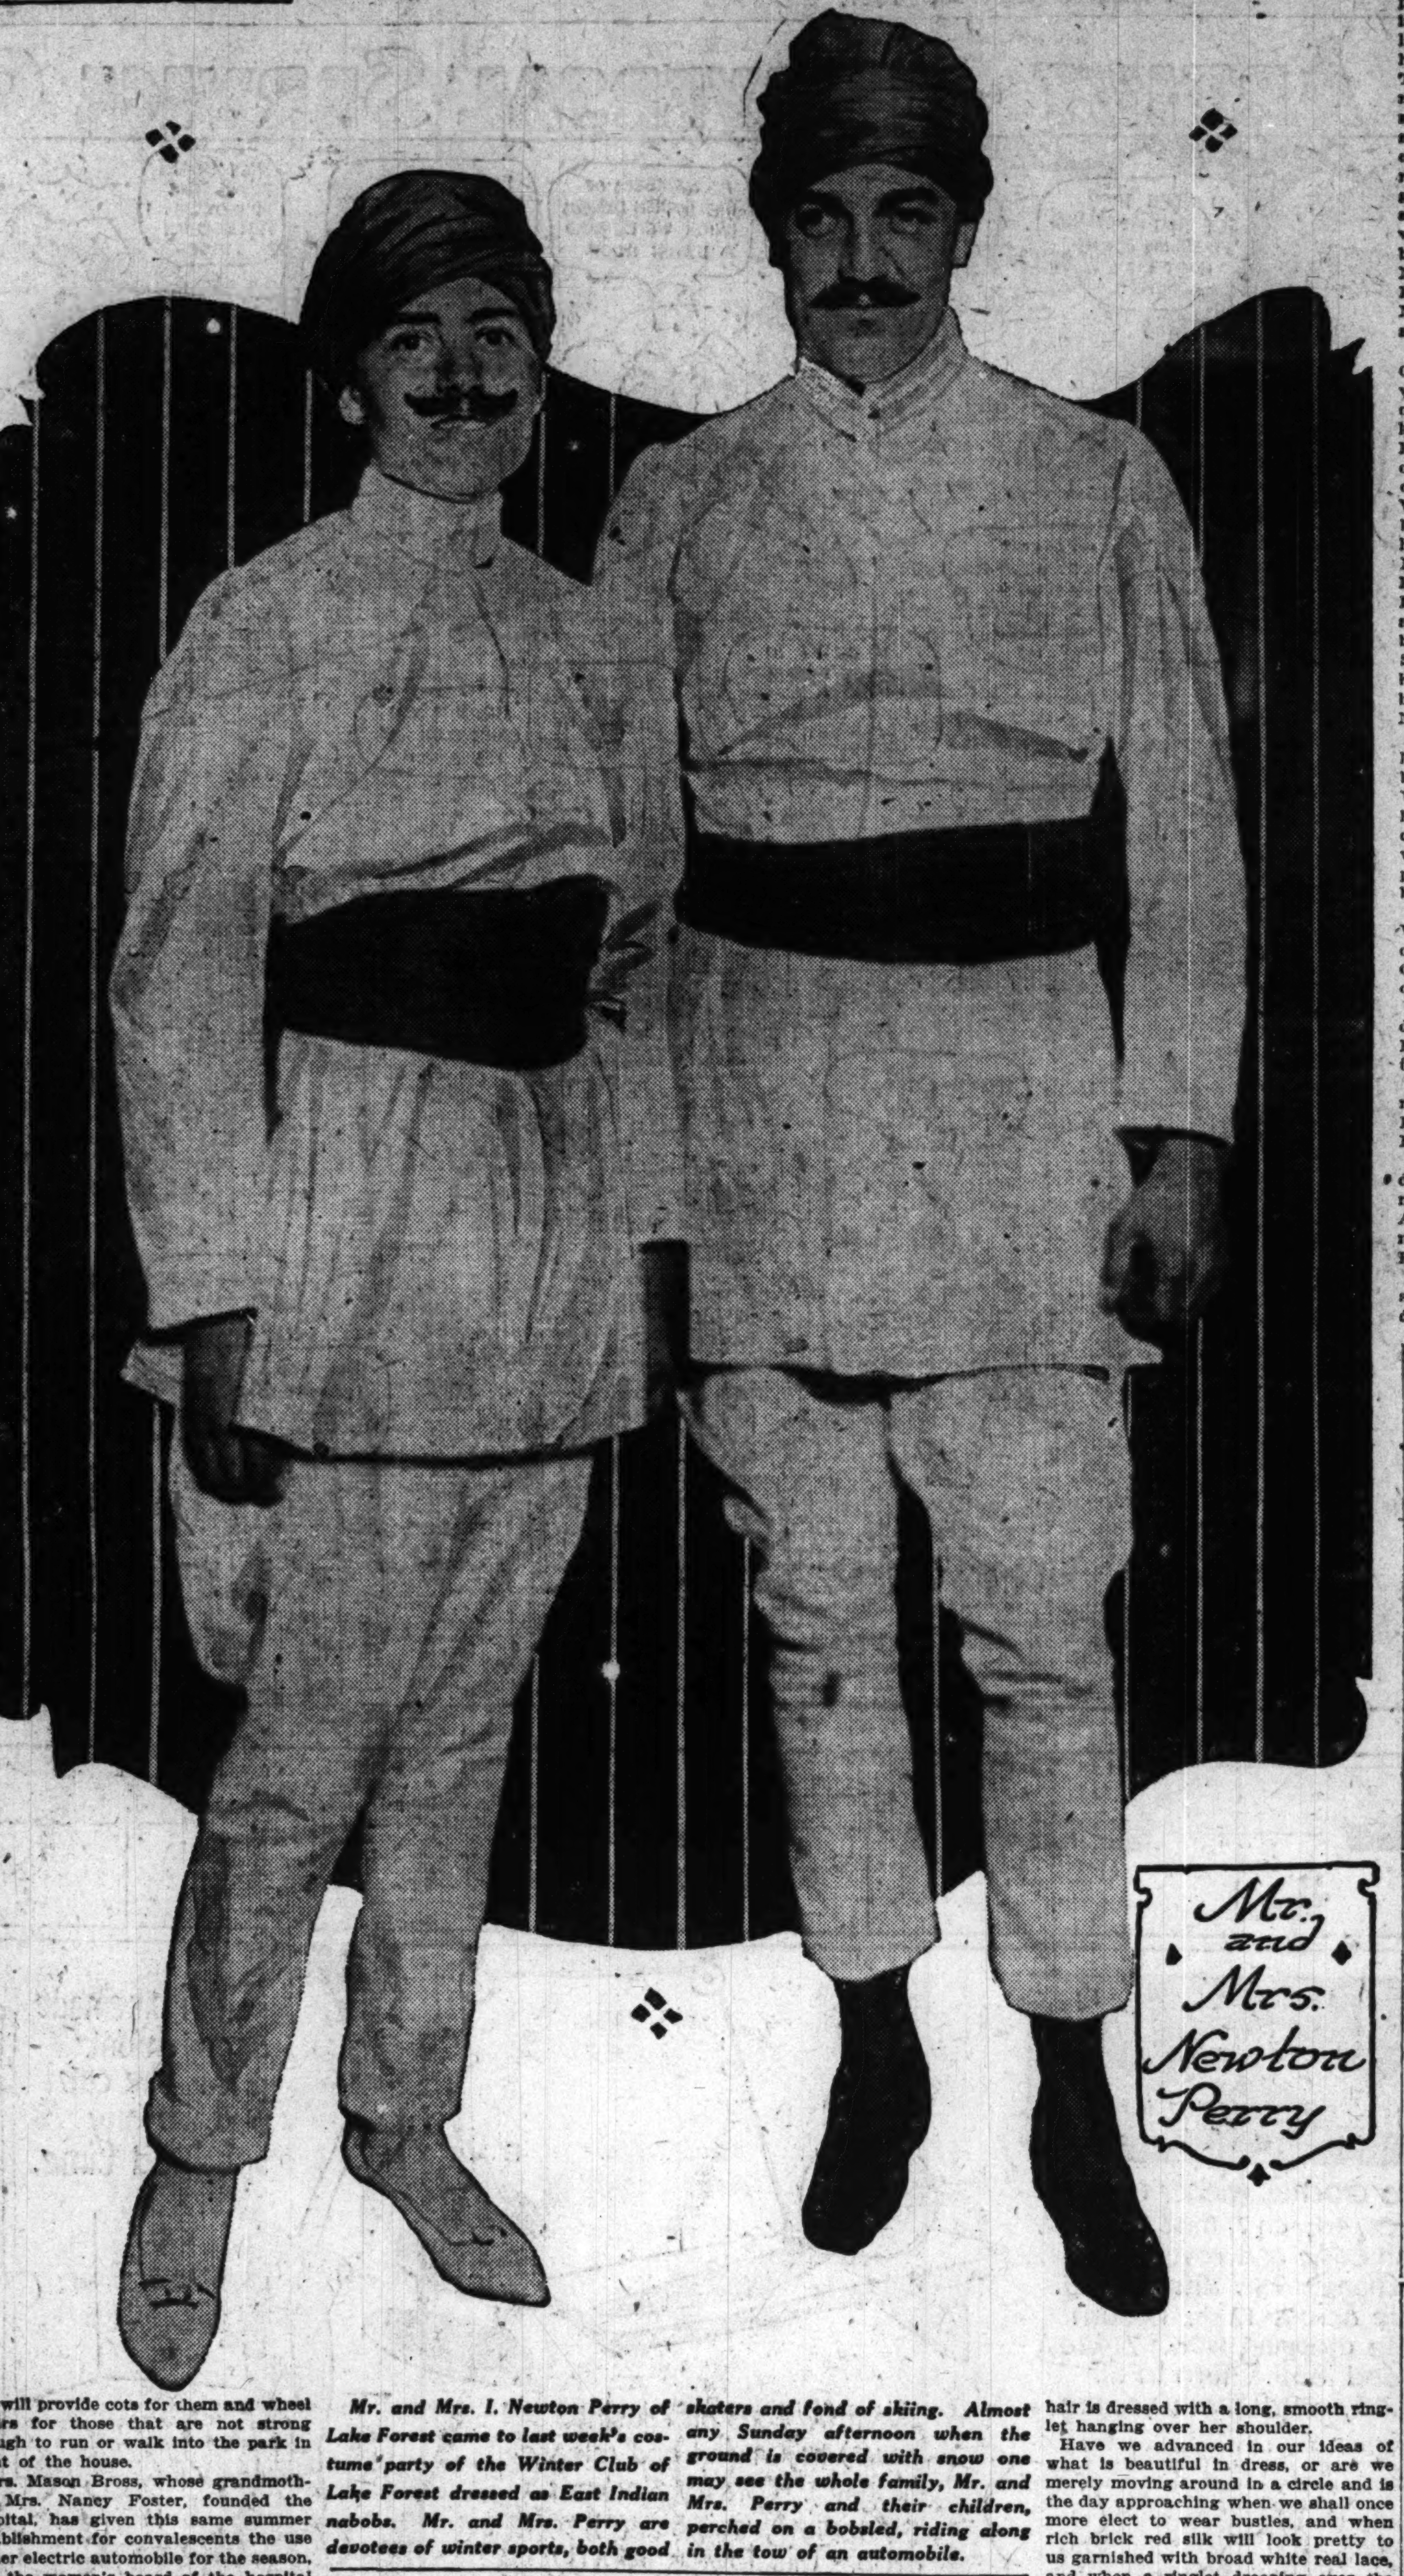
Werner Portrait of Mrs. McGann.

An aftermath of the famous Lincoln inaugural ball, given by the Arts club on Jan. 26 is Frank A. Werner's portrait of Mrs. Robert McGann in her mother's Worth gown of the vintage of nearly half a century ago. Mrs. McGann posed for the artist one whole day in his handsome studio in the Fine Arts building, a most exhausting bit of posing, as the portrait represents her standing in a simple, natural attitude, with her hands clasped in front of her.

The dress is of a seemingly impossible red, is trimmed with broad white point lace, and is made with a basque, an overskirt, a bustle, and a train. The hair is dressed with a long, smooth ringlet hanging over her shoulder.

Have we advanced in our ideas of what is beautiful in dress, or are we merely moving around in a circle and is the day approaching when we shall once more elect to wear bustles, and when rich brick red silk will look pretty to us garnished with broad white real lace, and when a ringlet drooping over the shoulder will seem the acme of coiffures?

No, You're Wrong; They're Not Both Men.



Mr. and Mrs. Newton Perry

Mr. and Mrs. I. Newton Perry of Lake Forest came to last week's costume party of the Winter Club of Lake Forest dressed as East Indian nabobs. Mr. and Mrs. Perry are devotees of winter sports, both good skaters and fond of skiing. Almost any Sunday afternoon when the ground is covered with snow one may see the whole family, Mr. and Mrs. Perry and their children, perched on a bobsled, riding along in the tow of an automobile.

News of Chicago Society

WEDDINGS

A north side wedding of much interest to the Chicago society world was that of Miss Lucy Arrick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Arrick of 1307 Ritchie court, and James M. Walker, son of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Walker, which took place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in St. Chrysostom's church. Immediately after the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The bride wore a gown of ivory velvet made with a court train of chiffon, and she carried a formal bouquet of white sweet peas and lilies of the valley. Her only attendant was Miss Josephine Parrott of Indianapolis, Ind., who wore a gown of French blue taffeta and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The ushers were Arthur Walker and Wirt Walker, brothers of the bridegroom; Lawrence Meeker and Perry Shepard. Charles Louis Strobel Jr. served as best man. Mr. and Mrs. Walker will be at home after April 1 at 931 Foster avenue.

COCOANUT OIL MAKES A SPLENDID SHAMPOO

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than the most expensive soap or anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS

Dinner to Mark 10th Anniversary of College Club.

By Hazel Whitaker.

NO debts, an endowment fund, a record of having paid all debts within ten days, and a comfortable sinking fund—these are some of the Chicago College club's grounds for celebrating on its decennial anniversary on Friday evening. A special dinner will be served at 6:30, at which the president, Mrs. I. S. Blackwelder, will act as toastmistress. The former presidents, Mrs. C. A. Whyland, president of the Musicians' club, and Miss Clara Lachlan, president of the Cordon, will be among the guests of honor.

Some of the founders of the club who will be present are Mrs. Thomas Balmer, Mrs. Charles E. Herrick, Mrs. S. C. Stanton, Mrs. Harlan Ward Cooley, Mrs. E. G. Hobler, Miss Grace Jackson, Miss Sophonisba Breckinridge, Mrs. George E. Bliss, Mrs. John E. Blunt Jr., Mrs. Mason Bross, Mrs. James S. Porter, Mrs. Avery Coonley, Mrs. Norman W. Harris, Mrs. William S. Hay, and Mrs. Andrew MacLeish.

Prof. Paul Shorley will give a toast, to which Miss Alice Greenacre will respond for the club. Mrs. William S Kenny and Miss Julia Cooley will read some of their original poems, and Miss Marjory Valentine is to give an original monologue. Mrs. Whyland is one of the musicians who will appear on the after dinner musical program which Mrs. Woodward Holmes has arranged.

The first committee that met to consider the organization of such a club was composed of Miss Elizabeth Telling, Mrs. H. W. Hobler, Miss Esther Witkowsky, Miss Sara Tunnicliff, and Miss Mary Estelle Cook, representing the twenty-three delegates that had been appointed from ten different college organizations and the Association of Collegiate Alumnæ. A massmeeting was held, as a result, and it was decided to organize as soon as 300 college women pledged membership at $10 each for three years. This was speedily accomplished, and headquarters were established in the Fine Arts building, where the club remained until three years ago, when the present rooms in the Stevens building were leased until such time as a clubhouse of its own might become a reality.

The financial history of the club is truly unusual. The members have never been assessed, nor has the club raised its dues or initiation fee; all the life memberships have been set aside exclusively for the endowment fund; the large sinking fund has been well invested, and all bills have been paid within ten days of presentation. This financial record, the club feels, has been made through the wise management of the club auditor, Mrs. P. S. Peterson, who has held this position ever since organization.

◆

During the presidency of Mrs. Ira Nelson Morris it was decided that as most of the members belonged to other clubs which were actively engaged in all branches of club work it would be best to make the College club one for social relaxation, a place for friendly meetings, where one might gain a little more "poise." So it is that the club never has joined the federation nor entered into any special philanthropies, but has become the center for a diversity of interests. There are language and dancing classes, formal parties, cozy Friday afternoon teas, at which there is always some delightful form of entertainment; the glee club; the dramatic circle, which gives a yearly play (this year it is to be "Green Stockings," under the chairmanship of Miss Anne Lowe); a special artists' tea and art exhibit, and all through the year dinners, receptions, and lectures by persons of note.

Fifty-six colleges are represented by the 900 members.

The present officers are Mrs. I. S. Blackwelder, president; Mrs. Edgar Lee Masters, first vice president; Miss Susan W. Peabody, second vice president; Miss Effie B. Warvelle, recording secretary; Miss Louise Fairman, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Harry H. Lobdell, treasurer; Mrs. P. S. Peterson, auditor; Mrs. Louis B. Erwin, historian; Mrs. Woodward Holmes, Mrs. Edmund D. Sewall, Mrs. Orrington C. Foster, and Miss Marjory Valentine, directors.

There is a Special
GOSSARD CORSET
for Your Figure!

Since our discovery of the Nine Ideal figures, millions of women have learned for the first time that Venus de Milo only portrayed the average figure, and in addition there are eight others, each an ideal in its class.

$2.00, $2.50, $3.00, $3.50, $4.25, $5.00, $6.50, $7.50, $8.50 and up to $25.00.

Women Now Prefer Gossard Front Lacing Corsets

Few women realize the great advance that has been made in corsetry during the past 15 years. During that time front lacing has been introduced, accepted and is now preferred over the old fashioned way of lacing your corset.

But even greater than the front lacing idea has been the character which has been woven into every fibre, steel and stitch of every Gossard Corset manufactured by this organization. So different is the style, comfort, wearing service and quality of a Gossard Corset that once you are correctly fitted to your model, regardless of price, your idea of corset values is changed forever. In the past few years Gossard Corsets have been sold to women in Paris, London, Buenos Aires, Melbourne, Sydney, New York, Chicago and thousands of other cities throughout the United States and all parts of the civilized world.

Only on their merit have Gossard Corsets won such universal approval and acceptance.

Social Leaders and Designers Choose Gossard Corsets

These women have tested Gossard Corsets from the four great service viewpoints: Style, Comfort, Wearing Service and Price. To many women the stamp of approval by these people has been somewhat of a surprise, because no corset has enjoyed the unqualified approval of so varied and representative a class of critics. Physicians of note prescribe them, fashion writers and artists everywhere advocate them.

Because of our tremendous manufacturing facilities and the fact that we have graduated over three thousand trained corsetieres in our college of corsetry, it is now possible for you to obtain the same fitting service and values in Gossard Corsets at your favorite shop or store, and this applies to practically every woman in this great city, as well as the United States. This universal and comprehensive fitting service and the exceptional style maintained by us bring to you a new corset service at an actual saving of money and time.

Go to your favorite store or shop and be fitted to your Gossard today. There is a special Gossard Corset designed for your figure and the price range is from $2.00 to $25.00.

NEWS OF NEW YORK SOCIETY.

By Mme. Y.

Society Folk and Stage Stars Give Play for War Fund

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Smart angels flitted about the stage of the Century theater in a performance on Wednesday for worthy charities. Some of the most prominent women in society offered to coöperate with some of our best known stars for the benefit of the war fund to the allies. The entertainment was to consist of tableaux representing famous paintings and a frieze in which angels are prominent.

Laurette Taylor recited a poem, Caroline White, whom Chicago knows better than New York does, sang; Elsie Janis gave a song in which debutantes furnished the chorus, and—novelty of all the offerings—the choir of old Trinity church down on Broadway appeared on the stage. Shades of our ancestors who erected that church, and who thought that to attend the theater was to take a long stride toward perdition!

Douglas Fairbanks and John Barrymore were offered positions as angels in the tableaux, but looked bashful at the mention of wearing halos. Their final regrets arrived when they found that they had also to wear wings and carry harps. They comprised by pledging themselves to sell programs. Maurice Roche, the belle of all young men of the 400, never flinched when the matter of wearing wings was put up to him. You would have said he had been an angel all his life from the social ease with which he assumed the rôle.

Among the other angels were Miss Marion Tiffany, Miss Mimi Scott, Miss Maud Kahn, Mrs. Oliver Harriman, Mrs. Charles De L. Oelrichs, and Miss Alice Gordon Drexel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Drexel.

Firemen Rush to Refreshments.

Palm Beach had its thrill of excitement last week when the fire alarm sounded across the community and a big blaze shone afar off. Word ran as rapidly as fire itself that the wigwam of Richard Croker was burning. Volunteer firemen, many of whom are the smart guests of the winter resort, hurried down the road on foot to do their part toward staying the catastrophe. The fire department itself turned out in full force, and the whole town was agog.

They arrived at the scene of disturbance panting and dust laden, and what did they find? The biggest bonfire of history in those parts. E. Clarence Jones was giving a picnic. They called it a beach party. It took place at his villa, which lies between the beach and the Breakers hotel.

Mrs. Gurney Munn, who was Miss Wanamaker, and last year took the principal part in the moving pictures which her set made at Palm Beach, was among the guests. She was one of the most ardent providers of refreshments to the mistaken firemen, fashionable and other. There is today one part of the smart circle there who think they have a joke on the other part.

When the curtain rose on the third act at the Gayety theater on Monday evening the audience gasped in silence at the beauty of the scene. It was several moments before they recovered themselves to applaud. The scene represented a studio in the tower of a chateau high above the treetops and against the moonlit sky.

Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney designed it. Indeed, this rich woman of fashion is going in for getting up stage scenery. In a few words of her own let her tell the way of it.

"It is not altogether because of the accomplishment of this one setting that I want to go into stage decorating," said Mrs Whitney the other day in her studio, in West Eighth street, which is maintained with all the system and efficiency of the Metropolitan museum. "I have been much interested in stage effects for some time. Perhaps some of the tableaux and backgrounds I had arranged were favorably spoken of; at any rate, the stage society asked me if I would like to try a regular stage setting, and I asked at once for the play, so I might read it. I chose the third act for which to make the setting because of the studio in the tower and because of an air of mystery and aloofness which the lines seemed to convey and which rather stirred one's pictorial imagination. Then I did my best to try to illustrate the story of the act in the design, instead of confining the scene to a background."

Thus is one more woman, whose natural destiny was idleness and society, definitely won over to the world of active art. She is the richest woman who has ever attained eminence in art. The sincere manner in which she follows her artistic career is indeed pleasing to see. She has given over a period of several years large sums of money for prizes to further the careers of young artists. She has also been active in war charities, and soon after the outbreak of the war she gave $200,000 to the organization of a field hospital for wounded soldiers, to be affiliated with the American ambulance. Since that time she has made other large contributions.

The play for which she has designed the setting is called "As It Was in the Beginning."

Lady Fitzclarence Talks of War.

Lady Susan Fitzclarence is here. She arrived last week. Indeed, if America is indebted to the war for one thing it is for the influx of British and other aristocracies into our country and their association with us on equal, unpatronizing terms. She came on the Kroonland and she went immediately to the residence of Mrs. Benjamin Gunniss on Washington square. She is on her way to California to join Mme. Melba and go with her to Australia. Her husband, who was in the Royal fusileers, died at Gallipoli. She is the daughter of the Earl of Hardwick.

"The renewal of ruthless submarine warfare," she said, "was to be expected. The German announcement did not create any astonishment. England is not astonished at anything any more. We believe that Germany's announcement is a confession of weakness. It will have no effect upon our prosecution of the war. We have suffered so much; but we can suffer more. No one fears starvation, and every one is philosophical regarding the efforts to conserve food supplies. The food dictatorship is in the experimental stage, and hardships are expected, but we have abundant faith in our ability to see the thing through.

"If there is any discontent in England it is over the fact that so little is permitted to be published about what our navy is doing. It makes us furious when we hear some one ask why our navy does not do something. No English navy in all our history has done so much. It has kept the seas open. It has made possible the transportation of millions of men to the front. I know from talks with naval officers something of the hardships these seamen are enduring. Night after night, month after month, without rest or relief, they stand guard around the British isles and France and the long line through the Mediterranean. You cannot understand what an infinite task it is to be forever trailing the sea for mines and submarines, but it is that watchfulness that is saving the allies and may save America, too."

Resting from War Work.

Lady Lister-Kaye is here. She came to rest. If you will remember, she was and is a daughter of the late Antonio Yzenaga del Valle of Louisiana. She married Sir John Pepys Lister-Kaye, formerly lieutenant of the royal horse guards, and is a sister of Miss Emily Yzenaga and the late Antonio Yzenaga. She is an aunt of the present Duke of Manchester, who married Miss Helen Zimmerman of Cincinnati. She has been simply killing herself with war work, as have most of the gentlewomen of England, and her many friends here are now trying to take care of her.

Among those who have turned their faces westward are Mrs. Richard Stevens and her daughter, Miss Dorothy Stevens, of Manor house, Castle Point, Hoboken, N. J., who are on their way to Coronado, Cal., where they will remain until spring. Mrs. John Nicholas Brown and her son have gone to Pasadena until April. Mrs. H. Fairfield Osborn and Mrs. Josephine Osborn have gone to Santa Barbara, where they have taken a home for a month. Santa Barbara also claims Mr. and Mrs. Garrett B. Kip. They will remain there two months and then return to Barrytown, N. Y.

Others bound for the Pacific coast are Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Reid and also Mrs. Fletcher F. Ryer, who passed the winter at the Ritz-Carlton, and will be back in the spring.

Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt Jr., who returned from Aiken last week, will stop there again on her way farther south. The colony includes also Mrs. Augustus F. Kountze, who is a guest of Mrs. Gouverneur Morris.

It was expected that war alarms would hasten some of the weddings set for the Easter season. Last spring, during mobilization, there was a rush of weddings and hastened engagement announcements. But the war clouds have come just at the wane of the season when most of the smart weddings have passed into social history.

GIRLS! BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR WITH 'DANDERINE'

Get a 25 Cent Bottle! Freshen Your Scalp! Stop Falling Hair! Remove Dandruff! Grow Lots of Wavy, Glossy, Beautiful Hair—You Can!

If you care for heavy hair that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous, try Danderine.

Just one application doubles the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you can not have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised, that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now?—Advertisement.

Corns Peel Right Off With "Gets-It"

2 Drops, and the Corn is a "Goner"

When you've got to walk on the sides of your shoe to get away from those awful corn-pains, there's only one common-sense thing to do. Put a drop or of "Gets-It" on the corn right away. Pain and inflammation will disappear, the corn will begin to shrivel from that instant—then it loosens and falls right off.

There's no other corn-remover in the world that acts like "Gets-It." No new discovery has been made in corn-removers since "Gets-It" was born. Don't forget that fact. "Gets-It" does away forever with the use of salves that irritate, bandages that make a bundle of your toe, plasters that half do the work, knives and scissors that draw blood. Use "Gets-It"—no more digging or cutting.

"Gets-It" is sold everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent on receipt of price by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.

PIMPLY? WELL, DON'T BE!

People Notice It. Drive Them Off with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, the bowels and the liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel—there's never any sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with "a dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints, and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result.

Take one or two nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists.

Miss Theresa McArdle and Frank Marshall will lead the grand march, assisted by Miss Marion Sweeney and James Tracy. A long list of patronesses includes Mr. and Mrs. George M. Reynolds, Ex-Gov. and Mrs. Edward F. Dunne, Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Sweitzer, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Traeger, and Mr. and Mrs. Roger C. Sullivan.

The alumnæ and former students of St. Mary's college, Notre Dame, will give a bridge tea on Tuesday at the Congress hotel.

PERSONALS.

Miss Emily Larned of the Virginia hotel must be regarded as heralding in the glad spring because it is through her efforts of two or three years' duration that Chicago is finally to have those joyously rumbling juggernauts which make the New York visit of one from the provinces a unique experience. The motor busses are soon to come and Miss Larned, as the one who has gratuitously devoted so much of her time and ingenuity to securing them, will be hostess to her friends on the first bus ride and will give a luncheon at one end or the other of the ride—either at the South Shore Country club or at the Edgewater Beach hotel. The exact date of the arrival of the first one of its kind is not known, but it will probably be about the end of this month.

Among the winter resorters, many Chicagoans are in southern California. Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan, Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Munroe, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred H. Shotwell, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Woolf, Miss Alice Cudahy, and Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Cudahy are in Pasadena. In Riverside are Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Fuller, in Santa Cruz are Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Waller, and in Los Angeles are Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Ryerson, Mr. and Mrs. Clyde M. Carr, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Andrews, and Mrs. John R. Scott.

Mr. and Mrs. William Shippen Jenks of 745 Lincoln parkway left on Thursday for Pasadena, Cal., to be away until May.

The close of the winter sports season at the Exmoor Country club, of which F. Edson White is president, marks the exodus of many of the members to California and Florida. Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Carr, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. L. Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen M. Paine, Mr. and Mrs. Richmond Dean, and Mr. and Mrs. Ward W. Willits are among those at Pasadena. Mr. and Mrs. Allen M. Clement returned from there this week. Mr. and Mrs. Howard H. Hitchcock and Mr. and Mrs. Charles K. Foster are at Beverly Hills.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard H. Spaulding Jr. of 221 East Walton place, left on Friday for Palm Beach, Fla., to be gone a month. With them was Miss Louise Meadowcraft of 2801 Prairie avenue.

Mrs. Ida Couch Wood of Winnetka is entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Combs of Onwentsia club.

Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Keep of 1200 Lake Shore drive are in New York for a week's visit.

Pension Fund for Episcopal Clergy Gets Boost Today

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE Protestant Episcopal churches of the nation will unite today in making an offering for the church pension fund for the clergy, which it is hoped will increase the total fund of the church to more than $5,000,000, the amount required by March 1 to put the pension system into operation.

The churches of the Chicago diocese are aiming at $200,000. Of this amount $150,000 has already been subscribed. The securing of the fund has been under the care of the Church club, of which Angus S. Hibbard is president.

Mr. Hibbard will speak today in Trinity church. C. W. Folds and George Higginson Jr. will speak at St. Chrysostom's. Courtenay Barber will speak at the Church of the Redeemer. Other members of the club will speak in other churches. Suffragan Bishop Griswold will speak in four parishes. The subject in every church will be the pension fund, and a multitude of small gifts and pledges as well as large ones will be solicited.

Bishop Lawrence of Boston, who was set apart by the house of bishops and permission of the diocese of Massachusetts to lead in the gathering of the initial sum of $5,000,000, reports subscriptions have to date totaled $4,800,000.

The federal council of the Churches of Christ in America, representing thirty Protestant denominations and 18,000,000 communicants, has designated today as a national day of prayer. Last Sunday was observed locally as a day of prayer by request of the Chicago Church Federation council. The Chicago council also indorsed the federal council's appeal. The special object of prayer is the war crisis through which the nation is passing. The appeal is signed by Frank Mason North, president, and Charles S. Macfarland, secretary.

Fathers and Sons day will be observed this morning by all of the churches in the Hyde Park and Woodlawn group of churches. The arrangement was made by coöperative action.

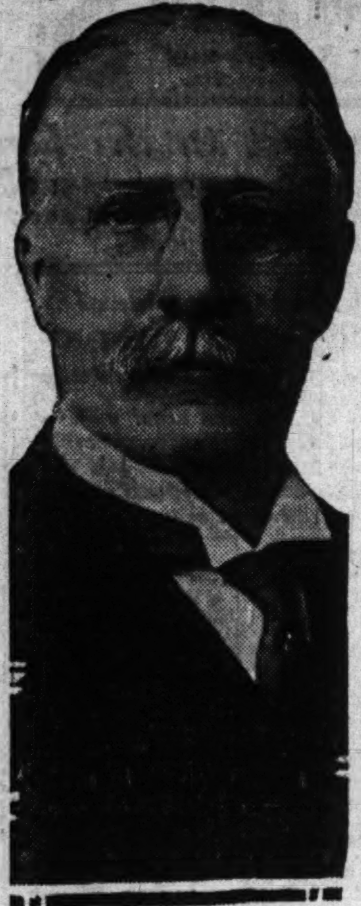
The Baptist ministers' meeting will be held tomorrow at the Training school, 2339 Vernon avenue. The Rev. H. F. Waring of Berwyn will be the speaker.



Dr. W. H. P. Faunce
Brown University
Providence, R. I.

The Rev. William Herbert Perry Faunce, D. D., LL. D., for eighteen years president of Brown university, Providence, R. I., will be the speaker this evening at 8 o'clock at the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall. His subject will be "The Achievement of Brotherhood."

Dr. Faunce is an advocate of the league to enforce peace which was indorsed recently by President Wilson. He is a believer in the need of the United States adjusting itself to international relationships, basing his belief on observations made by him in a tour of the world.

Dr. Faunce graduated from Brown university, class of 1880, one year ahead of Charles Evans Hughes, candidate for the presidency on the Republican ticket in the last election. He received the honorary degree of doctor of divinity from Brown, Yale, and Harvard and the degree of doctor of laws from six colleges and universities, including Dartmouth, Wesleyan, Dennison, and Amherst. He is the author of the following books: "The Educational Ideal of the Ministry," "What Does Christianity Mean?" and "Social Aspects of Foreign Missions." He was for ten years pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist church, New York.

Frank H. Armstrong of Reid, Murdoch & Co. will preside. Thomas C. MacMillan will give the Bible talk owing to the illness of Mr. C. W. Barnes, president of the club. The club quartet and the chorus will sing and Mrs. Catherine Howard Ward will give the organ recital.

Archbishop G. W. Mundelein's letter appealing to the Catholics of the archdiocese to take care of the little children hitherto aided by the money of the state, which was rendered unavailable by the decision of Judge Jesse A. Baldwin on Jan. 25 restraining the state from paying the money to the various institutions on the plea they are sectarian, is meeting with generous responses from Catholics of various nationalities, who have pledged to take care of the children in their own homes or to furnish the money for their support.

There were 1,200,000 copies of the letter printed—650,000 in English, 150,000 in German, 250,000 in Polish, 50,000 each in Bohemian and Lithuanian, 25,000 each in Slovac, Croatian, and other languages.

"Is a Man Fit to Vote Who Is Too Proud to Fight?" This is the subject of an address by the Rev. H. D. Jenkins before the Presbyterian ministers tomorrow at 10:30 at the assembly room, 509 South Wabash avenue. Dr. Jenkins was requested by a vote of the Presbyterian ministers to give the soldiers' side of the question of war. Dr. Jenkins says he believes it is time the ministers heard something besides the William Jennings Bryan version of pacifism, and cited in evidence that the request of the Daughters of the American Revolution and of the Grand Army of the Republic post to have Dr. Jenkins' address delivered in a large suburban church was denied, while pacifists' arguments were freely heard in the same church.

Three of the Roman Catholic churches near the loop will hold noon day Lenten services beginning next Wednesday, which is Ash Wednesday. The churches are St. Patrick's, Desplaines and Adams streets; St. Mary's, Ninth street and South Wabash avenue, and St. Peter's, Polk and Clark streets.

At the Holy Name cathedral, Superior and North State streets, there will be sermons by the Rev. A. J. Wolfgarten, D. D., professor in Cathedral college, on Sunday and Wednesday evenings. Friday evenings the stations of the cross will be said. Sermons will also be preached at St. Mary's, St. Peter's, and St. Patrick's.

* * *

The welfare committee of the auxiliary of the House of the Good Shepherd, 1126 Grace street, has begun a Big Sister movement, similar in purpose in behalf of young women to the Big Brother movement of the Holy Name society in behalf of young men who need special advice and care.

* * *

An interdenominational meeting in the interest of missionary literature for women and children in foreign lands will be held on Tuesday at 2 o'clock in the Immanuel Baptist church, Twenty-third street and South Michigan avenue. Mrs. C. E. Vickers will preside and Mrs. O. R. Williamson will lead the devotions. The speakers will be: Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery, Miss Flora L. Robinson, India; the Rev. Cornelius H. Patton, and Miss Alice M. Kyle.

Loneliness is not confined to Chicago, but is a cause of distress in Oak Park, according to the Rev. F. R. Godolphin, rector of Grace Protestant Episcopal church of that suburb. The rector bases his appeal for the building of a new parish house on this plea. "The young men and women living in the boarding houses of Oak Park," he said, "need a place to read, play games, dance, and enjoy dramatic and literary activities."

* * *

The Rev. Henry Irving Batcheller, Sedalia, Mo., will succeed the Rev. Albert E. Selcer as acting rector of the Trinity Protestant Episcopal church, Twenty-sixth street and Michigan avenue. Mr. Selcer became rector of Grace church, Pontiac, Ill., on Feb. 15.

* * *

Dr. Walton Hubbard, C. S. B., Spokane, Wash., member of the board of lectureship of the mother church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston, Mass., will lecture in the edifice of the Fourth Church of Christ, Scientist, Harvard avenue and West Marquette road, at 3:30 today and at 8 p. m. tomorrow.

* * *

The Englewood Baptist church, Sixty-second street and Stewart avenue, the Rev. Smith T. Ford, pastor, has adopted plans for the building of a $50,000 parish house. An every member canvass for funds and subscriptions began on Feb. 11.

* * *

The young people's annual conference of the Reformed Episcopal church of the Chicago diocese will be held next Thursday evening in the St. Paul's church, West Adams street and Winchester avenue. Bishop Samuel Fallows will speak on "Lincoln and Washington."

* * *

The Epworth league of the Methodist Episcopal church will hold its annual banquet at the Auditorium hotel Tuesday evening. Bishop Thomas Nicholson will be the speaker and the Rev. W. R. Weddespoon of St. James' church will be toastmaster.

* * *

The Rev. Gerald Grattan Moore is the new priest in charge of the Advent Protestant Episcopal church, Logan boulevard and North Francisco avenue. He came to Chicago from Trinity church, Belvidere, Ill.

San Antonio

Golf all Winter

Take a winter vacation in sunny San Antonio, where you can golf every day on fine eighteen hole courses. Every outdoor sport is at its best the winter long, and the beautiful scenic roads to historic Spanish missions and other points of interest make motoring and horseback a pleasure. A delightful social life, fine hotels, hot sulphur baths and purest water.

When you go to sunny San Antonio, take THE Sunshine Special via Iron Mountain Route

The Sunshine Special is something more than a string of cars and a locomotive. It is a steel train plus a service equal to that found in the great metropolitan hotels.

Luxurious, up-to-the-minute Pullman sleeping car accommodations, the perfection of dining car service and unceasing attention for the comfort and pleasure of patrons.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE IN THE TRIBUNE

A $50,000-FURNITURE-DAY | AN EXTRA SAVING OF "S. & H." STAMPS.

Rothschilds' Aim For Monday—"A $50,000 Furniture Day"

SELLING WILL START SHARP AT 8:30 MONDAY MORNING

Can a store sell $50,000 worth of furniture in one day? We know it can! We know that values like these would sell $100,000 worth of such furniture in one day if we could handle the crowds. Chicago is the greatest furniture buying city in the world today, and Rothschilds' have already broken all existing Chicago records. With the firm belief that we can sell $50,000 tomorrow, our furniture men have been told to cut loose.

With furniture 25% higher than last year, and our savings averaging at least 25%, this makes a clear saving to you of 50%. Quality for quality, size for size, and designs equal, there is no hope of matching these prices. That is why we know we can sell $50,000 worth tomorrow. Furthermore, you can pay for this furniture and not miss it by joining our Furniture Club. Easy payments. Large purchases, charged or paid for tomorrow, may be delivered as late as May 1st. Single articles and perishable pieces can not be held more than 30 days. Come early. Tell your friends.

Your New Corset Should Be Uppermost in Your Mind

Third Floor—Center

for no one can well expect new clothes to look and hang properly over an old corset, so the well dressed woman always buys her spring corset first. We feature the Nemo models, with busts from the extremely low to the extra high, so that each woman finds here the individual corset her figure demands, and each Nemo corset brings, as well, relief for some particular part of the anatomy. We offer the services, without added charge, of our corps of experienced corsetieres, considered by far the best in Chicago by the foremost of the city's modistes and physicians—they have at hand each of the numerous Nemo models and each in all sizes, so that they can fit you perfectly. Why not have our corsetieres fit you and demonstrate the efficiency of our fitting methods?

Nemo corset style No. 511, as illustrated, for the woman who does not particularly require abdominal reduction, but who is too heavy otherwise—has triple reducing bands of semi-elastic webbing whereby the corset skirt is made flexible and comfortable, while producing extreme reduction of back, hips and upper limbs, the popular girdle top, sizes 22 to 36, at........... $5

Nemo corset style No. 359, as illustrated, in a dainty pink coutil, girdle top, a Nemo self-reducing corset that will promote good health by giving complete hygienic support with ease and comfort. The gentle friction between the straps and body of wearer gradually drives away excess fat and the figure becomes permanently smaller and lighter, sizes 22 to 36, at........... 3.50

News and Views of the Theater

By Percy Hammond.

HAVING bragged on Wednesday morning of my intimacy with the several principals involved in "The Lioness," it is proper now to record that such exultation was premature. I am advised indirectly but authoritatively that no friendship whatever exists; that where there is enmity to art there can be no amity for artists, and that the soft words of evasion addressed to Miss Anglin's masterpiece were as the kiss of Judas. Mr. Tyler remarks that even a child would know that "The Lioness" is not intended to be a play, but merely a background for Miss Anglin's colossal study and interpretation of rudimentary womanhood, developed by plausible experiences into a great exemplar of feminine bigness, broadness, wisdom, elegance, and sophistication.

That I did not see "The Lioness" in that light is regarded by him as meretricious. However, I still insist on Mr. Tyler's courage and eagerness; on Miss Anglin's intelligence and skill; on Mrs. Atherton's invention and insight, and on Mr. Hughes' wit and worldly wisdom. But I wish that they would omit from their play the heroine's extensive recital of her first adventures with a cigar, and also that interlude wherein she sits at the feet of etiquette and takes a long lesson in the argot of refinement. As Miss Lillian Russell once said of Mr. Joseph Leiter's anecdotes, "They age me."

Some months ago this department suggested to dissatisfied artists that its columns were open to such rejoinder as they chose to make in their own behalf. It was admitted that actors and playwrights, after months of rumination upon a drama, were much more qualified to assay its values than a flurried penman, hot-foot on the trail of a city edition. None of them has seen fit to take advantage of that opportunity. I renew it to Mr. Tyler with the reservation that he bar Mr. Rupert Hughes, for whose insidious verbal legerdemain I confess an honest fear. You who read the Red Book Magazine will recall that by sheer verbal sleight of hand Mr. Hughes turned the carnal little demi-vierge of "What Will People Say?" into a sweet and lovable heroine, making, meantime, propinquity in the fox-trot, a [illegible] study in psychophysiology.

With the ignoble envy that withers at another's joy I peruse each morning the cheery correspondence of Miss Mae Tinee. Though unequivocal in her estimations of the worth of the movie heroes, her judgments seem never to irritate. She says that they are good or that they are bad, and her readers, idolizing her, are convinced. Her mail is a cornucopia of agreement and encomium, whose laudatory ingredients she dismisses serenely with adorable "Twekkums" and "I-thank-yous." My mail I open with apprehension because within each envelope is contained a chef d'œuvre of imprecation. Perhaps Mr. Tyler's hurt feelings will be measurably healed if I quote to him the opening line of an ode addressed to me apropos of my remarks on "The Lioness." This poet began:

"O! Thou obese votary of the worthless word!"

and, continuing in the same deprecatory strain, proved that all that criticism is not criticism. Its full contents will be available to "The Lioness" outfit any time they choose to take me back.

"Julia and Donald and Joe," as Mr. Carle called them in the Cohan revue, are pictured in today's illustration, employed in the graceful gestures of "Sybil," tonight's entertainment at the Illinois. The most proficient manipulator of the filmy underskirt, Miss Sanderson, will be seen as an adventurous prima donna of Bronsk, Russia, with whom Mr. Brian as a Muscovite Grand Duke flirts. Mr. Cawthorn appears as Spreckles, who is Sybil's German impresario and who sings, in the course of a masked ball, a lamentory ballad entitled "I Can Dance with Everybody but My Wife."

Sir Herbert Tree, deeming this an inauspicious time for sea voyages, will not return to England as he had planned. Instead he will resume his American tour on Washington's birthday and will remain in America until sailing the ocean blue becomes less hazardous.

Sir Herbert's present plans, as sketched by him, involve returning next season for a tour in plays not written by Shakespeare: one made from "Oliver Twist," with him as Fagin, and one from "David Copperfield," in which he would be Peggoty. Persons with a sense of what the public wants advise him to revive "The Red Lamp," in which he acted on his first tour, in 1894-95; others with a sense of what they would like to see tell him he ought to do Ibsen's "An Enemy of the People" when he returns.

The members of the cast of "Arms and the Girl" had an exciting story to tell of their Chicago experiences after they got back to Town. So unruly were the audiences at the Blackstone, said they, that performances were almost impossible. The disturbances were caused by the presence of German soldiers in the play, a fact which enraged patriotic Chicagoans and made them hiss.

Augustus Thomas advised the Columbia School of Journalism last week that the way to become a playwright is to learn newspaper reporting, acting, and boxing. "If it were just as respectable," added Mr. Thomas, "I'd rather be an actor than a dramatist."

Among the actors who escaped incineration last week in Boston when the Hotel Lenox burned were Valli Valli, Miss Charlotte Ives, Miss Elizabeth Murray, and Louis Stone.

The producers of "The Wanderer" have begun to work the same religious game with it that they did with "Experience." They gave passes and sandwiches to 800 New York clergymen the other night, and one of the preachers made a speech from the stage advocating attendance.

After next Saturday's performance of "Robinson Crusoe Jr." Al Jolson and his troupe will leave for Detroit as the first step in a tour that will last until November and extend to the Pacific coast.

A new national anthem, in which are blended the twin American characteristics, love of women and love of country, has been composed by George M. Cohan. It is called "There's Only One Little Girl and One Little Flag for Me," and is a companion hymn to "Amurrica, Honolulu Loves You."

"Cyrano de Bergerac" has been revived in Paris: its vogue in the United States did not outlast the season of its production here, 1898-99. When, two years later, Bernhardt and Coquelin gave it as an item of their repertoire in this country, it drew the smallest audiences.

The managers of the Paris theaters, large and small, have added a new war-tax on their receipts to the price of the tickets.

The London librettists and song writers have been writing to the papers in protest against the unpatriotic conduct of Albert de Courville, who copies the Ziegfeld, Dillingham, and Winter Garden shows for use there, in importing "Gene" Buck and "Dave" Stamper to provide material for one of his extravaganzas, called "Zigzag." They are the song writers and jesters who carefully go over "The Follies" and brighten it up after George V. Hobart turns it in to Mr. Ziegfeld. The protesting Englishmen denounce Buck and Stamper as a "couple of neutrals."

"Lilac Time" having been acted by its author, Miss Jane Cowl, without casualties, she now is dashing off another drama, "Daybreak" by name.

Henry Miller laughs mischievously as he tells of the good joke he once played on the dramatic reviewers of Washington, D. C. Both of them pooh-poohed "The Great Divide" when it was first presented there, so after its 500th performance in New York Mr. Miller took the company to the capital at large expense for one special critics' performance "just to let them have a second look at a hopeless play." Mr. Miller remembers how much his revenge cost him, but he has forgotten the critics' names.

Ring W. Lardner has submitted a baseball comedy to Bert Williams of the "Follies," according to a dispatch from New York.

A. H. Woods thinks he may name his new Chicago theater the "Alwood" instead of the Randolph.

At its first christening "Turn to the Right" was called "Like Mother Made"—the title's reference being to the marmalade concocted by the angel-mother in the play. Mrs. Winchell Smith, wife of one of the authors, didn't like it and changed it to the present name.

R. H. Burnside, who puts on the extravaganzas for Mr. Dillingham, thinks that the day of the "small" musical play is ended. He spent Friday in Chicago examining "Hip, Hip, Hooray!" in the hope that he might find a way to reduce its area so that it could properly be mounted in places without large theaters. "It can't be done!" he decided, adding: "The problem of putting together shows like this is precisely that of a government which builds superdreadnaughts without making provisions for docking facilities. There is not in all the land a stage which can take the pieces as they are designed for the Hippodrome in New York. 'Hip, Hip, Hooray!' just happened to be of a design which could be reduced for a platform like the Auditorium's and like those of large theaters in two or three other cities. The current Hippodrome piece cannot be toured at all: it will be junked at the end of the season. But there is no way out in sight. And big things of the Hippodrome kind and like 'The Century Girl' are naturally killing the market for the old-fashioned, 'nice' musical piece. Some day, of course, we shall find a limit, like the vaudeville actor told about by Mr. Dillingham. The fellow was clever, but always out of work. 'What is the reason you are not booked?' asked Mr. Dillingham. 'Well, Charley,' the actor replied, confidentially, 'it is this way: I have got my salary so high that none of the managers will pay it.'"

Half a million dollars is the net profit to date of "Daddy Long Legs," according to testimony in a suit brought by Patrick Casey, a theatrical agent, who wants a part of it. Mr. Casey says that Klaw & Erlanger made $200,000 on "O! O! Delphine" and $150,000 on "The Argyle Case," little if any of which came from Chicago.

Laurette Taylor continues, from report, to be prosperous in her New York experiment with "The Harp of Life." If it should let down before hot weather, she will do another of the numerous pieces written for her by her husband, Mr. Manners—one called "The Wooing of Eve," which she tried out in some cities a year ago. It is the plan of her managers to keep her in New York all next season, starting in September with "Happiness," in which she has another Cinderella rôle like Peg, and, when that is done, mounting "Barbaraza," also by Mr. Manners. Miss Taylor, some time since, gave it as her ideal of life in a big city to be able to play forever and forever without leaving Broadway save for the purpose of an occasional rehearsal in a nearby community.

Vaudeville

Miss Ray Cox is one of a large number of American performers in London who have expressed a desire to come back, since the breaking off of relations with Germany.

Miss Emily Ann Wellman is acting in the two-a-day in a sketch whose title is made subservient to the descriptive name, a "flash drama." The several characters in a story of marital infidelity are seen by the audience only when each is speaking: he or she is picked out by a spotlight, which is shut off at the end of the speech, while another spotlight is turned on the next speaker.

The Keith vaudeville theaters forbid their vocalists to sing war songs complimenting nations other than the United States. Mr. Kohl some months ago put the ban on pacifist ditties at the Majestic, with especial reference to "I Do Not Wish My Boy to Be a Soldier."

Madame Bernhardt will reach the Auditorium March 25, at the head of a vaudeville combination. She will, it is said, play the trial scene from "Madame X.," impersonating the young lawyer for the defense.

The La Salle Opera house will withdraw March 4 from the exhibition of sinful films to make a place for Nora Bayes and her vaudeville troupe. There will be twenty-five of them and a numerous orchestra. Miss Bayes' headquarters was changed from the Playhouse to the La Salle because she is allowed unlimited time at the Madison street theater.

Chauncey Olcott is planning an excursion into vaudeville, his last play having been a failure.

Harry Green, star of the vaudeville playlet, "The Cherry Tree," will endow a room in the American Theatrical hospital, now being built on Irving Park boulevard.

Herman Lieb has revived the one act play, "Dope," and will present it in western cities.

Burns Mantle's New York Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Jane Cowl has played the game. From the day she was selected to assume in New York the rôle of the heroine in "Within the Law," which Emily Stevens had created in Chicago, she has been the most interesting (and incidentally the most beautiful) of harassed heroines, the niftiest of dramatic Niobes, to be found in the New York sector. No author has permitted her during that time more than half an act of happiness, and the rest of the evening she has spent either in shedding tears or in preparing to shed them. Tearfully speaking, she has been, indeed, the salt of the earth, the Clara Morris of her time, and by so being she has created a faithful following of weeping willies and wilhelminas.

But from time to time Jane has rebelled. Not that she ever has been ungrateful, but that frequently she has been unstrung. She has, she insists, a sense of humor, which demands occasional exercise. She is perfectly willing to concede the poet's claim that into each life some rain must fall, but she has strenuously demanded a more even distribution. And since her managers have refused her plea she has written a play for herself in which she does not have to cry until the last three minutes of her evening's entertainment.

This play was given its metropolitan production last week. "Lilac Time," it is called, and it is a war play. In writing it Miss Cowl had a collaborator, another Jane, Murfin by name, and a novice as far as we know. By the Cowl following it has been received if not with pronounced enthusiasm at least in a spirit of friendly interest.

"Lilac Time" takes its title from the Burbank calendar, being a drama of the spring of the year when the thoughts of young things, on the stage and off, turn to love. It was in lilac time a year ago that a company of English soldiers was billeted at the home of Jeannine, in northern France. Jeannine was a pretty little daughter of the republic, with that passionate love of country which makes some phases of the war almost beautiful. "It is for France," they cry, these wonder women, whenever the tragedy presses close upon them, "It is for France." And that is enough.

One of the English officers loved Jeannine, and she him, and they were to be married by the priest in the village. But he was sent on a dangerous mission into the enemy's lines before the ceremoney could take place. For a year Jeannine waited hopefully for him, eager to show him the son she had borne him, but when lilac time came again his regiment marched through the village and he was not with it. The colonel brought her his croix du guerre and the report of his heroism, and though she all but broke down, Jeannine stood bravely in the window, waving her baby's cap at the departing regiment and shouting as best she could: "Vive la France!" as the curtain fell.

A frail war play, this, with the background so big and so vital that it rather dwarfs the story told in front of it. But it offers Miss Cowl a chance to prove the sense of comedy that she really does possess, she being quite a cheerful little party for two of the three acts, and it will keep her from her season's flood of tears for a time, at least. Orme Caldara plays her lover, Henry Stephenson the colonel of the regiment, and a small group of French actors lend verisimilitude to the incidental scenes.

If Clare Kummer were not the cousin of William Gillette that fine American actor would probably not be starring this day. But it happens that such a relation exists, and so we find William, sixty-one years experienced and still willing to learn, playing the hero of "A Successful Calamity" at the Booth theater, the outstanding comedy hit of midseason theatricals.

Miss Kummer is, as it seems pertinent to explain whenever her name is mentioned, the author of that sentimental screech of other days called "Dearie." This year she has blossomed forth as a writer of a new kind of farce that actually threatens to establish her as a sort of feminine Charles Hoyt. Her popularity probably will never be as wide as that of Hoyt, but it is not the least exaggeration to say that she is capable of creating as distinct a fashion in light entertainment as he.

She wrote, earlier in the season, a farce called "Good Gracious, Annabelle." It was a mad, flippant, sophisticated sort of thing, artfully cast and staged by Arthur Hopkins, and it started a four months' career in a gale of laughter.

"A Successful Calamity" is neither so irresponsible nor so crazy as Annabelle, aiming at times at rather a high level of comedy, but it is equally distinctive. The plot of it concerns the ruse of a rich old man to earn for himself at least one quiet evening at home. His young and beautiful second wife, aided and abetted by his grown children, have led him a perfect dance in society, and he is sick unto death of dinners and dances, teas and operas. His butler gives him an idea. They were talking of the joy of a restful home evening and the rich one asks the poor one how he managed it in his family. "Well, sir," replied the butler, "you see the poor don't get to go much." So the rich one straightway decides to be poor. That night he soberly informs the family that he is a ruined man.

Immediately there is a revolution in the domestic and social order. The useless son threatens to go to work and as an economical starter decides to give up the prize fight tickets he had ordered for that night. The gadabout daughter promises to do without, everything but the barest necessities in future, and the flighty wife is really thrilled by the thought that at last she can be of some practical help to her husband. And they all decide to have dinner at home.

Then the farcical twist. With his restful home evening finally accomplished, and with everybody gone to bed early to get a good night's sleep, the plotting millionaire finds himself very much awake. So he takes the prize fight tickets his son had given up and he and the butler go to see the slugging.

Next morning an element of mystery is injected into the plot. The millionaire oversleeps and there is circumstantial evidence to prove that he has been drugged by his young wife. The fact that she has taken her jewels and left the house in company with a young portrait painter doesn't help matters. But it shortly is explained that she had simply gone to pawn the jewels and the artist chap had offered to show her the way.

Then the truth comes out. Father has not lost his fortune and everything is as it should be. Even better. The reports of his smash had reached Wall street, which caused a minor panic, and his own firm, buying stock to steady the market, had cleared something like $8,000,000.

"A Successful Calamity" is again staged and cast with the Hopkins finesse. Estelle Winwood, an attractive English ingenue, is the wife; Richard Barbee the son, and Ruth Findlay the daughter. Two minor comedy rôles are splendidly played by Richard Sterling and Roland Young.

A foolish little melodrama with a big though misguided purpose is called "If." And at its first performance the other night a flabby Broadway audience, than which there is no flabbier, performed in characteristic fashion.

"If" is a story of a possible invasion of California by the Japanese. As a gabby congressman drones through a patriotic speech, dedicating a $200,000 postoffice in a town of 1,100 inhabitants, an old man within sound of the speaker's voice dozes in his chair and dreams. He had heard much of the yellow menace and now it takes form in his vision. His oily Japanese servant becomes suddenly a nobleman of Japan and commander of the forces of Nippon on the Pacific coast. The Japs, 50,000 strong, spring with melodramatic swiftness to their hidden arms and are soon in command of the situation. It will take days for a relief expedition to get west of the Rockies. Protesting Americans are shot down and the women are imperiled. Only a boy scout is of much use and he gets word to some post or other with his wireless. Then it transpires that the word from the Mikado had not been to "Strike," but to "Wait."

When the old gentleman wakens his view point is considerably changed and he is strong for preparedness. He sends his son to West Point and he lets his daughter marry an army captain he had previously refused to favor. Incidentally, he ships his Jap servant back to the home of his fathers.

The little play, though well staged and competently acted, was sufficiently exaggerated to be more amusing than convincing. Which put the flabby first nighters at a considerable disadvantage. They had neither the courage to laugh at it for what it was nor to applaud it for what it stood for. So they merely simpered and giggled. Which is a Broadway trick that irritates this writer excessively. "If" is a pretty bad melodrama, but it stands for so much more than does the pot bellied aristocracy of our Tenderloin set that we were all but prejudiced in its favor. This play was written by Mark Swann and staged by Holbrook Blinn. The cast includes George Probert as the Japanese, Forrest Robinson as the dreamer, Ben Johnson as a protesting, stand-up-and-fight American, Bert Lytell, a western stock actor, as the hero, and Sydney Shields, the heroine. . . . .

There were also two or three new musical plays added to the current list last week. Oliver Morosco has opened his new Broadway theater with a musical play of which he is part author. "Canary Cottage" it is called, and it is more amusing than the average of its kind. The score is tuneful, with a song hit concerning a discovery of the juvenile and the ingenue. "I never knew what love could do till my love met with thine; I never knew what hands could do till our hands met one time," and so on, sweetly and innocuously. The comedian is a dipsomaniac who has lost his pants and is forced to spend the evening in green pajamas, one Herbert Corthwell by name, Charles

Here Is Laughter for Concert-Goers

By Frederick Donaghey

NOT much of the humor which lies in week-after-week of going to and writing about musical entertainments is easily communicable: to impart it in print is, I find, to give grievous offense to a great many worthy persons whose ascetic attitude toward music in all its better manifestations indicates that they regard it as a punishment, and not as a pastime. They are so pitiable in their self-inflicted suffering, so genuine in their belief that a jest is an impiety, so eloquent in their heart-wrung outcries against what they feel to be sacrilege, that, when I read their horrified protests, I collapse, crumple up, choke with remorseful tears, and avow austerities that, if practiced through a week, would be lethal in results.

To call them sincere is the limit of tribute which may be paid: most of them are; and most of them are stupid, also, and unproductive, and at least negatively harmful. They read about music, and talk and write and flutter and fume about music, just as members of the Drama League read and talk and write and flutter and fume about the theater; but they do not, it seems, pay to hear music: at least, not in greater measure than Leaguers pay to see plays.

Which leads up to my explaining that I am come upon a book, partly about music, containing at least one superb laugh: it is called "A Book of Burlesques," and is a collection of things printed here-and-there for H. L. Mencken. Mr. Mencken knows a lot of and about music, and talks and writes a lot of what he knows; but he never flutters about it, seldom fumes about it, and is the organizer of that guild of music-goers who are in rebellion against the usage of checking their sense of fun with their hat in the outer foyer of the concert-hall and the opera-house.

I do not follow him everywhere: not, for an instance, when he prays, in his Litany for Music-Lovers, to be delivered from all piano-players save Paderewski, Godowsky, and Mark Hambourg. But I go along so well that I am often six beats ahead of him in his piece in this book called "From the Programme of a Concert": here is the laugh, noted above, which I would circulate until it has shaken the sides of everybody who has ever been to a concert, and of everybody who hopes to go to all the good ones yet to be given, and of everybody who keeps away from all concerts because they are frightened of music by the worthy persons who, if they ever read this piece, will promptly add Mr. Mencken to the inventory of those damned through all eternity.

Considerations of space, and even of the cost of paper, might be waived for the purpose of reprinting this beguiling bit of burlesque were it not that the laugh is worth so much more than the cost of the volume that Mr. Mencken ought not to be robbed of his royalty. The skit is a parody so sheer that, I fear, only those who have laughed themselves sick at the copy will "get" it. The proper place, otherwise, for mention of the Burlesques is that thin strip of neutral terrain in the war-scarred page facing the Sunday editorials wherein Miss Butcher serves as an exemplar of peace and righteousness for the hate-ridden and embattled Mr. Herrick and Herr Goldbeck.

Singers and Things to Sing

MARY GARDEN is not yet returned to Paris: she is to take part Friday morning in a musicale in New York. It was not her belief when she left Chicago, a month ago, that she would come back for next season's Opera. She was then definitely of the opinion that her familiar repertoire is worn out for Chicago: that is, "Thaïs," "The Juggler," and, perhaps, "Louise." "I know others without number," she told me; "and most of them are better art than the old things, save 'Louise,' which is a great work if I never sing in it again. But Americans do not go to operas they do not know, and have small capacity for being true for long to the operas they think they know!"

Despite their intelligence and charm, the Misses Fuller are pacifists.

Flora Revalles, discerningly picked out a year ago by Mr. Hammond as easily the most interesting of the women who then came to Chicago with the Ballet Russe, is to remain in this country, whatever happens to the ruins of the Diaghileff troupe. She is, she says, to go into the Metropolitan next season as a singer—a return to first principles, in her case: she was in opera in Paris when picked out for personality to play the sultana in "Scheherezade."

Miss Revalles is credited by the sophisticated in the ways of the theater with having held the Ballet Russe together for this season's venture. Whatever happen to it after its present weary and coinless tour, it will live in history as the most stupendous example of inexpert management, perhaps, in the annals of what is known in the Loop as show-business.

Reinald Warrenrath, who is to sing with young Albert Lindquist on Tuesday night in Orchestra hall for the Chicago branch of their fraternity, the Psi-Upsilon, may be identified by those who were there as the good-looking baritone who evoked more applause than Geraldine Farrar on the occasion of the latter's recital, early last season, in the Auditorium.

MATTERS of MUSIC

The Week's Music

MR. STOCK'S Friday-Saturday program will have Walter Ferner, second-'cellist of the Orchestra, as soloist; he will be heard in Dvorák's concerto. Other matter will be Glinka's "Rusland and Ludmilla" overtures, Tschaikowsky's second symphony, Glière's symphonic poem of "The Sirens," and Humperdinck's "Königskinder" suite.

The Orchestra's seventh Pop will be Thursday night, with the "Königskinder" suite, Grieg's "Lyric" suite, the prelude to "Lohengrin," the magic-fire scene from "The Valkyrie," and Mendelssohn's "Fingal's Cave" overture as the features.

Another concert in the Orchestra's series at the University of Chicago will be Tuesday afternoon, at 4:15, in Mandel hall, with Tchaikowsky's fifth symphony, Bach's third concerto, Delius' Dance-Rhapsody, and five [17 to 21] of the Brahms-Dvorák Hungarian dances as the program.

TODAY.

3:10—Concert, with lecture by Mr. Maurice Rosenfeld, Chicago Hebrew institute.

3:30—Margarete Matzenauer, mezzo-soprano, recital, Grand Opera-House: Egon Pollak, accompanist.

3:30—Edith Ayres McCullough, soprano; Graham Harris, violinist; and Frank Mannheimer, pianist, recital, The Playhouse.

3:30—Maud Powell, violinist, recital, Orchestra hall.

3:30—May Peterson, soprano, recital, Illinois theater.

Notes

Muratore is to sing again in Chicago on March 16, as soloist in a concert by the American Choral Society. He and Lina Cavalieri will meanwhile have made their tour of ten concerts between here and the Pacific. She says that she will sing at the Opera next season in two or three parts.

The men who write about music for the New York newspapers are beseeching Gatti-Casazza to mount "Faust," which has been out of the Metropolitan Opera repertoire for several years. It was for a long period the most popular work in the schedule, and was sung so often that the critics resented it. Some of them seem to think that a good revival were dependent on a great basso; but "Faust" is, first of all, a matter of tenor and soprano. They have Farrar for a good Marguerite—good, that is, histrionically, like so much else in her gamut; but they have no Faust within a million miles of Muratore: Caruso in the part is a grotesque.

Margarete Matzenauer, who in the brief space of three years has qualified so amazingly in the great parts of the Wagner repertoire, is an addition to the list of Carmens on the American stage. Farrar, some days ago, was scheduled to sing the part in Philadelphia, where the Metropolitan company gives one opera a week. She was reported ill too late to make a change of opera easily possible: the "Carmen" cast, with the settings and costumes, were in Philadelphia. Matzenauer was rushed into the part; and the audience was reported as satisfied. It seems that the German singer was reasonably ready through having sung Carmen once or twice some years ago in Europe.

Booth Tarkington's early story of "Monsieur Beaucaire" is being made into an opera by André Messager: there ought to be a better libretto than drama in it, although Mansfield got at least one great season in this country from the feeble play made from it, and the late Lewis Waller found fortune with the piece in England. Messager, although a big man in Paris, has, as a composer, so far resisted successful importation: he is known in the United States ever so slightly for, first, "Le Basoche" and, many years later, "Veronique." The former had a Chicago hearing in the early '90s: I recall it as an exquisite thing in "book" and music, but indifferently put on with a cast not consonant with opera of the type. "Veronique," also, failed in Chicago: it was sung in the Studebaker about ten years ago by Louise Gunning and Louis Harrison.

Three Best Sellers in Music.

The following were the three best selling sheet music numbers of the week:

"Poor Butterfly."

"Ladder of Roses."

"There's Egypt in Your Dreamy Eyes."

The best sellers in player rolls have been:

"When Cupid Calls."

"There's Egypt in Your Dreamy Eyes."

"Havanola."

The most popular Edison records were:

"At the End of a Beautiful Day" and "Make a Little Heaven in Your Heart."

"Ireland Must Be Heaven" and "It's Always Orange Day in California."

"Poet and Peasant Overture."

The best selling Pathé records have been:

"Softly Unaware" and "Old Love Is Never Forgotten."

"Mammy's Little Coal Black Rose" and "It's Not Your Nationality."

"Poor Butterfly" and "Topsy."

The most popular Victor records of the week were:

"Katinka" and "Poor Butterfly."

"Paradise Blues" and "My Syncopated Melody Man."

"Such a Li'l Fellow."

The best sellers among Columbia records have been:

"Hawaiian Portuguese Tango."

"Poor Butterfly" and "Century Girl."

"Give Me All of You."

The Week's Playbills

Illinois—Julia Sanderson, Herbert Cawthorn, and Donald Brian in "Sybil," with words by Harry B. Smith and music by Victor Jacobi.

Auditorium—"Hip, Hip, Hooray." Final fortnight.

Chicago—Lew Fields in "Bosom Friends." Last week.

Garrick—Al Jolson in "Robinson Crusoe Jr." Last week.

Olympic—"Potash and Perlmutter in Society," with Barney Bernard.

Powers'—"The Boomerang."

Cort—"Fair and Warmer."

Grand—"Turn to the Right."

Princess—William Hodge in "Fixing Sister."

National—Miss Carewe Carvel in "Peg o' My Heart."

VAUDEVILLE.

Palace—Sam Chip and Mary Marble in "The Clock Shop" are the headliners.

Majestic—Sarah Padden in "The Clod" and Melville Ellis and Irene Bordoni are the stars.

Great Northern—Double program of vaudeville.

Rialto—"A Nut Sundae" and other acts.

McVicker's—The headliner is "A Case for Sherlock."

BURLESQUE.

Columbia—"The Behman Show."

Burns Mantle's New York Letter

Ruggles is the juvenile, Dorothy Webb and Reine Davies the prima donni. Trixie Friganza also assists.

A real hit seems to have been scored at the Casino by Arthur Hammerstein with "You're in Love," written by the authors of "Katinka" and "High Jinks," they being Otto Hauerbach and Rudolph Friml. The scores of this one, too, is more responsible for its popularity than the book, and a feature that will probably start most of the conversation regarding it is a song called "Dreaming," during the singing of which Marie Flinn walking in her sleep, trips out lightly to the end of a cargo boom swung from the mast of a ship. As the boom swings around she is carried out over the heads of the audience. Each performance so far some bald headed rascal has stood up in his seat and stolen her pink satin slippers. We suspect he is either Mr. Flinn or Mr. Hammerstein's secretary, but he may be a German spy for all we know. "You're in Love" has really the best light music Broadway has heard in several weeks.

STAGG PHOTO SERVICE

Shall We Emphasize Price?

We seldom talk about Winton Six prices. The discriminating men and women who buy Winton Sixes demand uppermost quality, and gladly pay its worth.

BUT occasionally we hear of one who bought a common type of car, thinking that the distinctive Winton Six cost $3500 or more.

While it is true that we make closed cars selling as high as $4750, we desire you to know that the 33 Winton Six, in various body styles and specially finished to your personal taste, costs but $2685.

The 33 is of exactly the same quality as the most costly car we build, and richly repays any buyer who has imagined that his limit is $2250 or so. Add 20 per cent to that and you secure one of the world's finest and most exclusive cars, and insure yourself an enduring happiness not possible with an ordinary car. Our artists are keen to create precisely the delightful car you desire. Consider us at your service. Simply telephone Calumet 1626.

Open Cars $2685 to $3500

Right off the Reel

By Mae Tinee.

MARY WANTS TO KNOW.

HOW will you take your Mary Garden? The Goldwyn Pictures company has determined to ask moving picture audiences to make known their wishes in regard to the production in which Miss Garden shall be featured. Will you have her in "Salome," "Thaïs," "The Juggler of Notre Dame," or what? You can write and tell me if you like to and I'll scoot your wishes on to Miss Garden, who will soon be departing for Paris to buy gowns.

Robert Leonard will direct Mae Murray in future productions.

Margaret Illington's first picture, which will be made for Lasky-Paramount, will be directed by Frank Reicher.

Thomas Meighan is searching classics for a story in which he may carry Pauline Frederick around. "I have formed the personal taxicab habit," he is reported as remarking. "Having lugged the lady through 'The Slave Market' and 'Sapho,' I insist that I be allowed to continue toting her."

What is said to be the largest contract order ever placed in the film world of photoplays has been awarded Horkheimer Bros. by the General Film company. Fifty-two feature photoplays of four reels each have been ordered and they are to be produced during 1917. Stories from the various popular magazines will be haled into use.

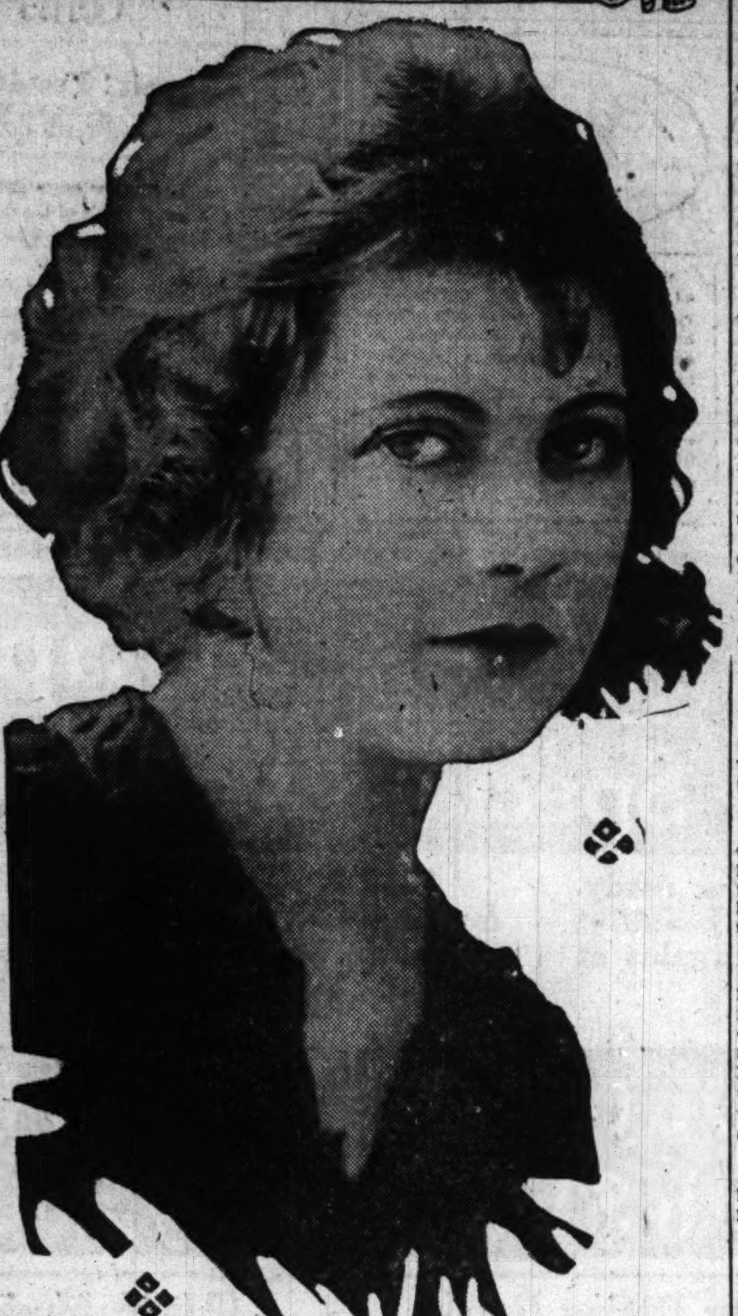
Patty McGuire eats mustard on his ice cream.

Frank Mayo has been signed up by Universal. He will be starred in Bluebird productions.

Mr. Charles Chaplin has entirely recovered from an injury received from a falling lamp post during the filming of "Easy Street." He has started work on the tenth of his funny pictures. This will be entitled "Health Resort."

Clara Kimball Young has at last finished furnishing her new apartment, which is said to include a Russian room, Louis XV. bedroom, a Chinese boudoir, and a modern music room. And along comes a "rave" from the press agent declaring that she has a costume and dog to match each room.

During our recent conversation Mary Pickford declared that the first place where she ever applied for a position was at the Essanay studio, Chicago. "I was awfully hard up," she said, "and a girl friend, who had done some extra work, asked me why I didn't try and get occasional work in motion pictures. I felt awfully above it, but I did need money, so I went out and interviewed Mr. G. M. Anderson. Somehow, though, the studio and all the people around frightened me terribly and I ran away and never went back. It was quite a while afterward that I was again persuaded to apply for work at the Biograph studio in New York, and, of course, you know all about me since then."



Miss Marguerite Marsh.

This is Mae Marsh's little sister. The family tried to shoo her off to school again this season, but she rebelled and now, "all the same like sister Mae," she has signed up with the Goldwyn Pictures corporation.

Helen Holmes has tonsilitis.

Christie comedies, they say, are proving popular in Japan.

Admirers of Herbert Brenon productions will be glad to know that Mr. Brenon, who has been ill with typhoid fever, is again at work. After completing the picture he is making, he will go to Atlantic City, where he will cut and assemble the film.

Speaking of sacrifices to art, Marie Doro was recently ordered to report for work at the Famous Players' studio in New York. When the instruction came for her to journey east she looked in vain for Elliott Dexter's name in the specifications. It was not there. So the bride journeyed east to live in a hotel while the bridegroom remained west in sole possession of the bungalow.

At the annual board of directors' meeting of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing company Watterson R. Rothacker was elected president. A dividend of 10 per cent on the common stock and 7 per cent on the preferred was declared.

C. G. A.: Address Mack Sennett, care of the Keystone Comedy company, Los Angeles, Cal.

MRS. H. E. B.: I understand Constance Collier is in England. Address her in care of His Majesty's theater, London, England.

MARIE: Pearl White has reddish blonde hair.

DAISY: I'm awfully glad you like the column. The Essanay studio does at times, of course, use extras. Better send me a stamped, addressed envelope, and I shall mail you the printed article I have on how to become a photoplayer.

MILDRED: A letter addressed to Annette Kellermann, care of the Fox Film company, 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York, will reach her. I think you are a pretty fair writer. You certainly do have your ups and downs, though, don't you?

M.: Honest? Not you.

HAROLD W.: "Spasms" is right. Clever though, awfully. How many wakeful nights did you spend concocting that potpourri?

E.: Glad you like my "stunt." Of course, we all have our own ideas as to pictures. Personally I thought "Panthea" worth while. I agree with you, however, that "Miss George Washington" was a likeable little picture.

G. E. S.: Billie Burke is about 28 years old. The "21" you saw in the paper was a typographical error. Beverly Bayne was born in Minneapolis. She is with the Metro company, 1465 Broadway, New York, at the present time. Mighty glad you enjoy the column. Let me know any time I can be of service to you.

C. B. F.: I'm mighty glad I made you happy. Thanks for being "My own bold knight." Write again some time.

E. L. V.: What do I look like? Well, I'll tell you! Mr. Ring Lardner was just in and he said I was just the person for this department because I looked so funny. You're the only person I ever pulled this to.

FRED FISH: According to your instructions I looked carefully and discovered it wasn't "Fried Fish." Dustin Farnum was alive and well the last I heard. I have no information about his private affairs.

R. P. F.: Little Mary Miles Minter is with the American-Mutual company, Santa Barbara, Cal. I think she would probably send you a picture if you wrote inclosing a quarter for it.

C. S. H.: The correct date is 1882.

ANXIOUS: The reason I don't give away my pictures is that I would hate to have any of them turned to the wall.

D. T.: I have an article on the doubling process which I shall be glad to mail you if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

CHARLES: Why don't you walk around the block and think it over?

MADLYN: Thelma Salter is the name of the cunning child who played with Frank Keenan in "The Crab." Wasn't she adorable? Address her care of the Ince-Triangle company, Culver City, Cal.

INTERESTED: Following is the cast of "Bitter Truth": Anne, Virginia Pearson; Graves, Jack Hopkins; Judge Marcus, William H. Tooker; Martha Marcus, Alice May; the parson, Sidney D'Albrook. You are entirely welcome.

M. Y.: I shall take great pleasure in mailing you the printed material I have on scenario writing and a list of firms that accept scenarios if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope for it.

A "Close-Up" of Screen Folks.

By a Movie Fan.

Dear Miss Tinee: Do you mind if I burden you with my impression of the party at the Essanay studio last Saturday night? You see, it was the first time I had ever seen any of the screen people at closer range than the eleventh row at the Strand, and I was wildly excited. There was a tremendous crush and the music was wonderful, with every one doing the latest steps, and packs of people about to watch. By the way, the studio's much larger than I'd dreamed, although I heard a woman remark in a somewhat acrid tone that it was fortunate they hadn't made the price of admission 25 cents. It was rather an appalling thought, for I don't know where they could have tucked another soul.

They were letting in 200 at a time to see how pictures were made. It was the briefest possible showing, of course; but it was interesting to see Bryant Washburn go through a scrap of scene in a hotel lobby, like a tractable little boy, under the director's command. He's very nice, and you'd have liked to see him do his bit.

"Dick" Travers was in the outer hall, imposing in spite of a slightly flurried pompadour; and Nell Craig floated about in a cloud-gray frock and broad white hat, with a lot of other important looking people, whom I couldn't quite place. By the way, that was the tantalizing part, and I longed for a screen Baedeker and a Cook's guide to pilot me around, to the tune of something like this:

"On your right, la-adies and gen-ntlemen, Mary Charleson; no, not that one, the la-ady with the curly hair! See page 367. And to your left, Mr. Walthall—Henry Walthall, the gen-ntleman with the myste-serious eyes." Fancy Mr. Walthall turning a particularly bright crimson and fleeing to cover. I'm sure he thought it quite bad enough as it was. He had a hunted air when I saw him.

Wallace Carlson, the boy who draws "Dreamy Dud" for the movies, was an indefatigable dancer; and there were such heaps and heaps of pretty girls who looked vaguely familiar! I must have seen them some time as merry villagers or pert maids, perhaps.

I don't know a better word for it all than "folksy." Rubbing elbows and dancing on the very heels of celebrities proved that they were "just folks," and very charming ones. It was a lot of fun being there, and I hope sometime they'll feel like having open house again. Perhaps then they'll give us guide books at the door.

Investigations come in mighty handy these days to form the plots of thrilling picture dramas. Little did Hinton Clabaugh or Maclay Hoyne think when they brought to justice a blackmailing syndicate preying on an unsuspecting public that they were laying the network for a motion picture.
The plot was there. Gilson Willett discovered it. With Walter Howie he built an eighty-reel play exposing the organization of crooks and showing how they operated.

AUTOMOBILES Conducted by SHEPPARD BUTLER MOTORCYCLES

The LITTLE THINGS THAT HELP

Something New for Skidding.

A sand box for automobiles, similar to the sand boxes on locomotives, has been invented by James S. Young of Jersey City. Its purpose is to prevent skidding. Compressed air, generated by pumps on the wheels, throws out the sand in a fine spray, making a grit track broader than the tires.

It Stays Warm Longer.

A new device for making the car comfortable in cold weather is the hot water exhaust heater. It uses the heat from the exhaust in the usual way, but carries it through an inner pipe which is surrounded by water, the latter retaining the heat long after the engine has stopped.

Thief Protection for Spare Tires.

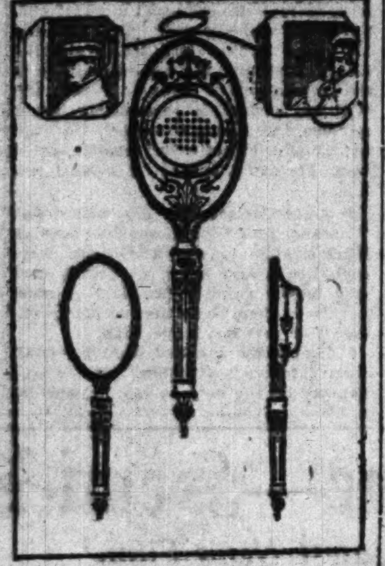
You have to lock everything when you leave the car nowadays, apparently. At least that's the idea of a manufacturer who offers a tire carrier with wings that swing out, gripping the tire firmly, and clamped into place with a padlock.

A Rotary Jack.

With the rotary jack it is only necessary to insert the jack against the axle, get in and drive the car ahead, and the wheel automatically climbs up on the jack. It is constructed on the rotary lever principle and is composed of two main parts, there also being an adjustable feature for different heights of axles. It is made of malleable iron and weighs seven pounds.

Just Whisper to the Chauffeur.

A refined and elaborated modification of the dictagraph principle has been applied to automobiles in an instrument known as the autophone. The transmitter, in the design shown, is set in a dainty contrivance of chased sterling silver with a mirror forming its reverse side. Decorations in colored enamel are provided to match the upholstery of the car. As you confide your directions to the mouthpiece, a tiny wire carries the message to the chauffeur, at whose ear the horn receiver is placed. This outfit costs $75, but there are others to be had for less.



Exhaust Echoes

James Levy, Chicago Saxon distributor, reports that, despite the fire which destroyed the Saxon assembly plant at Detroit Feb. 3, more than fifty cars a day are now being turned out. The number, it is expected, will be doubled this week.

Will H. Brown, formerly vice president, assistant general manager and treasurer of the Willys-Overland company, has been appointed director of sales of the Elgin Motor Car corporation.

In adding the making of wire wheels to their general automobile wheel business, the Hayes Wheel company of Jackson, Mich., has adopted a somewhat unusual selling plan. They have turned the entire marketing of the device over to Fred E. Castle and H. W. Kyte, veterans of the bicycle days, who have headquarters of their own and will relieve the factory of all selling problems.

Fifty Autocars—two ton trucks—have just been purchased by Morris & Co. as a part of the packing firm's program for replacing its horse delivery service with motor vehicles.

A recently formed Chicago concern is preparing to market an automobile, known as the Cruiser, which will carry, as stock equipment, a tent, table, two chairs, bed for two persons, cooking utensils, table service, fireless cooker, stove, camp grate, refrigerator, hot water tank and service pipes, a toilet tent and lavatory with running water, and an ice water tank. The makers have offered to turn over their entire output to the government should it be needed.

A bill to create a state highway commission and get in line for a share of the money to be appropriated under the federal road aid law passed the Indiana state senate the other day. Some of the good roads enthusiasts are planning to oppose the measure in the house, declaring it to be a poor one in its present form. For some time Indiana and two other states have been the only ones which have had no state highway departments.

The makers of the Briscoe claim for it the distinction of being the only American car shipped directly to a consignee in any of the central powers since the beginning of the war. This was a roadster which went to W. Coffin, American consul general at Budapest, recently through a special arrangement between the department of state and the British government.

Questions and Answers

By High Speed

What is your opinion regarding the practice of leaving the high speed gear in and with the clutch engaged in descending hills? I have been told that it is all right to do this, but I maintain that whenever possible the brakes alone should be depended upon to hold the car.

M. E. G., Chicago.

On exceedingly steep hills it is sometimes necessary to do everything possible to check the momentum of the car, and many drivers go down with the high speed gear in and the clutch engaged, in addition to using the foot and emergency brakes. Thus the car is forced to run against the compression in the cylinders as well as against the brakes. Your contention is right. Leaving the clutch in places a strain on the motor. Properly adjusted brakes should slip the wheels of the car. If they do this, what need is there of additional friction?

During one of the recent cold snaps the water in my radiator froze and cracked the water jacket of the engine. I have been unable to get satisfactory advice around here and want to ask you how the damage may be repaired. If you will tell me how to proceed, possibly I can find somebody that will be able to carry out your instructions.

T. M.

The rebuilding of badly broken engine water jackets, which, to one unfamiliar with the process, seems impossible, results in a practical and permanent repair when properly done. While the process is an old one, it has not been generally used in the motor industry. It has been applied, however, to the most difficult cases of jacket fracture, such as repairing the corners of a jacket which are subjected to the greatest strain. The broken pieces of the casting are put together in a skeleton frame work to hold them in position. Then the entire jacket is filled with a saturated salammoniac solution. The seepage is allowed to oxidize and, after the cracks have closed up and the leakage has ceased, the solution is entirely drained out and the job is allowed to stand until it is thoroughly dry. Thereafter the expansion and contraction of the jacket does not affect the repair. If the water jacket is badly cracked I would advise you to take the cylinder block to the nearest place where the services of an expert mechanic may be obtained.

I keep my car in an unheated building, and while I take care to put plenty of alcohol in the radiator to keep the water from freezing, I am at a loss to know what to do about the battery. How may one guard against the freezing of the battery solution?

James McKay, Chicago.

If your battery is kept well up to charge you need have no worries about the freezing of the solution. As you may know, the combination of acid and water is called electrolyte and a good, strong solution will not freeze. If the charge in the battery runs low, then the acid is drawn into the plates, leaving only the water, which, of course, freezes and ruins the battery. The more nearly the electrolyte is up to the proper gravity—that is, between 1.28 and 1.30—the less likely it is to freeze. As the gravity drops the freezing point is raised so that a discharged battery will freeze at close to zero. In extremely cold weather it is often considered advisable to wrap the battery with old clothing or something similar as a further guard against frost. But the best and simplest way is to see to it that the battery is kept well charged. If you do not use the car much, run the motor once in a while for thirty minute intervals, and this will generate and store the necessary amount of electricity. Naturally, this applies only to cars equipped with generators. If you have no generator, take the battery to a charging station and have it renewed at an expense of 15 cents.

Will you please publish in your column the distances by automobile road from Chicago to Los Angeles, San Francisco, Miami, New Orleans, New York, Washington, and Denver? What are the best route guides?

P. A. Stratton, Chicago.

Los Angeles, 2,457; San Francisco, 1,876; Miami, 1,400; New Orleans, 1,216; New York [via Akron], 898; New York [via Buffalo], 1,045; Washington, 810; Denver, 1,134. The automobile blue books cover the routes to all the above named points. For list of books and the territory they cover address Automobile Blue Book Publishing company, Karpen building, Chicago.

Please give me the best automobile route from Janesville, Wis., to eastern Canada, together with the number of miles and the nature of the roads.

Samuel Onsgaard, Orfordville, Wis.

Chicago, 106 miles; South Bend, 101 miles; Toledo, 165 miles; Cleveland, 130 miles; Erie, 102 miles; Buffalo, 89 miles; Rochester, 72 miles; Oswego, 70 miles; Watertown, 60 miles; Malone, 120 miles; Montreal, 85 miles. The roads average good, especially after leaving Buffalo.

Owing to the large volume of inquiries for automobile routes and the relatively small amount of space in which to answer them, readers wishing immediate replies are advised to inclose a 2 cent stamp with inquiries so they may be answered by mail. Only routes and answers to questions of general interest will be published.

GMC GENERAL MOTORS COMPANY TRUCKS

Steering Gear

TRUCK TALK
No. 6

THE STEERING GEAR is an important unit of a motor truck—if right it is a protector of life and property.

To be right it must be dependable in all emergencies.

The STEERING GEAR on GMC Trucks has stood the test of years. Before adopting it we tested it on twenty heavy duty trucks in different kinds of service for a period of two years.

Since that time hundreds of GMC Trucks have been built and are in service in all parts of the country. We have yet to hear of any STEERING GEAR trouble of any description.

We believe the present GMC STEERING GEAR is the strongest and simplest to be found on any truck. It has the fewest possible number of parts, and is, in our belief, as near trouble-proof as can be made. It requires practically no attention.

All working parts are enclosed in a dirt-proof and oil tight malleable iron housing and are packed in grease. They are drop-forged, heat-treated and hardened steel, and are accurately finished and polished.

The working surfaces are exceedingly large and in actual service will show little wear. Should any lost motion develop it can readily be adjusted.

The STEERING GEAR is securely anchored in a rugged bracket riveted to the frame, and further secured by a plate and collar to the floor board. By taking up the floor board and removing four nuts the entire gear may be removed as a unit.

The steering wheel is extra large. The spider is of heavy pressed steel, and is built into the wood rim. The wheel is strong and firm—will not rattle and will not work loose. The spark and throttle levers are conveniently located above the wheel, are extra large and can be handled by the driver when wearing heavy gloves.

Instantly! Corns Stop Hurting!
Corns Loosen and Lift Out

No pain! Few drops loosen corns and calluses so they fall off—Try it sure!

For a few cents you can get a small bottle of the magic drug freezone recently discovered by a Cincinnati man.

Just ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone. Apply a few drops upon a tender, aching corn and instantly all soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn so loose that you lift it out, root and all, with the fingers.

Just think! Not one bit of pain before applying freezone or afterwards. It doesn't even irritate the surrounding skin.

Hard corns, soft corns, or corns between the toes, also hardened calluses on bottom of feet shrivel up and fall off without hurting a particle. It is almost magical. It is a scientific compound made from ether.

Genuine "Freezone" bears name, Edward Wesley Co., Cincinnati, O.

Our Spring Furniture Exhibition is now ready. Six spacious floors crammed with new and beautiful things for the home—5037 brand new bargains at prices that save one-third.

Celebrate with us this week. Come—whether to buy or not. We will make your visit enjoyable. And if you do buy, charge it. Your account is already opened. You don't even need to ask for credit.

Tear Out This Advertisement
It's Worth $1.00 Monday at Our Stores

Daily Change of PROGRAM

We are not content just to show the biggest display of new furniture in Chicago—
We are not content to simply offer the most liberal credit ever thought of—
We are not content with a 48-hour delivery service that no one else can match.
We want to do something extra each day to make your visit here out of the ordinary.
See what we have planned.

MONDAY
Bring This Advertisement with You to Our Store. It Is Worth $1.00

No matter what you select—no matter what the price—as long as it amounts to at least $10.00 we will reduce it $1.00 if you show this announcement.
Monday only this advertisement is worth $1.00 to you. Don't fail to tear it out and bring it with you.

TUESDAY
Is Gift Day

See this splendid spice set for your pantry. You will find it wonderfully handy. It is worth at least $2.00, but Tuesday it is free to you. Call at any of our stores and if you buy something—$10.00 worth or over—this spice set is given to you as a present.

WEDNESDAY
Is $1.00 Down Day

We believe our usual credit terms are the most liberal in Chicago.
But Wednesday, terms are special. We have arranged so that scores upon scores of things may be had for just a $1.00 first payment. Think how easy to get something that you have long thought of buying.

THURSDAY
Grand Musical Concert

Thursday has been set aside as musical day at the Spiegel stores. All day long we will give free graphophone concerts and at our Wabash Avenue store we will also give a player-piano concert. We want you to come and make yourself at home. Come and enjoy the music of the world's greatest artists. Note our special offers of graphophones and player-pianos in this ad.

FRIDAY
Special Bargain Day

Giant buying power brings us unusual bargains. Nearly two million customers trade with our nationwide mail order organization. We have four big stores in Chicago. We often take entire factory outputs. We are considered America's biggest buyers of furniture and house furnishings. That's why we save you on the average of about one-third.
But Friday is Special Bargain Day and one item has been selected out of every line on which we have eliminated all profit. We will not tell you what these things are. You are free to roam through our store and seek them out for yourself. If they are things you want and you are shrewd enough buyer to discover them, you get them at cost.
And still you are entitled to all the other privileges allowed you here—liberal credit—easy terms—guaranteed 48-hour delivery.

SATURDAY
Customers' Reunion

This day will be reception day for all our old customers and in honor of the event folks who have never traded here before will be treated just exactly as one of our good old customers.
We will have quite a few special Saturday bargains to offer you at special terms and prices which we usually offer only to old customers, but you are included, too.

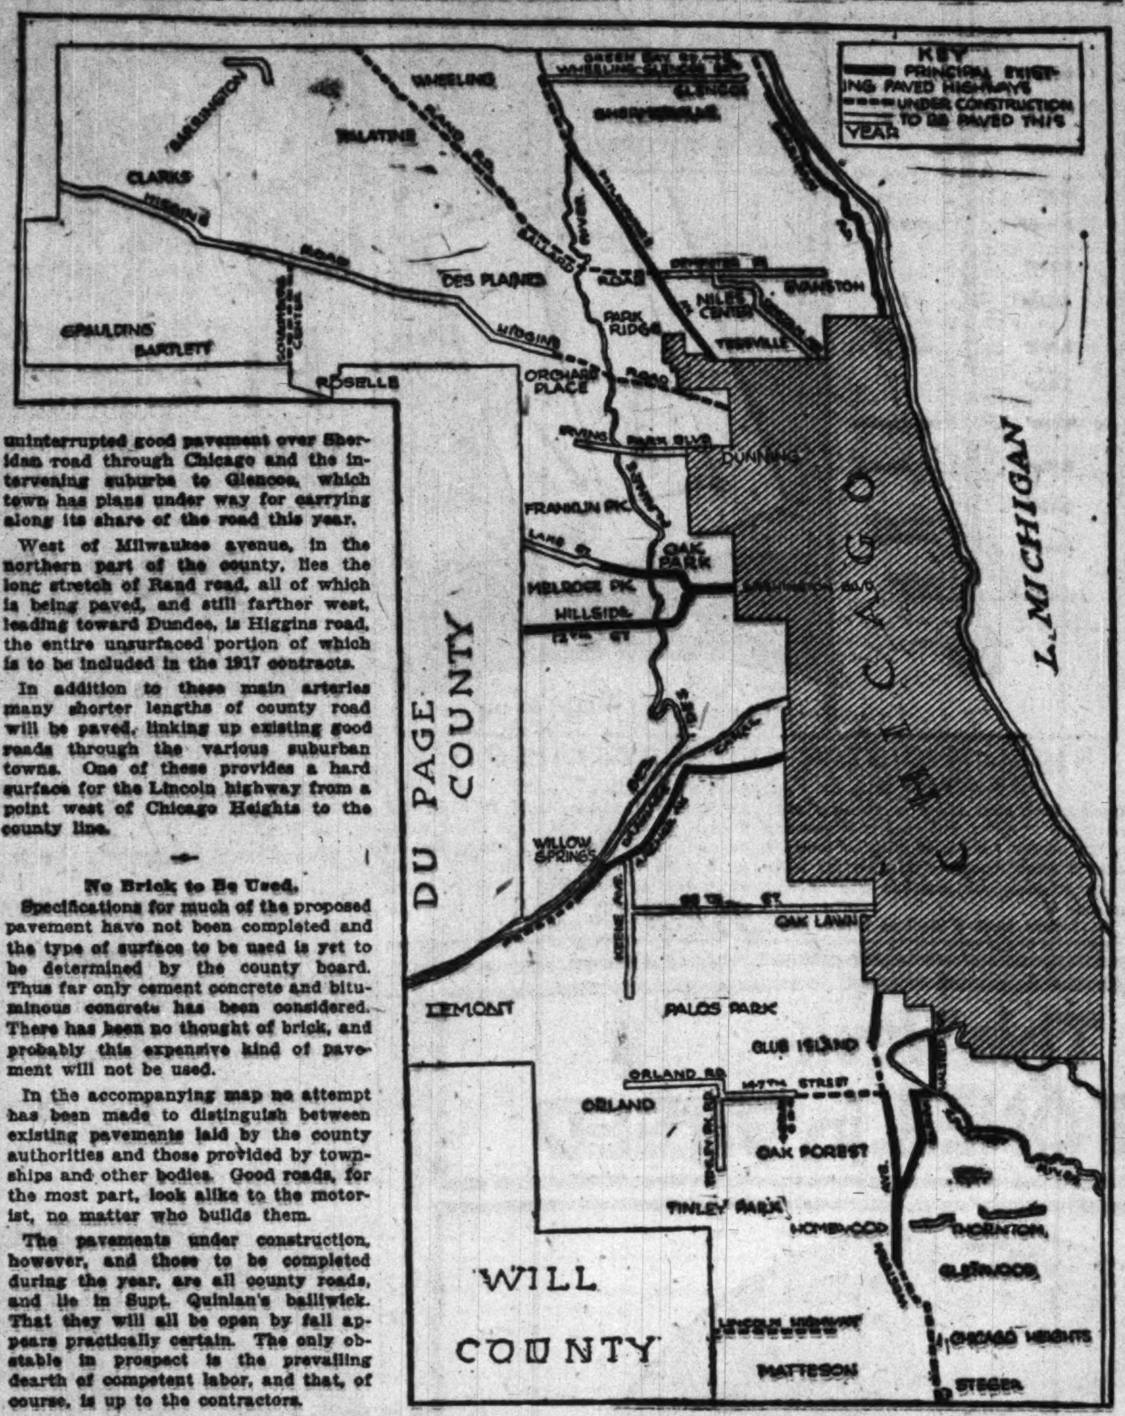
AUTOMOBILES Conducted by SHEPPARD BUTLER MOTORCYCLES

Cook County Gets 112 Miles of New Roads

By Sheppard Butler.



By next June a motorist entering Cook county at its southern boundary can drive straight through to its northern limits over an unbroken stretch of permanent paved roads—fifty-four miles as the crow flies.

By fall, unless the scarcity of labor interferes, Cook county outside Chicago will have 142 miles of paved county roads—approximately five times the present mileage.

This would seem to be an appropriate moment for the Chicagoan who drives an automobile to rise and give the customary three cheers. The good news herein imparted does not represent what somebody hopes will come to pass. Hopes make the world go round, as any Illinois good roads booster will tell you, but hopes alone don't smooth the highways and ease the strain on cantilever springs and human nature. These are things which are actually being done, either on the roads themselves, where forty miles of pavement now under contract is to be finished as soon as the frost gets out of the ground, or in the office of George A. Quinlan, superintendent of highways, where specifications are now being prepared for seventy-two additional miles to be contracted for at once and completed during the summer.

A Man's Size Job.

There are now about thirty miles of completed county pavement outside the city limits. Multiplying that by five, approximately, in a few short months is no small task, but it's the job the county board has set for the road builders. Superintendent Quinlan is surveying it composedly thrugh his pince-nez—he's a surprisingly young man, by the way, and looks more like a high school instructor than a maker of highways—but he and his aids are busier just now than any one else around the county building.

Completion of the north and south route through the county probably will be the first thing done. Most of this is now good pavement; the few links that remain have been contracted for and are under construction. The trail lies through Steger and Chicago Heights and picks up Western avenue to the city limits, where the motorist may choose his course as he likes over the park and boulevard system. To the north one simply drives out Milwaukee avenue, which is paved and open to Wheeling except for one half mile stretch to be finished in the spring.

Four Trails to the North.

To the northward also there is now uninterrupted good pavement over Sheridan road through Chicago and the intervening suburbs to Glencoe, which town has plans under way for carrying along its share of the road this year.

West of Milwaukee avenue, in the northern part of the county, lies the long stretch of Rand road, all of which is being paved, and still farther west, leading toward Dundee, is Higgins road, the entire unsurfaced portion of which is to be included in the 1917 contracts.

In addition to these main arteries many shorter lengths of county road will be paved, linking up existing good roads through the various suburban towns. One of these provides a hard surface for the Lincoln highway from a point west of Chicago Heights to the county line.

No Brick to Be Used.

Specifications for much of the proposed pavement have not been completed and the type of surface to be used is yet to be determined by the county board. Thus far only cement concrete and bituminous concrete has been considered. There has been no thought of brick, and probably this expensive kind of pavement will not be used.

In the accompanying map no attempt has been made to distinguish between existing pavements laid by the county authorities and those provided by townships and other bodies. Good roads, for the most part, look alike to the motorist, no matter who builds them.

The pavements under construction, however, and those to be completed during the year, are all county roads, and lie in Supt. Quinlan's bailiwick. That they will all be open by fall appears practically certain. The only obstable in prospect is the prevailing dearth of competent labor, and that, of course, is up to the contractors.

The Human Drive

You might not suspect it, but this is advertising literature. It is published anonymously in the current issue of the Maxwell, a magazine devoted to the affairs of the folk who build, sell, and drive the car of that name.

Give me the same strong, steadfast will
  As the trim, fleet car I drive,
That I may start with a singing heart
On the sweep of years and the toil and tears
  That only the fit survive.
For I will want on the long, grim stretch
  The strength and the will to stay,
The strength of steel, and the will to feel
That it's great to live, that it's great to give My best each lap of the way.

Give me the same stout, well knit frame
  To parry the highway's grip,
For as I drive, as I strain and strive
I must toss a laugh at the toughest gaff
  I meet on the trying trip.
Give me the same big, beating heart
  As the heart beneath the hood,
That's pumping zest till the wheels can't rest,
Till the goal is won and the work is done,
  And dread of the work withstood.

Wish me no rose lain, level course
  That makes of the goal a jest;
But just enough of the sterner stuff,
Of the rugged roads and the heavy loads
  To offer a worthy test.
Wish me this on the far flung way:
  A powerful will to do,
That if I'm stalled and the way seems walled,
I may still have heart for another start—
  The courage to carry me through.

News and Gossip of the Auto Trade

The slate of officers to be elected by the Chicago Automobile Trade association at its annual banquet March 12 was completed last week by the nominating committee of the organization. Joseph F. Davis, the Winton branch manager here, is scheduled for reelection as president, and the others named include C. R. Dashiell for vice president, W. G. Tennant for secretary, and Harry Paulman for treasurer. Plans for the banquet, which its sponsors say will be the biggest gathering of automobile men ever held in Chicago, are in the hands of a committee consisting of Harry Newman, E. E. Esch, F. E. Parker, D. E. Whipple, O. G. Temme, Thomas J. Hay, H. P. Branstetter, C. R. Dashiell, E. G. Westlake, and Arthur J. Jones.

John N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland company, telegraphed President Wilson last week offering the government the use of his plant in Toledo and its subsidiary and allied factories if they are needed in view of the present national crisis. The main plant has 103 acres of floor space and employs 18,000 men. Twenty thousand more are employed in subsidiary and allied plants.

A Little Giant two ton truck, loaded to capacity, started overland from Chicago to Des Moines on Thursday without a carburetor and on fuel composed of half kerosene and half gasoline. The remarkable test trip, whose destination is the Des Moines automobile show, opening tomorrow, is designed as a trial of the so-called hydro-pneumatic gas generator invented recently by J. W. Duntley, a Chicagoan.

Twenty branch assembly plants in twenty of the largest American cities are part of the manufacturing plans of the Redden Truck company, the organization of which has just been completed in Chicago and New York. The concern's main factory is to be located either at Chicago, Joliet, or Jackson, Mich., and the subsidiary plants, it is announced, will be installed and operated after a plan similar to that of the Ford Motor company. The Redden concern builds one of the many devices for converting pleasure cars into light trucks.

George S. Ballard and Willis G. Houghton of Evanston, who left Chicago on Jan. 19 to motor from Kansas City to Los Angeles, sent word last week that they have reached their destination, making the trip in what is believed to be record time for a Ford sedan. They covered the 2,200 miles in seventeen days' actual running time.

During 1916 the Goodrich fleet of tire testing cars traveled 4,688,412 miles and used 300,000 gallons of gasoline, according to Dr. W. C. Geer, chief of the development department. Each car is expected to make 300 miles every twenty-four hours, with one driver for the day and another for the night.

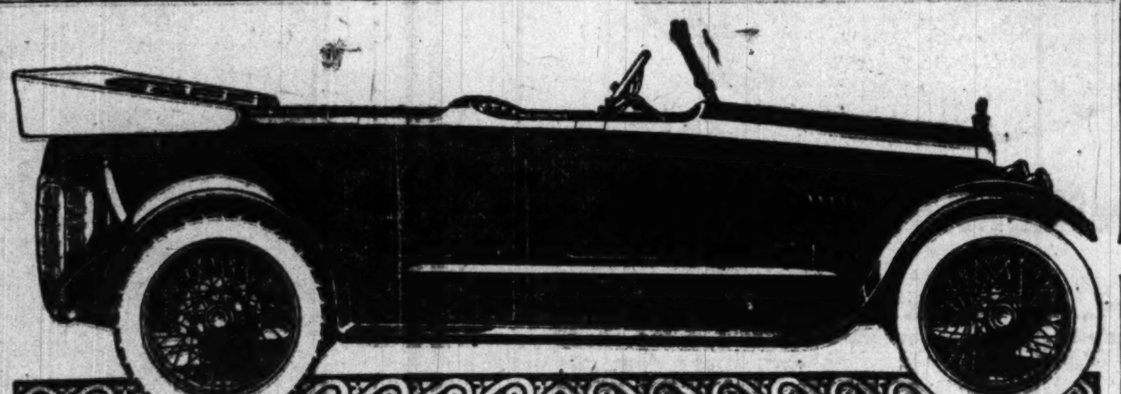
"One railroad at Detroit," says A. T. Waterfall, director of traffic for Dodge Brothers, anent the prevailing freight tieup, "built at least 4,500 freight cars last year. Of their total of 18,200 automobile cars they have had less than 5% per cent on their own rails any time within the last ninety days. We chase these cars up and find them on the lines of the middle west and south and southwest and in the northern states and in every section and every service—sometimes hauling hay and farm produce. In the south we find them carrying fruits back and forth. On one line a car made fifteen or twenty round trips before it was sent home."

A notable effort to cope with existing traffic conditions was made the other day by the Los Angeles and Salt Lake railroad, which sent fifty flat cars from Los Angeles to the Buick factory at Flint, Mich. Here 150 machines were placed on board and started back to the Pacific coast as a special train.

The amount of interest shown at the Chicago automobile salon in the new Fageol car (price $9,500 for the chassis alone, if you please) has led to a decision to enlarge the manufacturing company and enter the eastern market on a large scale. The builders, Frank Fageol and L. H. Bill of Oakland, Cal., have equipped their product, among other things, with a 125 horse power Hall-Scott aeroplane motor.

The Exide battery depot has been removed to specially built quarters at 18 East Twenty-fifth street, in the heart of the automobile district, where free battery inspection service is being dispensed to car owners.

Advices have reached the Goodyear tire factory at Akron, O., that an American made motorcycle has just captured the reliability run recently promoted by the Maritzburg Motorcycle club at Durban, South Africa. A Harley-Davidson machine on Goodyear tires, piloted by F. Zurcher, came through winner.



JORDAN
The Luxury Car
The Touring Car

It is a car distinctive to the smallest detail—a far cry from the conventional.

Look at the long, low, double cowl body. Notice the backward tilted windshield—the rakish angle of the steering column—the sleek, clean lines of the fenders.

Every possible comfort and convenience has been provided.

And the chassis is fully in keeping with the excellence of the body.

Each part is the Tiffany of its field. You have the Continental motor—Bosch ignition—Bijur starting and lighting system—Stromberg carburetor—Timken axles and bearings—Boyce motometer—Fedders radiator—Brown-Lipe transmission—Willard batteries—Stewart-Warner vacuum system.

It's a combination that must inspire confidence—a combination found in no other car built.

Come in and see—and let us arrange a demonstration.

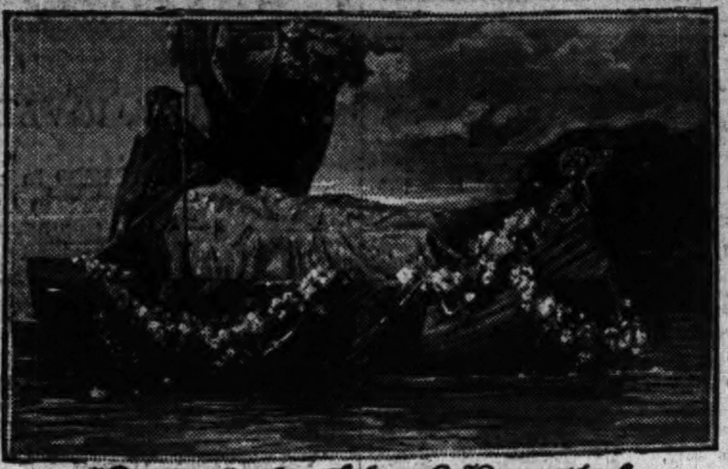
Gems in Etchers' Exhibit Delight Institute Visitors



"Elaine" by Tobey E. Rosenthal
Art Institute of Chicago

THE varied and delightful exhibit of etchings displayed by the Chicago Society of Etchers still continues to attract large numbers of visitors to its room at the Art institute. There are artists exhibiting who are going to be heard of in the future, etchers who are contributing to the history of etching in this country and abroad.

Elizabeth Colwell has three decorative pieces that are gems in their way, and Adams has a distinguished group from Venice. Thomas Congdon has a picture called "La Seine" which is an impressive, haunting thing, somewhat Brangwynesque. Troy Kinney's dancing figures float vividly about in air, and witching whispers come from over the sea in Cotton's glimpse of Bruge and St. Ives and Hornby's scenes of Paris and old Spain.

The works of Chicago sculptors have received much enthusiastic comment on all sides. It is generally recognized that there is much difficulty attendant the mere process of hadling sculptor, and for that reason men and women wishing a representative assembly of their works, find it hard to achieve it. For this reason the thirty-six pieces of sculpture by thirty-two sculptors, thirteen of them being women, are the more praiseworthy and notable.

So many requests have come to me from the suburbs of Chicago requesting the names of the sculptors and their works exhibited now that I am going to mention them briefly.

The "Young Diana with Her Bow" by Kathleen Beverly Ingels received an honorable mention. Mabel Torrey's "Winken, Blinken, and Nod" is a pretty conceit. Fjelde's portraits of Dr. Mayer, Mrs. Vea, and Dr. Fjelde attract attention by their distinctiveness.

Richard Bock, Lena Dunn, David Hunter, Agnes Fromen, Samuel Klasstorner, Jessie Helmuth, Adelyn Joseph, Clara Wilson, Mary Washburn, Pastor Magno, Modjeska, Lerch, Frank Gustafson, Louis Grell, Frank Ingrels, Maximilian Hoffman, Nacy Cox McCormack, Ruth Sherwood, and Fred Torrey, are good examples of sculptural work. Arthur Weil has an excellent likeness of Mrs. Gertrude Howe Britton, and Prashun has one of James Whitcomb Riley. There is other good work by Kathleen Wheeler, Renault, A. F. Tellander, and Edwin Pearson.

As has been mentioned before in these columns, Polasek of the institute was awarded $100 for his picture of the nude boy which was loaned by Marshall for the exhibition.

Don't fail to see the work of the Japanese artist Hokusai. It is more than fascinating in the vividness of its coloring, the uniqueness and unoccidental manner of treatment. There are ninety-two prints in all, and many of them, especially his flower and bird prints, are rare. In technique the majority of them display a marvelous dexterity which is distinctively characteristic of Hokusai and which reveal, too, a master hand in conception and execution.

The paintings of Winslow Homer have been rehung and are on exhibition near the prints of Hokusai on the second floor of the institute.

This week the women of the Municipal Art league are going to purchase a painting from the current exhibition at the institute and add it to their gallery which they have been invited to hang at the City club.

It will be remembered that the Municipal Art league began the custom of giving prizes to the Chicago painters and founded the numerous art galleries to be seen at the Englewood Woman's club, the Arché club, and elsewhere in the city. The first Chicago exhibition was held twenty-one years ago under the auspices of the Fine Arts association. In these twenty-one years since the Chicago Society of Artists and the Municipal Art league have coöperated with the Art institute the artists have grown largely in numbers and also in national importance until the present exhibition is the best of its kind ever hung at the institute, and Chicago painters have become known all over the country.

On the main floor of the institute there is on view a set of three plates, interesting examples of Italian majolica ware, which fit in with the spirit of valentine time, as they were often sent as love tokens by the lover to the mistress of his heart. Charles Allis of Milwaukee sent them to the institute and they were manufactured about 1535, a period when this particular kind of ware was at its best.

The larger plate in the center is most lover-like in spirit and came originally from the pottery at Gubio. It shows two hands clasped above a leaping flame. This represents a betrothal, while above is a heart transfixed with an arrow. This type plate was called "Amatoria," or gifts of love. The plates on each side show each a legend of classic love. One of them is the myth of Polyphemus and Galatea and all of the various incidents of their tragic and unmutual love are worked out in colorful detail. Even the trunk of the tree in the distance in whose protecting hollow Galatea listened to the man of her choice, who was afterward murdered by the anguished Polyphemus, is carefully shown. The other plate illustrates the fateful love of Apollo for Daphne and shows, too, her swift transformation into the shape and form of a willowy tree.

On March 8 Bertha Menzler Peyton is to have an exhibit at the institute of pictures taken principally during her recent sketching trips to the southwest. They include glimpses of the Grand Cañon, the Hopi Indian country, and pictorially interesting spots in Arizona. The exhibition will be taken to the Syracuse Museum of Art after it is shown here.

Commencing tomorrow afternoon there will be an exhibition of paintings by Allen Tucker. Mr. Tucker is an eastern artist, born in Columbia, New York. He is a member of the New York Art league and ranks well among the modern painters. He will have some ten pictures on exhibit, both landscapes and portraits. The paintings by Glackens will remain on exhibit until the 23d and Tucker's pictures will be there for two weeks.

The Friends of American Art have given to the institute one of George Fuller's paintings, "The Trial of the Salem Witches." This painting is now hanging in room 26, where it holds a prominent position among the other well known works given by this same society. The picture shows the interior of a rude colonial court room, in which half a score of figures appear. Some of them stand out boldly in the foreground and others are half shadowed by a balcony in the background. The dominating figure of the canvas is that of a slip of a girl confronting a severe black gowned judge, who stands on a dais at the left. Apparently the resolution of the court is wavering under the pervasive innocence of the accused girl. The colors of the picture are in dull rose and soft browns, and as it stands the picture is unfinished and yet compelling in every part. Mr. Fuller was one of our first real American artists. He was born in 1822 and works by him are not only rare and valuable in quality, but are scarce in quantity.

Valentine's day was well celebrated at the Art institute by the crowds which flocked to view the exhibition of valentines from the collection of Mrs. Emma Blanxius Hodge. This exhibition will remain on display until the end of the month and should be seen by all who are interested in this arch-flamen of Hymen, as Charles Lamb has named St. Valentine.

In the preface of the little catalogue which serves in the capacity of guide to the various love tokens in the exhibit there is an account of the beheading of the handsome Roman youth Valentius on the great Flamian way on the 14th of February, in the third century A. D. He belonged to one of the early Christian families of the period, and on account of his religion incurred the rage of Calpurnius. It was while he was in prison that he devoted himself to "pious exhortation and assurances of love," and sent them to the keeper's daughter on the morning of his decapitation. He signed these "Your Valentine," and there is every reason for believing that this was the origin of the custom of Valentine day.

As valentines are a distinctively English custom, the earliest specimens imported into this country nearly seventy years ago were from England. Their sale here as well as in England was small because of the high price of postage. It was not until Miss Esther A. Howland, a Mount Holyoke girl, took up the business of manufacturing valentines that they became a really flourishing industry. The first valentine ever made in this country is shown in the exhibit, as well as the valentine which was sent to Miss Howland from England, which gave her the idea of making them.

There is also a quaint collection of valentines which were mementos of the marriage of Queen Victoria to Prince Albert of Saxe Coburg Gotha. They show the various palaces at which the royal couple stopped in the course of their honeymoon. They are made from cork and charmingly colored.

Vesta Indestructible Isolator
This apparently simple device adds an extra life to every Vesta Storage Battery. Let us explain fully the very important part it plays in the Vesta. Write today.

Vesta Impregnated Wooden Mats
In this exclusive Vesta feature the wooden mats are chemically treated—absolutely preventing "treeing." It also doubles the life of the mats.

VESTA

Vesta's Third Great Triumph—Titanium

Vesta scored a great triumph with the Vesta Indestructible Isolators which lock the plates apart and prevent short circuits.

Next Vesta announced a second remarkable feature—Vesta Impregnated Wood Mats which prevent "treeing" and its disastrous consequences.

Now comes Vesta's third great improvement—the use of Titanium, a rare mineral which greatly prolongs the life of the battery.

Titanium enters into the lead plates, hardening them and giving them longer life—it also remains in the battery solution, precipitating minerals and impurities in solution and adding vastly to the efficiency of the battery.

VESTA DOUBLE LIFE STORAGE BATTERY

Bear in mind that all these discoveries are exclusive, patented Vesta features. No other battery can use them. Even the use of Titanium in batteries is covered by U. S. Basic Patents belonging solely to the Vesta.

These three great triumphs make the Vesta last twice as long as any other battery—and longer. In service, satisfaction, economy—from any standpoint—no other battery can even compare with the Vesta. Yet Vesta costs no more

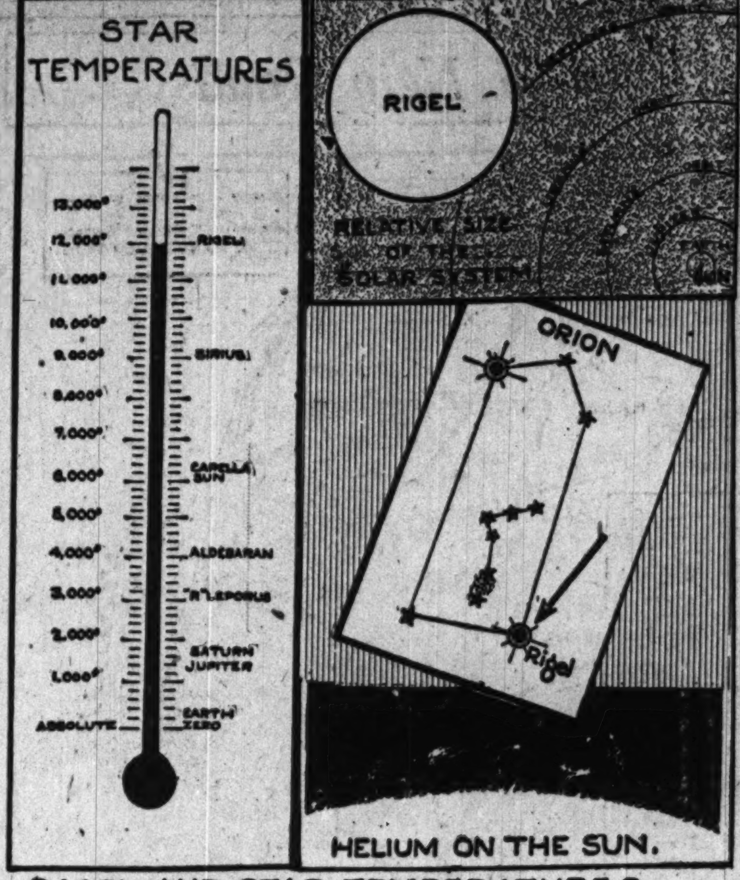
ASTRONOMY by CLIFFORD RAYMOND

RIGEL.



RIGEL AND STAR TEMPERATURES.
DRAWN by S. F. MAXWELL

RIGEL, in the foot of Orion, is the type star of that constellation and of the third stage in the evolution of a sun. When a star has advanced sufficiently beyond the primitive neubla to have a shape and identity of its own the form which it takes is like that of Rigel. The Orion stars appear to have all been born from the same great nebula, for traces of it are still seen about some of them. Rigel has progressed further from the earlier stages than some of the others, but not so far as to lose the typical Orion characteristics.

The blue white light from Rigel indicates that the gases composing it are in a state of the most violent heat imaginable. On the sun itself, in the midst of the whipping tongues of fire, the temperature is 6,000 degrees above zero, but on Rigel the temperature of the surface gases exceeds 12,000 degrees and no one knows what temperatures may prevail deep in the interior. At this intense heat all the substances with which we are familiar vanish, leavi g only helium gas.

Helium has a remarkable history. It was first seen on the sun in the fiery wisps about the edge of the solar disc. Later it was found in the earth and in meteors, and was eventually shown to be one of the substances into which radium converts itself. This last discovery was a startling revelation to students of stellar evolution. Rigel, as well as the other Orion stars, is nearly all helium, and must therefore contain great quantities of radium. This immediately explained ho such enormous quantities of heat could be maintained over long ages of time as is evidently the case.

In bulk Rigel is one of the largest suns in the sky. Its diameter is about 2,600,000,000 miles, much larger than the entire orbit of Saturn. Beside such a mass the sun would appear a trifling speck, indeed. Yet we know from its composition that there is nothing solid or liquid about it, but that it is gaseous to its center. Most of it is so tenuous that it must resemble thin air far more than it does our familiar vapors and gases.

In future ages a decline must come. Cooling will carry Rigel through the stages of Sirius, the sun, then Aldebaran, until the smoldering embers grow dull and red, and finally become as lifeless as the moon. This is evolution, the course predestined to every star from its nebulous birth.

SEVEN DEADLY SINS

A Desperate Man—A Despairing Woman

NANCE O'NEIL, the distinguished actress, has a part worthy of her great emotional powers in "Greed," the "money-play" of the Seven Deadly Sins.

Passion for speculation is vividly portrayed by Miss O'Neil.

She plays the part of a girl who becomes involved in the shady financial schemes of a desperate adventurer. Later she rebels against his attempts to use her to lure others to financial ruin. You will miss the week's biggest film feature if you miss "Greed."

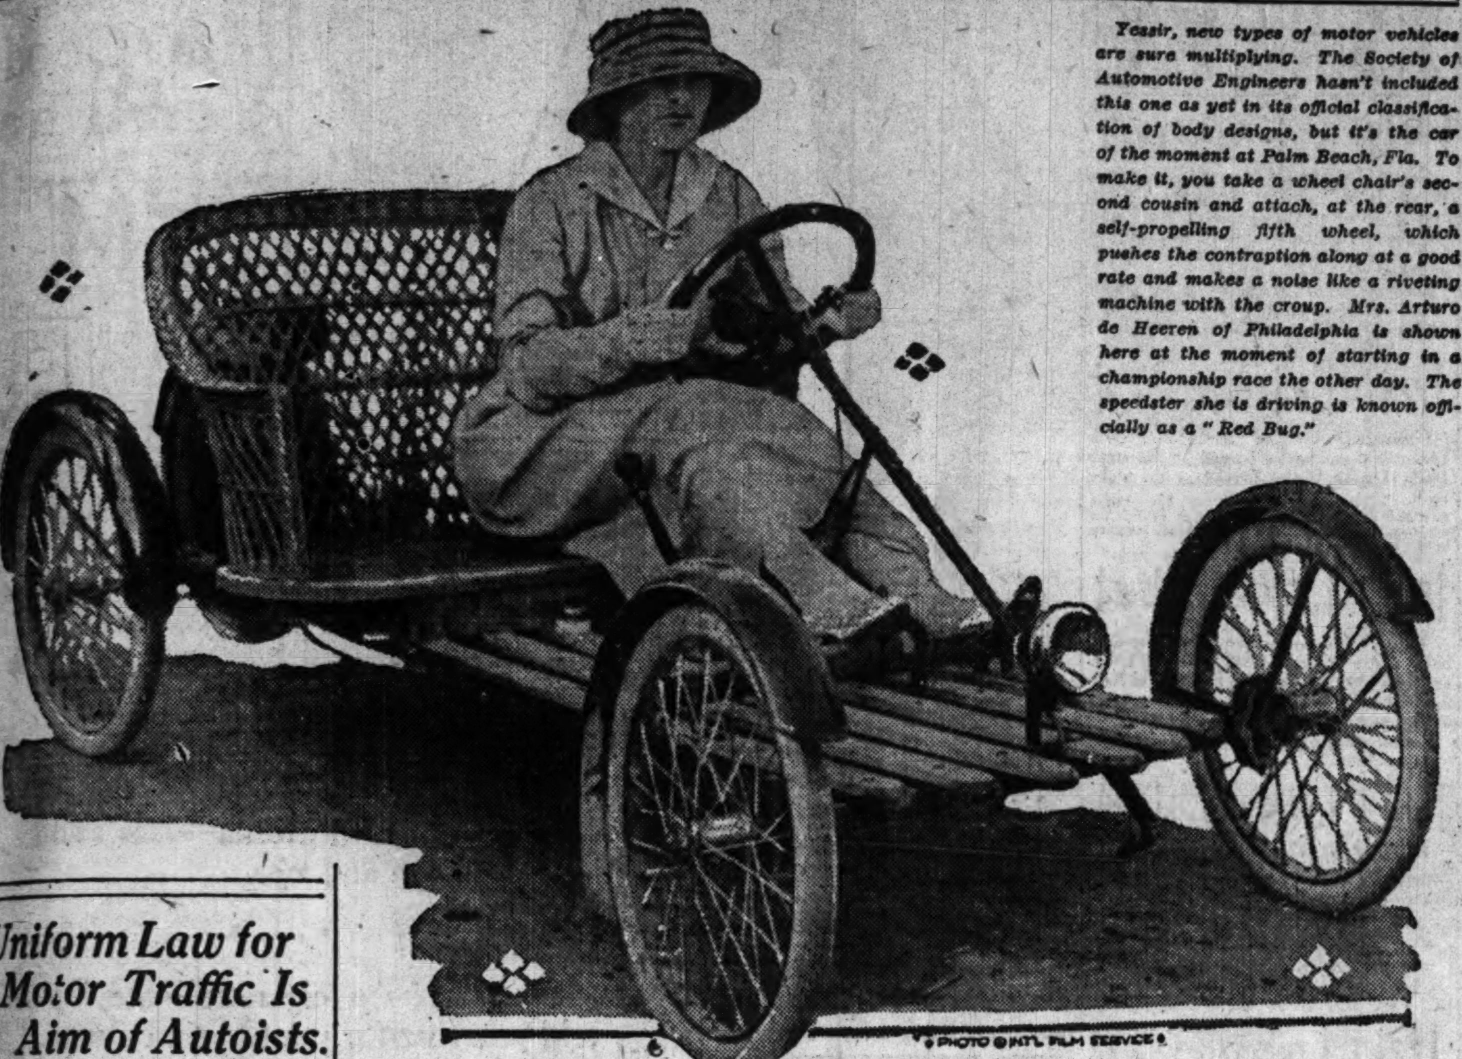
AUTOMOBILES ◘ Conducted by SHEPPARD BUTLER ◘ MOTORCYCLES

INTRODUCING THE "RED BUG"

The Same Being a Racing Demon of Prowess and Social Standing at Palm Beach This Winter.



Yessir, new types of motor vehicles are sure multiplying. The Society of Automotive Engineers hasn't included this one as yet in its official classification of body designs, but it's the car of the moment at Palm Beach, Fla. To make it, you take a wheel chair's second cousin and attach, at the rear, a self-propelling fifth wheel, which pushes the contraption along at a good rate and makes a noise like a riveting machine with the croup. Mrs. Arturo de Heeren of Philadelphia is shown here at the moment of starting in a championship race the other day. The speedster she is driving is known officially as a "Red Bug."

Uniform Law for Motor Traffic Is Aim of Autoists.

A CAMPAIGN for the adoption of a uniform traffic law throughout the United States is to be undertaken this year by the American Automobile association. Concerning the need of legislation of this kind, Osborne I. Yellott, chairman of the legislative board which has drafted the proposed statute, offers the following comment:

"Many of our motor vehicle laws are so complex that even a trained lawyer has difficulty in understanding them, and the ordinary layman gives up the task as hopeless. The fundamental principle as to the use of the highways is that every one should be permitted the greatest possible freedom which is consistent with the rights of others. Consequently every person employing a vehicle which may cause injury to others, unless reasonable care is used, should be compelled by positive provisions of the law, rigidly enforced, to employ a degree of care commensurate with the risk involved to others under each particular condition which may arise. At the same time he should not be bound down and hampered by minute restrictions not reasonably necessary for the protection of other highway users.

"It must follow, also, that the enforcement of the law should be rational. The provisions relating to arrest, bail, trial, appeal, etc., should provide for the prompt apprehension and punishment of offenders, but at the same time should be framed with due regard to the fact that the great majority of violators of our road traffic laws are not in the category of common thieves, pickpockets, burglars, murderers, etc. Therefore special facilities should be afforded for the prompt disposition of such cases without unreasonable hardship to the offenders.

"The uniform traffic law is not submitted as in any sense the final word in traffic legislation. Traffic conditions on our highways are changing almost daily with the great increase in the use of the motor vehicle, particularly the motor truck. Hence traffic regulations must necessarily, for a long while yet to come, be largely experimental. Old ideas of regulation which have stood the test of actual experience under modern conditions should be retained. Those which have been tried and found to be failures must be cast aside. New ideas must be substituted for these latter. Such new ideas must in turn be put to the test of actual experience. If they prove successful they will be retained. If they prove to be failures they will have to give place to still newer ideas."

THE portrait of Mrs. Robert G. McGann as she appeared at the Lincoln inaugural ball, dressed in a gown of her mother, Mrs. Farwell, has just been painted by Frank A. Werner. Mrs. McGann is now at Santa Barbara, Cal., where she expects to build a home overlooking the ocean.

Motor Caravan to Make Trip

DETAILED routing plans for the first west to east overland automobile tour, to be undertaken this summer by the San Francisco Advertising club, were announced last week by those in charge of the project.

The undertaking promises to be the most pretentious thing in the way of transcontinental motor caravans since the Glidden tours were abandoned. The travelers' destination is St. Louis, where a national advertising convention is to be held. Inasmuch as a thorough investigation of road conditions preceded the laying out of the itinerary, it should be a matter of interest to motorists of the middle west who are planning automobile trips to the Pacific coast this summer.

The tentative schedule includes thirteen days on the road, as the tour has been planned to include the beautiful trip through the cañon of the Arkansas and the Royal gorge. This route, going into the most mountainous sections of the Rockies, requires a slightly longer time allowance than would a more direct trail. The proposed routing is as follows:

Leave Oakland (San Francisco) 4 a. m. first day; arrive Truckee.

Leave Truckee second morning; arrive Tonopah, Nev., via Reno.

Leave Tonopah third morning; arrive Ely.

Leave Ely fourth morning; arrive Fish Springs, Utah.

Leave Fish Springs fifth morning; arrive Salt Lake City.

Leave Syracuse tenth morning; arrive Hutchinson.

Leave Hutchinson eleventh morning; arrive Kansas City.

The average daily run will be 250 miles. Twenty cars are all that are wanted by the club, but a few more than that number may be allowed. The rules governing the entries require a $100 cash deposit, seven of which have been made.

I've Just Completed The Biggest Improvement Ever Made In Playing Cards

No alterations in playing cards have ever been so far-reaching in effect as the introduction of the Telbax idea. No changes in the pack have ever served to put more "pep" into games than the Telbax backs. No modification of old games—no invention of new ones—has ever succeeded in putting as much fun and excitement into playing cards as you will get out of Telbax. And Telbax do not require changes in any game whatever.

The TELBAX Backs Are Different Backs

TELBAX
TRADE MARK, Reg. U.S. PAT. OFF.
PLAYING CARDS

The TELBAX Faces Are Standard Faces

Add Oodles of Fun to EVERY Card Game

Play your favorite game with Telbax and you will have more fun than you ever imagined possible. You'll laugh at every play—from the first hand to the last. One time the laugh's on you. Next time it's your turn to laugh.

There's more real fun in playing any card game with Telbax than there is in playing it with ordinary cards. Where formerly were moments of lagging or lacking interest, there is now a roar of laughter. Gripping excitement replaces placid indifference. And those who never enjoyed card games before will have barrels of fun when they play with Telbax.

TELBAX Backs Tell Face Values—if You Read Them Right

Telbax backs have crosses across them. And every cross is of different dimensions. Some are thick. Some are thin. Some are just medium. But no two are identically the same. Each cross tells what the face of the card is—provided your judgment is infallible, your eye keen and your memory accurate. But everyone misses now and then—just when the wrong guess would lose the game or the right one win it.

Play Any Card Game, Old or New, With TELBAX

It isn't necessary to learn new rules in order to play with Telbax Playing Cards. The established rules stand. You merely watch the backs of the other players' cards and play accordingly. If you read them right you're lucky; if not, you will probably lose. But there's a good laugh in it either way.

With Telbax you can play all card games: bridge, whist, five hundred, pinochle, rhum, poker, casino, hearts, cribbage — any game under the sun that can be played with ordinary playing cards. And on top of all those there are new games which can be played with Telbax cards only.

But no matter what game you play, there is more real, innocent, good-natured fun in playing it with Telbax than with ordinary cards.

Not "Marked" Cards—Equal Chance for All

Telbax must not be confused with the "marked" cards used by dishonest players. There are no secret marks about Telbax—just plain, different-size crosses that everyone can see. It isn't like stealing a look at your neighbor's hand to see what he has. Look at the backs of his cards—and he can look at yours. If you are clever enough, or fortunate enough, you can sometimes tell what he has. But more often you guess it wrong. And the more you know about Telbax crosses, the more they'll double-cross you.

Playing the old games with the new Telbax Playing Cards is so exciting, so exhilarating, so full of fun and entertainment that the element of gambling is not needed to add interest to the game.

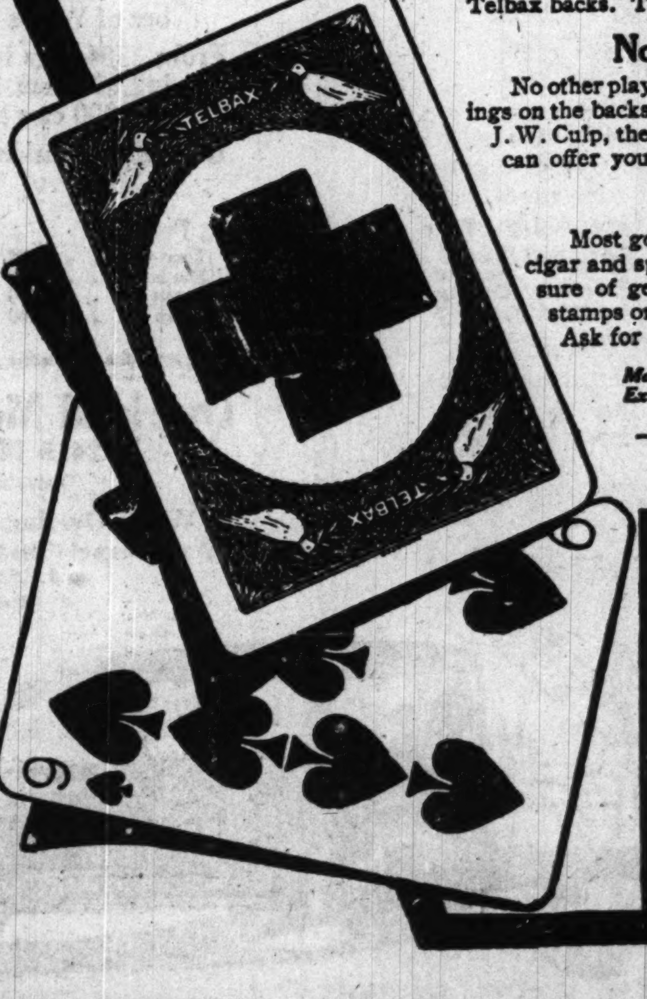
No One Can Wholly Master TELBAX

Telbax defy the keenest eye—even the best of judgments have failed to read the crosses right. The inventor himself is unable to master the Telbax backs—to tell what the Telbax backs tell every time.

A man who had studied Telbax cards faithfully and memorized the key thoroughly came to our office and said he could read every card. We told him if he could we would pay him $1,000. But after a number of failures, he gave it up. The difference in the crosses is very small. The first person to conquer Telbax is yet to be found.

TELBAX Parties a World of Fun—Be the First in Your Set to Give One

Telbax parties are a scream. And they are becoming more and more popular as Telbax become better known. People who never cared for card parties become enthusiastic card players with Telbax. Spring a surprise treat on your friends by inviting them to a Telbax party. Offer an extra prize to the one who can read all the Telbax backs. Then watch the fun! You'll never forget it—nor will your guests.



No Other Backs Like TELBAX Backs

No other playing cards can embody the Telbax idea—of having different size markings on the backs of cards to distinguish them. The broad basic patents issued to Mr. J. W. Culp, the inventor of Telbax, prevent even the slightest imitation. Nobody can offer you a substitute for Telbax, without infringing on the Telbax patents.

See Your Dealer and Buy a Pack Today

Most good dealers sell Telbax—druggists, department stores, stationery, cigar and sporting goods dealers. If you can't get them at your dealer's, make sure of getting Telbax by sending to the factory. The coupon and 25c in stamps or coin will bring you a pack postpaid. But try your dealer first. Ask for No. 1 grade Telbax.

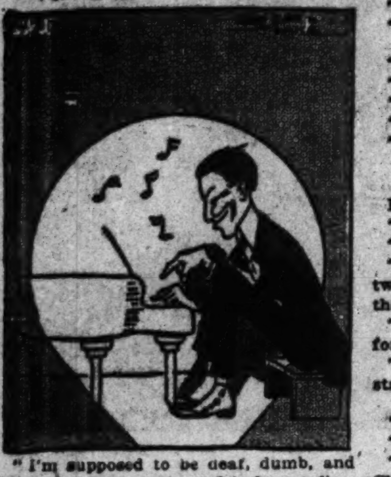
THIS GETS A LAUGH FROM SOME IN VAUDEVILLE

PALACE.

Montgomery and Perry:

"George, I've got a new joke."

"'What is it?'"



"I'm supposed to be deaf, dumb, and blind and you're supposed to be a policeman. I'll come walking along, and you ask me where I'm going. See?"

"All right—where are you going?"

"I'm going to court."

"What for?"

"To get my hearing."

"What is the eternal question?"

"Woman."

"Wrong."

"Well, what is it?"

"'What'll you have?'"

RIALTO.

Roach and McCurdy:

"I got a divorce from my saloon."

"Is your wife a saloon?"

"No. I hired a new bartender. In two days I owed him $50, so I gave him the saloon and I went to work for him."

"Why didn't you give him your notes for the money?"

"What's the use? He doesn't understand music."

"What are you doing now?"

"I'm going to be a detective."

"What kind—a regular detective or a Chicago detective?"

"What's the difference?"

"A regular detective has to work twenty years before he can retire and a Chicago detective can retire in about two years."

"I want to be a detective like Sherlock Holmes."

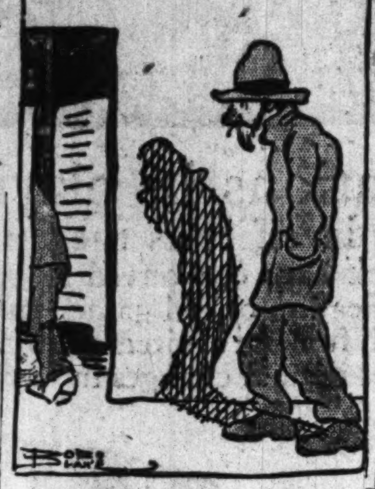
"Now, for instance, suppose you are following a man."

"Why? Does he owe me money?"

"No, but he is a desperate character. He is under suspicion, and you are following him."

"Where is he going?"

"You don't know."



"Well, I'll go up and ask him."

"That would spoil everything. He mustn't know that you're behind him. He would kill you."

"Well, then, I'll walk in front of him."

"No; you got to walk behind him. You go wherever he goes. You do whatever he does. If he turns, you turn; if he runs, you run; if he goes in a saloon——"

"Say it quick."

"You stay outside till he comes out."

"O, that's a bum job.

"While you are standing there you must keep your mouth open and your eyes shut. First you must reconnoiter. If you see a policeman asleep on his beat that means something."

"It means the saloons are closed."

McVICKER'S

Ward and Fay:

"Do you remember, doctor, you gave me brandy when I had a cramp in my left leg?"

"Of course I remember."

"Well, it cured it the best I ever saw cramps cured."

"Glad to hear it."

"And now I've got it in my right leg."

"You said your medicine does more good than any other medicine in the market."

"Well, doesn't it?"

"No, I took some and it didn't do me the least bit of good."

"Then you didn't follow the directions."

"Why, what are the directions?"

"Keep the bottle tightly corked."

THE WORLD'S ALL RIGHT.

The sea would be a lovely place
If it wasn't for the sailors,
And where would be a jail's disgrace
If it wasn't for the jailers?
The fighting game would be a peach
If it wasn't for the fighters,
And the writing game would be immense
If it wasn't for the writers.
And so it goes most everywhere,
I'm finding out each minute
That the world's all right—
It's the people who are in it.

Most any play would be a hit
If it wasn't for the players,
And all the weights would be correct
If it wasn't for the weighers;
Our groc'ries would be fresh and sweet
If it wasn't for the grocers,
For groc'ries in themselves are good—
I ask you, ain't it so, sirs?
Without the sinators how fine
Would be the average "sinate."
The world's all right—
It's the people who are in it.

A war would be far better, too,
If it wasn't for the warriors,
And nobler much would be the law
If it wasn't for the lawyers;
We'd learn a great deal more in school
If it wasn't for the teachers,
And understand the Golden Rule
If it wasn't for the preachers.
Nature's always full of charm,
The sun shines every minute,
The world's all right—
Yes, the w-o-r-l-d's a-l-l r-i-g-h-t—

The TRIBUNE'S WEEKLY ALMANACK

FEBRUARY

Late February

LATE February opens an east window timidly. Expectancy has been dormant. The west window affords the winter view. It exposes the winter idea of life, the sunset red across the fields of snow and through the brown dead woods. Winter is content with this view. With its cold it is wholly intensive, and, being intensive, builds up the four protecting walls of hut happiness.

In hut happiness comfort is the powerful element, the dominant part of the composition. It is the essential. The four walls and the roof inclose this comfort and while winter rests its dead hand upon prospects and hope there is no thought of opening a casement.

Late in February there comes a definite break in the dead monotony, in the pleasant, intensive monotony of winter. Expectancy, sensitive to catch the slightest touch of optimism, arises at the close of February.

It turns to the east window, to the casement opening upon recreation. It anticipates the hepatica and the bluebird, the bloodroot and the meadow lark singing even if it be from a field of snow in April. It looks for the reproductive processes which depend upon the spade. Hut happiness looks through west windows at the dead order of things and at the evening red, but thinks of the warm sunrise which will permit the containing and comfortable walls to be opened at windows which will let in the odor of blossoming nature.

ECZEMA

Dr. EVANS of The Tribune and other medical authorities now agree that many cases of Eczema are due to external causes. The manufacturers of CRANOLENE claim, and have claimed for years, that Eczema is

ONLY SKIN DEEP

And that it is caused by a tiny parasite that has its origin in dyes, dyed furs and clothes; by contact with chemicals and greases in occupations such as houseworkers; clothing, drygoods and grocery clerks; photographers, engravers, printers, painters, bleachers, dyers, tanners, nurses, dentists, druggists, chemists, bakers, barbers, bartenders, liquor dealers, furriers, hat makers, milliners; tobacco, sugar, candy and chocolate workers; plasterers, paper makers; building and metal trades; fruit handlers; ice and ice cream makers; soapmakers, packers and florists, and workers in munition factories.

We confidently believe, and this belief is based on a successful record of more than eight years, that we have discovered in a powerful acid, extracted by our own patented process from the common table cranberry, AN AGENCY THAT DESTROYS this Eczema parasite. This acid has been scientifically compounded with such well known and time-tried skin remedies as Oil of Wintergreen and Camphor Gum, and is sold under the trade name of CRANOLENE, an ointment that soothes, heals and marvelously rejuvenates the tortured skin.

TRADE MARK REG.

Car Value —What Makes It?

A most important factor in determining the value of the motor car you buy this spring is the stability of its manufacturer.

Assets and good will create stability.

So it is interesting to you, as an Overland owner or admirer to know that the assets of The Willys-Overland Company are more than $68,000,000.00.

Its good will can best be judged by the steadily increasing number of Willys-Overland purchasers.

From 3304 cars in 1910 our annual business grew steadily to 142,807 cars in 1916. Our contracts call for more than 200,000 cars this year.

It's well to consider such fixed facts before you purchase your car.

Help Your Car Carry the Winter load

Cold weather adds to the load which the Delco or Remy cranking, lighting or ignition system on your car has to carry.

Cold weather cuts down the efficiency of the battery; cold weather thickens the motor oil, making it harder to crank a cold motor; cold weather slows the gasoline flow.

In winter, you should give the electrical equipment on your car the very best attention.

A new electrical company — United MOTORS SERVICE, Inc.—has been established for Chicago and vicinity. It offers a factory service that will assist you in keeping the Delco or Remy system and the Klaxon horn on your car in perfect running order.

Dixie Highway Travel Heavy During Winter

By V. D. L. Robinson.

Secretary of the Dixie Highway Association.]

A CONSERVATIVE estimate places the amount of money scattered along the Dixie highway, along detours while construction work is going on, and along the east coast route from the New England states en route to Florida during the season of 1916-17 in excess of $2,760,000. Approximately 27,600 tourists traveling in 6,900 cars have made this trip over roads ranging from fair to impassable, excepting with mule power, according to weather conditions.

They have journeyed southward in the face of warnings sent out by the Dixie Highway association that the road improvements along the Dixie and other main highways of the south had not progressed to the point where winter automobile travel to Florida could be made without encountering miles of new grades yet to be surfaced and difficult detours. These warnings as well as accounts of the experiences of those who had made the trip had been given wide publicity through the clubs and touring bureaus of the north and through the newspapers.

Of the 6,900 cars it may be taken as a fairly accurate division to say that 4,400 cars went down the east coast from the New England states. The remaining 2,500 cars traveled the western division of the Dixie highway as far as Nashville. Some of them braved the Cumberland mountains en route to Chattanooga, others came into Chattanooga via Huntsville, and still others went from Huntsville through Gadsden and Rome to Atlanta, while the Dixie highway between Nashville and Chattanooga was in course of construction.

If 2,500 car owners will disregard the warnings of friends the candid statements of touring bureaus and automobile clubs of what they may encounter if they strike wet weather and the repeated announcements sent broadcast by the Dixie Highway association that the highway is not ready for winter travel this year, it is reasonable to suppose that ten times this number will drive to Florida during the season 1917 if the Dixie Highway association can announce that at least one division of the highway offers a reasonably comfortable trip from Chicago or Detroit to Florida.

The sections of the Dixie highway yet to be improved, which have stood in the way of through travel this winter, fortunately comprise only a small percentage of the total mileage of the main lines of the highway, as a tremendous amount of construction work has been done during the eighteen months the Dixie Highway association has been in existence.

On the western division, between Louisville and Nashville, there is less than twenty miles out of 208 to be surfaced. This mileage has not blocked through travel this winter, as it consists of unsurfaced stretches of Telford base, which is rough but can be traveled in any kind of weather. The people along this section have tasted of the profits from the tourist travel and are exerting every energy to close the gaps and begin the construction of permanent roads.

Between Nashville and Chattanooga, where the worst part of the western division exists, a new road is in process of construction. Every county is exerting its utmost endeavor to complete the entire division in time for the fall and winter travel, providing a highway which is free of toll and ferries and with a maximum grade over the Cumberland mountains of 5 per cent. It is all provided for with the exception of one county, which will need additional funds to complete about five miles of grading and surfacing of approximately twenty miles.

On the eastern division, between Richmond, Ky., and Knoxville, Tenn., the Kentucky and Tennessee counties are hard at work straining every point to open their division to through travel by fall of this year. Ample funds are in hand to complete the stretch with the exception of five miles of grading and about thirty-six miles of surfacing. Appeals are being made to the state highway department and the citizens of Cincinnati, Lexington, and Knoxville are determined to have it opened even if it means digging down in their pockets to furnish outside assistance.

Between Chattanooga and Atlanta, both via Dalton and Rome, all of the grading has been completed and the major portion of the surfacing. The funds are in hand and it will unquestionably be ready for through travel this fall. Between Atlanta and Macon, as well as on the other divisions of the highway in Georgia, the counties are united in aiding one another in completing the unsurfaced portions in time for the through travel which is anxious to come south. On the central division, between Macon and Jacksonville as an example, the counties have voluntarily forfeited their rights to federal and state aid to other counties less able to take care of the construction of their part of the road.

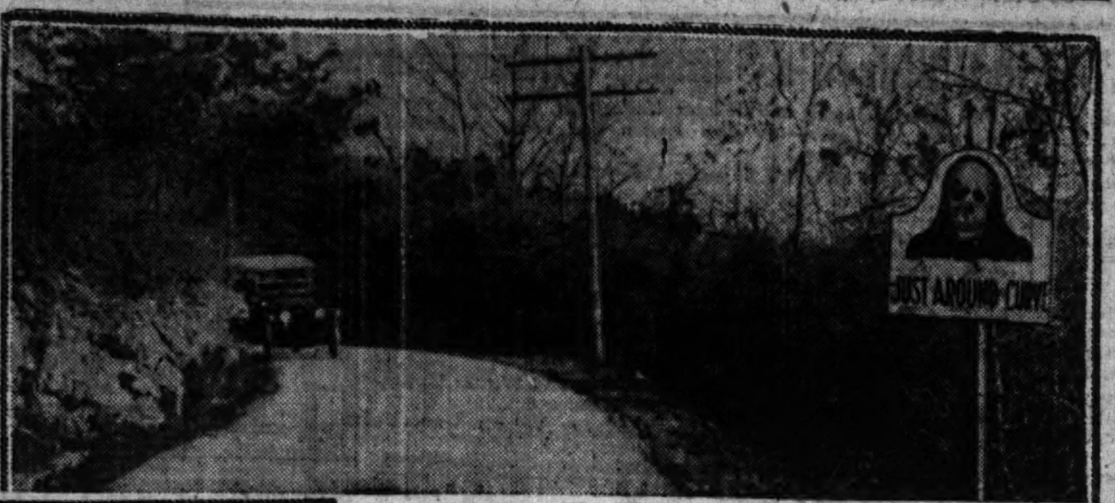
◆

For the present heavy winter rains have erected an almost impenetrable barrier between Nashville and Chattanooga and between Huntsville and Chattanooga or Rome, Ga. Tourists going south over the Dixie highway are advised by all means to ship their cars between these points. Committees of the Chattanooga Automobile club and of the Dixie Highway association have been engaged in scouting out all possible roads in order to find a detour which could be used while the Dixie highway between Nashville and Chattanooga is in course of construction. They were able to negotiate all of the roads undertaken, but their observation of the experiences of parties of tourists from the north indicates that the difficulties which must be overcome are too severe to warrant any one attempting to travel them before these roads have had an opportunity to dry out thoroughly.

The present difficulties to traveling through Tennessee, northern Alabama, and sections of Georgia, are materially enhanced by the amount of construction going on. Newly graded roads, which the counties have not had time to surface, are much harder going in wet weather than the old trails before they were improved. The grading on these stretches has progressed to such an extent that it is reasonably certain these sections will be surfaced and that it will be possible to travel these roads in some degree of comfort in any kind of weather by summer or fall of this year. The Dixie highway between Nashville and Chattanooga, as well as a few sections of the highway in Georgia, have been provided for and will be opened as a well surfaced connected road from Nashville to the Florida line in that time.

SEEIN' THINGS

Meeting a Death's Head at the Roadside Is Just One of the Incidents of North Carolina Motoring Nowadays.



ONE HALF OF ROAD
IS YOURS
THE OTHER HALF
MINE.

Down in North Carolina they figure that it takes a bit of a shock to restrain the unruly motorist. This being the case, the tourist who drives through Asheville and the near by country this spring may as well be prepared to meet a grinning skull half a mile outside the Asheville city limits. It's there, installed recently at the request of the Asheville Motor club, and serves as a warning of a sharp curve around a rocky bluff which lies on the ten mile stretch of asphalt-macadam road between Asheville and Weaverville. At the city limits another unusual legend—"Half of This Road Is Yours; the Other Half Mine"—offers a more gentle reminder of the courtesies of the highway. Both signs were designed by the road engineer of Buncombe county, but, of course, the name of the county hasn't anything to do with the matter.

Vaudeville Wit

McVICKER'S.

Al Fields: I just come from a funeral. My oldest son, Abie, is a doctor, and I think it's no more than right when he loses a customer I should go along. Only it takes up nearly all my time. And each time he has to fill out a fresh certificate. But Abie is so near sighted, the last time he filled one out, where it said "cause of death" he went and wrote in his own name.

He's a born doctor. He's got a big sign over the front door what reads "Abraham Cohen, M. D. I forgot what M. D. stands for in Latin, but with Abie it means "many deaths."

Not that he don't know his business. But when Abie treats a patient for one thing and the fellow gets stubborn and insists on dying on something else, that ain't the poor boy's fault. But one thing I must say for Abie's customers—at least they always die cured.

All day long his office is full of people. If they were only coming for treatments instead of to collect bills, that boy would be doing a wonderful business.

The other day Jake Greenberg brought his boy Ikey to Abie's office for treatment. I heard him say to Ikey: "The doctor charges $3 for the first call and $1 for each call after that, so you know what to do." When it came Ikey's turn he rushed in and said to my son: "Here I am again, doctor."

But Abie can be smart, too. He said: "Well, continue the same treatment as before."

He Likes Dainties Better Than Medicine, but——

DOGS like medicine no better than you or I, but they need it occasionally the same as you or I.

Worms are the ever present, dangerous enemy of dogs. Famous breeders confess that the signs of worms are often so obscure that they are deceived. They do what every owner of a valued dog should do—administer regular doses of Vermilax Worm Remedy, the famous prescription of Dr. T. Delaney, which has revolutionized the treatment for worms in dogs.

Vermilax Worm Remedy positively removes all round or tape worms, usually within an hour, and the dog is neither prostrated nor even severely inconvenienced.

Try this remedy "For Your Dog's Sake."

Vermilax Worm Remedy and many other Vermilax dog remedies are on sale at Buck & Rayner's six stores, Public Drug Co., and other druggists. Also for sale by Von Lengerke & Antoine, Kaempfer's Bird Store, and Atlantic & Pacific Bird Store. Wholesale distributors, Fuller-Morrisson Company.

Ask the clerk at the counter for a copy of Dr. Delaney's Handbook on Dog Diseases—FREE.

Ed and Jack Smith:

"Will you lend me a dollar?"

"I only lend money to friends."

"Ain't I a friend?"

"No; friends are those who don't try to borrow money."

"I see Bill Brown has died."

"Yes, he was a man without blame and beloved and respected by everybody."

"Ah, you knew him well?"

"No; I copied that from his tombstone."

"I went to New York last week to call on my uncle. He let me go to the top of the Flat Iron building while he stood on the sidewalk below."

"And could you see your uncle way down on the sidewalk?"

"Yes, but my uncle looked like an 'ant.'"

"A hedgehog on the ground is a sign of a late winter."

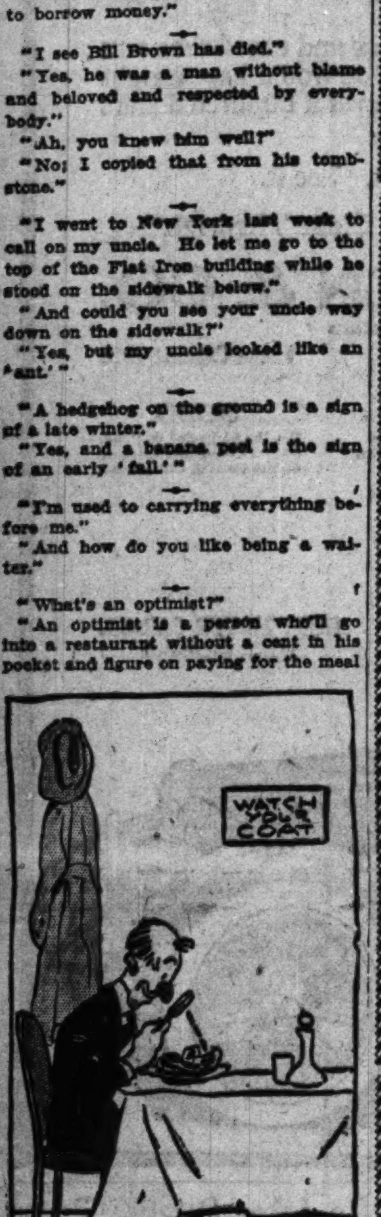
"Yes, and a banana peel is the sign of an early 'fall.'"

"I'm used to carrying everything before me."

"And how do you like being a waiter."

"What's an optimist?"

"An optimist is a person who'll go into a restaurant without a cent in his pocket and figure on paying for the meal with the pearl he hopes to find in the oysters."



"What do you take for a headache?"

"Liquor the night before."

"Your brother used to be a gay old boy."

"He's given up drinking and all his bad habits and settled down in a quiet little place in the suburbs."

"Where?"

"In the cemetery."

"The people in Yonkers don't understand acting. I'll be hanged if I ever act there again."

"I know it. They nearly got you last time."

"I saw you outside the Hotel Astor last week."

"That's where I'm staying."

"Where?"

"On the outside."

"Is this a healthy town?"

"I should say so. When I came here I hadn't the strength to utter a word; I had scarcely a hair on my head; I couldn't walk across the room and had to be lifted from my bed."

"You give me hope. How long have you been here?"

"I was born here."

Claude and Marion Cleveland:

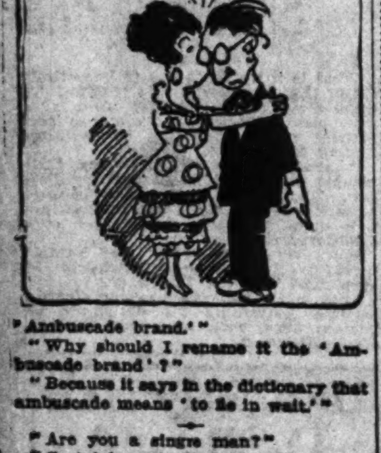
"Why do you look so sad?"

"I just heard one man call another a crook, and the man that was called a crook said the other man would have to apologize, or there would be a fight."

"Why should that make you sad?"

"'Cause the other man apologized."

"You ought to rename that scale you've got in your butcher shop the 'Ambuscade brand.'"



"Why should I rename it the 'Ambuscade brand'?"

"Because it says in the dictionary that ambuscade means 'to lie in wait.'"

"Are you a single man?"

"Certainly not; I'm twins."

"You remind me of a star."

"Thank you. But, tell me, why do I remind you of a star?"

"Because it is out so very late at night and looks so pale in the morning."

(1st Floor, North)

Cotton Cluny Laces at Half Price

These Laces are all imported English and German goods, in many designs—in white and cream, wide and narrow widths; bothe edges and insertions, matched and broken sets, suitable for making curtains, for scarfs, for fancy work and for trimmings waists and dresses. Three big groups at,

Yard, 8½c, 5c and 3½c

15,000 Yards Trimming Laces

Hundreds of pieces of imported pure silk black laces in this lot at less than duty cost. Also pretty colored trimming laces; also white and cream laces and edges, insertions, band galloons, allovers, flouncings, etc. Assortments priced according to quality, at less than half.

Yard, 29c, 19c, 15c, 10c and 6½c

Embroideries at Less Than Half Price

Imported from St. Gall, Switzerland; and only because they are sample or top pieces (the first half yard being soiled from display, the rest being fresh, crisp and clean), are we enabled to offer these pretty edges and insertions, beadings and bands and demi-flouncings and 18 and 27 inch flouncings at such big savings. Four big groups at less than half price, yard, 25c, 12½c, 8½c and 6½c

Silk Embroidery Allovers at 29c

Imported goods, beautiful colored effects in a hundred different patterns. The colored combinations are beautiful, some combined with gold and silver. The wholesale prices of these laces were two and three times the price we are selling them for tomorrow; choice at, yard, 29c

Oriental Lace Edges—An importer's entire surplus stock, in white and cream. Over 200 designs to choose from, yd., 6½c

Valenciennes Laces—French and German. These come in matched patterns, in graduating widths, so much in demand now for trimming purposes, Monday, 12 yards for 55c; yard, 5c

Extra—Venise Lace Edgings, yd., 5c. Only 5,500 yards in this lot. These little Venise laces are much in demand, yard, 5c

SALES BUILDERS.

Two men, now and for past five years Eastern and Western Field Managers, respectively, for one of the largest manufacturing concerns in the country, will soon be in the market for new jobs.

The qualifications of these 35 year old men are based upon long experience in the management of men and in successfully promoting, organizing and developing one of the hardest-to-sell lines on the American market.

During the past ten years they have created hundreds of dealerships for high grade and high priced electrical and mechanical specialty lines. Their work has resulted in the investment of hundreds of thousands of dollars by the dealers so secured. Both these men possess executive ability and something in the way of personality. Also, they are intimately acquainted—with both business men and conditions—in every important city in the United States and Canada.

Especially would the advertisers—men of better than ordinary versatility—like to hear from financially sound manufacturers of high grade specialties [including motor vehicles and allied lines], whose product is a finished one but whose sales organization is not.

Ultimate opportunity of substantial investment preferred.

A BUSINESS CHANCE FOR THE BUSINESS MAN.

A sales force is being reorganized by one of the country's greatest business institutions. This enterprise is not new, but a decided improvement on old selling methods.

The men we want need have no capital and will not obligate themselves financially in any manner, but must have ambition plus absolute sincerity of purpose.

The men we want can develop this opportunity into an independent, more profitable business—possibly more tempting, with future advancement, than the present business connections.

This proposition will not require men to work months to build up a profitable weekly remuneration. This has a certainty of a salaried position with the added possibility to increase it with increased efficiency. Call before 1 o'clock. 708 Fisher Bldg.

ADVERTISING SALESMEN—HIGH GRADE.
$5,000 TO $7,000 PER YEAR.
We wish to add three or four more exceptionally good salesmen to our strong sales force. Our men are making as high as $7,500 a year. Well established business and thoroughly reliable. Must travel. Permanent positions in exclusive territory. If you have the proven sales ability to class with topnotchers, we want you. Unusually large commissions, paid on receipt of orders. State qualifications, address, and phone. Address A H 100, Tribune.

ADVERTISING SALESMEN.
Two high class openings for successful, ambitious MEN. This is a strictly high grade proposition, one year old, which has created a sensation in its line. Commissions average $17.50 per order with two sales per day a fair average. While we offer an entire novelty in its line and one which carries unparalleled prestige and sales leverage, only high grade successful men, willing to travel, can qualify. Those who have succeeded with ADVERTISING SERVICE and other highly specialized lines preferred. 707, 122 S. Michigan-av.

HOMES

The worst of the winter is over; time to think of pretty lawns and flowers. Come out now and make a selection for early spring occupancy of one of our real bargains. You can take possession any time before May 1st. No interest to pay till June 1st, no taxes to pay till May, 1918.
A small cash payment and $15 per month and interest secures one of these homes. Some ready now, others will be completed in early spring.
The houses are 5, 6, and 7 rooms, and contain every modern feature, and are complete in all details.
Located at 1708 Arthur-av. Take Clark-st. or Broadway cars or L road to Loyola sta., or C. & N. W. R. R., Kenmore or Rogers Park sta. Also Morse-av., near Edgewater Golf club.
Shall be glad to make an appointment to show you these houses and others which we are building. Also have some very attractive two flat buildings, with sun parlors, at reasonable prices, and on which we will make easy terms.

A FOOD WAR

WHEN YOU STOP TO THINK that the warring nations have taken 30 to 40 million men from usual lines of production and put them into lines of destruction, you will understand why there is a shortage of food production. The European war has become quite as much A FOOD WAR as one of guns and ammunition. And so, America's food makers, the farmers, have been profiting only second to the munition makers.

LAST WEEK PRESIDENT WILSON, in directing an inquiry into the cost of food, wrote that the population of the nation has increased 26 million since 1900, and he showed that the production of food is not keeping pace, and that meat products have decreased 29 pounds per capita yearly consumption. Also during last week the directors of the Chicago Milk Producers' association [membership 12 thousand] prepared to demand an increase of $1.55 to $2 per hundred pounds for milk, which may mean 10c per quart to the consumer. The independent position of the farmer is each season more clearly demonstrated by increasing prices of everything we have to eat. We are all paying tribute to him at the present prices of potatoes, beans, vegetables, fruits, meat, and dairy products.

IT WILL OPEN YOUR EYES if you will send for my free literature and see how high Michigan ranks among the states in the production of the foods above mentioned. You will then see that a large part of the money being spent for food in this central and most populous part of the United States goes to Michigan farmers. My large 72 page book gives various statistics of the counties of Manistee, Mason, Lake, and Wexford, in which the Swigart Tract is located.

AS A WISE PROVISION FOR HIMSELF AND FAMILY, a man cannot do better than acquire some farm land in this tract. It means, first, a safe place to put savings; secondly, a place where savings will increase faster in value than they could earn in savings banks; and thirdly, that good land such as I offer, while being a secure, profitable investment, can be made the support and money earner for your family. The uses of land are manyfold, and now that reasonably priced land is so scarce, we see land owners each year becoming more prosperous and independent. Farming your own land, any good farmer will tell you, is the best way to farm. Give a family the ownership of a home and that family's position in the world is strengthened more than can be done in any other way.

MY PLAN of easy payments puts a farm within reach of most any man earning wages. The prices are not based on future values. You can buy now and share in the increase. The present prices of $15 to $25, and much of the best lying land at $18 per acre, are lower than on lands offered elsewhere. Terms as low as $25 to $100 down and $7 to $10 per month on 40 acres, or annual terms if preferred. With recent additions I offer the largest selection of land in the Michigan Fruit Belt. I give insurance when the land is partly paid for and in case of your death the land is deeded free to your family. Ask about my demonstration farms, 160 acres of apple orchards, six more immense power dams to be built and operated by the Commonwealth Company in the center of this tract. Four hundred men are now building on one of these dams.

RIGHT NOW is a good time to get my literature and commence informing yourself about my lands and district, as spring will soon be here with its annual rise in prices. Drop a postal for my book or call for it if you can; also get a large map and see samples of last year's crops and stereopticon views. Office remains open Monday evenings and Saturday evenings.

GROUND FLOOR

The New Orleans Great Northern Railway opens for farm settlement the immense acreage of the great lumber company lands along its lines in Mississippi and Louisiana.

Growing towns, churches, schools, lumber companies, shipbuilding, turpentine distilleries, pine oil, and paper mills have sprung up all along the line of the railroad, but timber being the chief asset, the land itself regardless of its great agricultural worth has been carried on the books at a mere nominal value.

As the timber is being cut and the stumps and discarded tree trunks and limbs in the logging field are being ground into pulp for pine oil, turpentine, and the manufacture of paper, an immense acreage of virgin land close in to the railroad, towns, factories, churches, and schools is being left for farm occupation.

Unless the railroad settles these lands with farmers it will fail to provide for a chief source of revenue when the timber is gone, and the railroad, with its future means of support materially at stake, will therefore afford every aid in the matter of prices, terms, and co-operation in obtaining settlers on the land.

Write Walter S. Ayres, industrial commissioner N. O. G. N. Ry., 804 McCormick Bldg., Chicago, Ill., how to obtain first hand a desirable farm out of this great body of cheap virgin land.

Texas.

FOR SALE—NEW FARM OPPORTUNITY IN ONE OF THE GREATEST STATES IN THE UNION. A new line of the Santa Fe is tapping a rich and fertile prairie section of Northwest Texas, where already many farmers have MADE GOOD in a big way with wheat, hogs and live stock. Here, if you ACT NOW, you can get first choice—get in on the ground floor of a great opportunity. You can get in AHEAD of the railway—ahead of the people whom the railway will bring—ahead of those who act more slowly than you do. This is the chance of a lifetime for a man of moderate means. A certain number of thrifty, farseeing farmers can acquire good land at an astonishingly low figure and on long, easy terms. If you have confidence that a great railroad, like the Santa Fe, would only recommend what it considers a good thing, and because it wants to see new territory developed and wants newcomers to PROSPER and PRODUCE—then write me TODAY for particulars about this district. Mild climate, social advantages, schools, churches, telephones, good roads. Everything there but enough men with their families. Will you be one of the fortunate firstcomers to reap the advantages of a section that has been minutely inspected by a Santa Fe agricultural agent and pronounced RIGHT? Write me NOW and let me send you a copy of the special illustrated circular we are getting out. C. L. SEAGRAVES, Industrial Commissioner, A. T. & S. F. Ry., 1105 Railway Exchange, Chicago.

FOR SALE—MY TEN THOUSAND ACRE ranch near Houston, Texas, including two thousand head of choice cattle and eight thousand acres of leased land well fenced, improved, plenty of water, some timber, corrals located on railroad, shipping point on premises. General Merchandise Sale.

Disposal of stock in chain of branch stores and warehouses, also all real estate, fixtures, furniture, etc., together with a chain of elevators. An unusual opportunity for buyers desirous of procuring a variety of merchandise at what it will bring at auction.

Notice is hereby given that in obedience to an Order of Sale heretofore entered in this matter by the Hon. William B. C. Brown, Referee in Bankruptcy, dated January 5th, 1917, in the matter of the Ball Manufacturing Company, Bankrupt, I will offer for sale at public auction, for cash, to the highest bidder, on February 23d, 1917, commencing at 10:00 a. m., at the former place of business of the bankrupt in Kansas City, Mo., at 1311-13 West 13th-st., the general merchandise of the bankrupt named, valued at approximately $62,936.32; store furniture and fixtures valued at approximately $11,052.42; real estate and improvements valued at approximately $68,339.14.

A part of this stock is now in a chain of branch stores located as follows: Carthage, Rayville, and Springfield, Missouri; Laverne, Oklahoma; Great Bend, Greensburg, Hutchinson, Larned, Pratt, Plaines, and Salina in the state of Kansas.

Of the above mentioned merchandise, stock to the value of approximately $36,365.25 is in the Kansas City warehouses formerly under the control of the bankrupt. Of the above mentioned value pertaining to store furniture and fixtures, property to the value of approximately $6,983.26 is likewise in these warehouses. The stock represents practically all kinds of merchandise—furniture and household goods, proprietary medicines, laboratory equipments, threshing machine parts and equipments, farm implements, supplies, etc.; vehicles and harness, stoves and hardware, etc.; automobile supplies, groceries, printing plant consisting of type, cases, two Chandler & Price job presses, paper cutter, etc.; one Hudson six cylinder automobile, one Overland automobile, one Kelley auto truck—1½ tons. In addition to the above there is a complete mail order list of approximately 30,000 actual customers, together with electros, etc., that offer an unusual opportunity to a man wishing to engage in the mail order business.

A chain of grain elevators is also part of the assets, located in the following towns: [illegible], Anthony, Alexander, Burrton, Garden City, Kansas; Woodward and Drummond, Oklahoma.

Prospective bidders will please bear in mind that all of the property as set out in the Order of Sale will be sold at Kansas City. The property will first be offered in parcels and thereafter it will be offered in one lot at one time.

Interested parties should apply to undersigned to inspect inventories of merchandise and for copy of Order of Sale and recapitulation of inventory.

JOSEPH M. JONES, Trustee in Bankruptcy,
1311-1313 W. 13th-st., Kansas City, Mo.

DIVORCE SENDS DAUGHTERS TO MOTHER'S ARMS

Georgia Woman's Case Heard by Judge Gridley.

BY AUDRIE ALSPAUGH CHASE

The way of motherhood is very long and often thorn crowned, when it should be haloed with happiness. Daughters who find marriage a failure go back, when they can, to the arms that carried them through all their trials of early days, and so it is that oftentimes mothers who have gone proudly to their daughters' weddings go sadly to their divorces.

In Judge Gridley's court yesterday were some illustrations of this, where mothers by witnessing helped rescue their daughters from wretchedness imposed by mischosen husbands.

A Southern Girl.

Jennie H. Hall was a pretty, slender, dark eyed Georgia girl, speaking in the soft southernism that blends r's and h's.

She told briefly a tale of her husband, Samuel A. Hall's, shortcomings: "He was drunk all the time, and didn't furnish food or clothing," which was corroborated by a gracious, dignified mother, Mrs. Hixson, of 666 Roscoe avenue, and a charming black eyed sister, of marriage, during the last two of Mrs. Pauline Holt. After eight years which her husband was practically under the influence of whisky all the time, it was brought out, the relation was severed and the daughter came home. The judge ordered the case to be written up.

Another Case.

Stately, dignified women, the daughter cast in the mold of her mother, though on smaller lines, were Mrs. Mildred Hotchkiss and Mrs. Bertha P. Winchell of 1506 Jonquil terrace. As Mrs. Hotchkiss, who had charged Lawrence H. with desertion, took the stand, she clutched swiftly a fold of her mother's cloak as she passed her.

For two years the couple had lived at home with the wife's parents and then kept house for a year. And then two years ago the day after Christmas Mr. Hotchkiss "told me he was going away to New York on a trip and left me without any money or plans," explained the wife quietly. Some months after his return he told her over the telephone that "he couldn't support me—take care of me."

Witnesses testified he had had no cause so to treat her; that she had been a faithful and kind wife to him. She was given back her maiden name, Mildred Winchell.

Here's Gasoline That Costs Only Six Cents a Gallon

The Rittman process of transforming petroleum waste into gasoline, benzine, and toluene may act as a check on any movement to increase the prices of these products. Gasoline made by this process costs 6 cents a gallon.

SCHOOL ISSUE TAKES LEAD IN PRIMARY FIGHT

New Plan for Board Forms Aldermen's Friends on New Lines.

Swinging into the last week of the aldermanic primary battle, the school issue will be given the right of way in several of the wards where the fights are hottest.

The proposal to elect members of the school board instead of appointing them, as at present, has stirred the voters to keen interest, particularly in residential districts.

The Thirty-third ward is staging a spectacular battle on this issue. It is the home ward of Ald. Robert M. Buck, who as chairman of the council subcommittee prepared the report recommending the elective school board and helped to push it through the council.

Labor Supports Buck.

Lined up behind Buck is the solid strength of the Chicago Federation of Labor and almost the solid support of the Teachers' federation.

Prominent educators, however, who are opposing the plan to put the school board into ward politics have come out openly against the proposition. Among these is Dr. Rufus A. White, former member of the school board and noted as a lecturer.

Dr. White will lead the fight against Buck in his home ward at a mass meeting Tuesday afternoon at the Plaisance theater, 446 North Parkside avenue.

Buck is engaged in a hand to hand encounter with Irwin R. Hazen, former alderman, who was defeated by Buck two years ago. Hazen has the backing of the city hall forces, but the citizens who see peril in the elective school board have put aside their attitude toward city hall politics, holding that, regardless of Hazen's backing, the issue is of such great importance that the voters should defeat Buck.

The Keynote Address.

Dr. White is expected to deliver the keynote address on this issue, which will be exploited in several other wards in the final days of the pre-primary canvass.

The same issue is coming to the surface in the Seventh ward, where the public school champions opposed to the elective plan are backing William R. Fetzer against Ald. Charles E. Merriam.

Ald. Merriam collaborated with Ald. Buck in framing the elective plan at several secret meetings, one of which was held at the City club. Subsequently he aided Buck in getting the recommendation through the council.

Merriam's Strength Important.

Fetzer has made this the paramount issue in the big university ward. Any one less prominent than Merriam in the ward, the leaders report, would be snowed under by Fetzer. They unite in declaring that on a straight referendum with no other issues involved, the elective school board scheme would be defeated more than two to one in the ward. Merriam, they concede, is infinitely stronger than his elective school board issue, and a close race is forecast.

In the river wards and the west side where the Teachers' federation, as typified by Margaret Haley, and the Chicago Federation of Labor are strongest, the elective proposal has a better chance, according to late reports to the managing committees.

In the Fifth ward, for instance, where Ald. Thomas Doyle is backing J. B. McDonough, the elective plan is popular.

Another sizzling battle is on in the Third ward where the city hall forces, despite the mayor's statement that he would keep out of the aldermanic campaign, are mobilizing to defeat Ald. Edwin J. Werner, backed by the reform forces.

Patterson Re-enters Fight.

Frederick W. Patterson, who was backed by the hall a year ago, is out again with the same backing, plus the support of Robert Levy, a former Deneen leader.

The possibility of defeating Werner for the renomination has aroused the civic forces, and plans are being made to stir the war with public appeals to the voters to stand by him. Ald. A. A. McCormick of the Sixth ward, who has no opposition this year, will lead a battery of spellbinders in the Werner ward in support of the alderman.

The city hall forces also have failed to keep their hands off in the Thirty-first ward, where the old Deneen-Thompson feud is on again.

Ald. Kearns, also held to be one of the valuable members of the council by the reform leaders, is opposed by David Roller, picked a year ago by the hall forces to lead the Thompson fight there.

Dr. Reid Manages Campaign.

Smoke inspector Dr. W. H. Reid is handling the hall's fight against Kearns. Recently Reid offered to back Kearns for city treasurer if he would quit the aldermanic race. Kearns refused and Reid, as committeeman of the ward, sounded the bugle and the city hall organization responded almost to a man against Kearns.

Outside of these wards there is hardly a new man seeking a seat in the city council who is known outside of his precinct.

With three or four exceptions, however, all of the retiring aldermen who are seeking renomination are expected to be renominated, so that the tickets that will go to the voters on April 3 will present about the same lineup as the present council.

On the Democratic side the big fight is in the Twenty-first ward, where the Geiger and O'Malley factions are at one another's throats. Ald. Geiger has the backing of the Quinn and Harrison forces, while the Sullivan-O'Malley forces are behind Bernard Conlon.

Republicans See Hope.

Robert Hall McCormick Jr. is the only Republican candidate in this ward. The Republican leaders see a good chance to elect him, as the Geiger-O'Malley feud is expected to split the Democratic vote in the final election.

One of the storm centers following the primary will be in the Twenty-seventh ward, where Ald. John C. Kennedy, the Socialist, is up for reëlection. His recent utterances denouncing the government for its attitude toward Germany and contending that the Socialists would be warranted in starting a "revolution" here at home, if they used the same arguments the government did, has aroused the women voters of the ward.
